But School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said when the schools were renovated, a promise was made to the community that they would never fall into disrepair. "We made a huge promise and commitment to keep them up," she said.

Walsh said Facilities Manager Brian Adams will be speaking with Town Manager Bill Griffin on the matter.

A second measure being considered is to ask the Cohasset Educational Foundation for roughly $40,000 to help pay for software and hardware for computers. By receiving money from that group, $40,000 could be deducted from the supplies and materials budget, currently listed at $493,961.

"We made a huge promise and commitment to keep them up."

— Adrienne MacCarthy, on proposed maintenance cuts

The local sports booster clubs may also be asked to help support the high school teams if $30,000 is cut from the athletic budget. In the past, Walsh said boosters have been asked to subsidize aspects of the sports program, and that may happen again.

With a decrease in the maintenance budget, requests to the CEF and cuts to the athletic budget, the first tier of cuts would yield an additional $110,000 for the schools to work with, bringing down the requested operational budget increase to 2.9 percent.

The next tier of cuts would begin with a math teacher, which the department had hoped to add to the staff this year. With the increase in enrollment at the high school, an additional math teacher would have provided more variety for students, including more electives. Without the position, the school budget will decrease by $45,000. In addition, if the teacher is not added to the staff, the new textbooks for the classes will not be required, yielding another $6,000.

Walsh said originally she had wanted to cut the position of middle school guidance counselor, which has become a necessity with the amount of children who are currently in the district. However, after speaking with the school administrators, they asked her to consider eliminating three paraprofessional positions in order to retain the guidance position. The cuts for the three aides would net $51,000, for a total second tier cost cut of $102,000, reducing the school budget to a $251,622 increase, or roughly 2.1 percent.

With the two tiers of cuts, the budget will match up roughly with the amount the town is suggesting for an increase. However, if a way to pay for the out-of-district special tuitions cannot be found, such as if an override does not pass, Walsh has prepared additional suggestions with a third tier.

The third round of cuts would eliminate the middle school guidance position, freeing up $45,000. In addition, by eliminating one teacher each from grades one, two, and three, the schools would have an additional $135,000 to work with. Two of the three teaching positions were funded the year before with funds raised by concerned members of the community. One last measure of cuts would be $20,000 to the supplies and materials budget, bringing bring the budget down to a $51,622 total operational budget increase, or roughly .04 percent.

If other cuts are required and the schools are asked to absorb the tuition costs, "It'll be staff cuts and shut off the lights," said Walsh, which really isn't an option.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said the issue of out-of-district placements needs to be solved, otherwise all the suggested cuts won't matter because layoffs will need to take place.

But even with the proposed cuts, Walsh said there is a position she will need an increase in funding for, and that is the Financial Assistant. Karen Park has resigned from her position and Walsh said in her advertising for the position, she had increased the salary by $20,000, "Knowing how hard it is to find a qualified person." Walsh added she has received five responses for the position so far.

"We can't function without a business manager," Walsh said, adding with all the things an individual is required to be responsible for, including procurement laws and liability issues, there are many aspects of the job a financial assistant cannot do. In light of that, Walsh said she would like to advertise the position at roughly $80,000 per year, or at least the high $70,000 range. There is already $60,000 allocated for the position, but there will be some shifting of funds necessary to make up the difference.

School board may see race

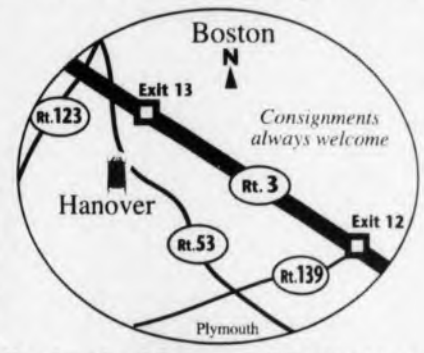
munity. We need transparency in our dealings and we should all be working together for the good of our main product, the students," she said.

Also up for the one-year seat is Pamela Wilson of North Main Street. "I have twin 12-year-old boys in the middle school, I have the time and inclination to get involved with the schools and make a difference," said Wilson, who pulled her papers a couple of weeks ago. "I'm doing it because I want to be involved."

The one-year seat will fill out the remainder of Chartis Tebbetts' term. Tebbetts recently resigned from the School Committee.

Alfred Slanetz of Nichols Road took out papers Wednesday for the three-year-seat on the School Committee. Those who attend School Committee meetings regularly or watch on television may have seen him sitting in the front row on a number of occasions.



Chris Allen of Pleasant Street, who is coming to the end of a one-year term on the Cohasset Housing Authority, also pulled papers for the three-year-seat on the School Committee this week. He has also pulled papers for a seat on the Housing Authority. According to the Town Clerk's office, Allen is considering running for both, but it will require Town Counsel's opinion to determine whether he can hold positions on both boards.

In other election news, Dan Evans of Howard Gleason Road has pulled papers for the position of Town Moderator, and could run against incumbent George Marlette who has pulled papers as well. Marlette has held the position for the past 13 years and has always run uncontested.

There could also be a four-way race for two seats on the Board of Selectmen.

Candidates must return their signed nomination papers by 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Unsung hero honored as top citizen

Coe, 83, who is soft-spoken and full of humor, once flew gliders in wartime – a duty that was often deadly. Coe, a decorated veteran earning an Air Medal with two clusters among other citations, saw action in France, Germany and Africa during World War II.

"I wanted to be a paratrooper," Coe quips. "But when I went to sign up – I was told I was too damn skinny and that I'd go up instead of down."

A past Citizen of the Year and longtime volunteer at the Senior Center, Anna Abbruzzese sums Coe up in a few words. "He's a jewel," she says.

She said Coe, who has served on the Council of Elder Affairs board, has a knack for making people feel comfortable.

"He's always there at the Senior Center spreading his good humor, which he has a lot of," Abbruzzese says. "I'm delighted he's been chosen as Citizen of the Year.

"When you think what he went through in World War II and survived – he's truly one of the Greatest Generation and we are lucky to have him."

Coe is a familiar figure at the Senior Center, especially on Thursdays, when he volunteers to help serve lunch to his peers. "I get a kick out of waiting on table," he says.

Carol Barrett, outreach coordinator for the Council on Elder Affairs which runs the Senior Center programs, says Coe is an invaluable volunteer who makes the center a comfortable place for the town's older citizens.

"His service helps make the Senior Center a place where people come and meet friends," says Barrett. "John is very friendly and outgoing, always with a funny story to tell. Nothing seems to bother him."

Coe lives on Pond Street with Marcia, his wife of 47 years. They have two children: a daughter, Mary Connolly, and a son, Charles Coe, an optometrist, who is a major in the U.S. Army. The Coes have three grandchildren.

The couple moved to Cohasset back in 1969 to be closer to John's work that was based in Braintree. Shortly thereafter, Coe went into business for himself as a manufacturer's representative in the retail and commercial lighting industry. Coe, who grew up in New Jersey, loves his adopted hometown.

Coe said once he retired, he became "Mr. Itch" and began helping out where he could.

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Citizen of the Year, John Coe, stands by the office of the Council on Elder Affairs where he volunteers much of his time. Coe is the 12th person to hold Citizen of the Year honors.

One of his retirement jobs that he much enjoys is serving as an escort on Mondays at South Shore Hospital. "Wherever I'm needed, I help people out," Coe says.

He jokes that one of the best parts of his service at the hospital is the free lunch, which is delicious.

"When you think what he went through in World War II and survived, he's truly one of the Greatest Generation and we are lucky to have him."

— Anna Abbruzzese, fellow volunteer

Diane Downs, manager of volunteer services at South Shore Hospital, says Coe has been volunteering at the hospital since 1997 and has donated more than 2,000 service hours. She says Coe has a big heart and is totally dedicated and dependable.

"He gives completely from his heart, he's professional and his attendance is impeccable," Downs says. "He has a wonderful mix of warmth and wit and he is true gentleman.

"He's everything we look for whether recruiting volunteers or training new volunteers."

The annual Citizen of the Year selection process begins in November when nomination ballots start appearing in the Cohasset Mariner. Nominations close the first week in January and the Citizen is named in February after a selection committee meets to review the candidates.

Cohasset residents, Merle Brown, Joe Nedrow, Howie Altholz, and Chartis Tebbetts joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 16 nominations.

The field was narrowed from 16 to 10, then to five and three and finally to a single one, John Coe. The committee noted Coe is truly an "unsung hero" to many including the acquaintances he meets every week at South Shore Hospital where he touches their lives with his humor and generosity of spirit.

A reception will be held in Coe's honor at the Cohasset Harbor Inn this spring on a date to be announced.

In addition to his other volunteer works noted in this story, Coe is chairman of TRIAD, a special program that provides safety checks for senior citizens, and is a member of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and historical society. He also serves as a volunteer escort when the Bloodmobile comes to town.

He's also a member of the "Old Goats" a group of retired men who meet twice a month for lunch and conversation. Coe knows when the word gets out about his "Citizen" honors, the other Old Goats will have a lot to say. "They'll give me the needle," he quips.

Many fine citizens were nominated for annual award

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Mariner received 16 nominations for its annual Citizen of the Year Award submitted by 21 individuals.

A selection committee consisting of Chartis Tebbetts of Jerusalem Road Drive; Merle Brown of Beechwood Street; Howie Altholtz of Cedarledge Lane ; Joe Nedrow of Fairoaks Lane, and Mariner editor Mary Ford selected John Coe of Pond Street as this year's Citizen of the Year.

Mr. Coe is the 12th Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year. The Mariner, which began the annual recognition in 1993, asks for nominations for the annual recognition starting the end of November each year. Nominations close the first week in January and the Citizen is named in February.

The other nominees this year were:

• Mary Brennock for her enthusiastic and loving portrayal as "Mrs. Claus" over the years and for her involvement with children's programs at the South Shore Community Center.

• Michael Buckley for being a steady force and keeping the town on track during his service as acting Town Manager; for dealing with employees and the public with much patience and concern during a difficult time in town.

• Joe Campbell for being a true "community supporter." Through Atlantica where he is director of operations, he supports the community through senior banquets, gift certificates for charities, affordable sports banquets, Chamber of Commerce meetings and much more.

• The Cohasset Board of Health and Social Service League for managing the flu shots during this year's vaccine shortage.

• Jacqueline Dormitzer for the pride and sense of history she has instilled in Cohasset residents both through her writing and extensive research, and her efforts to preserve the best of Cohasset.

• Judith Fitzsimmons a devoted wife, mother and grandmother for her dedication and commitment to administering to a diverse population as the town's Public Health Nurse.

• Tom Gruber a smart and concerned citizen who stays on top of the issues regarding Greenbush and for his work with the historical society and Rotary.

• George Haley for his tireless efforts on behalf of senior citizens and for always being happy and willing to assist anyone at the Senior Center. He also spends endless hours placing flags on all the veterans graves.

• Herb Jason for his relentless dedication in the construction of the Minot Light Replica, the Lightkeepers Memorial, his service as an associate member of the Historical Commission, and for his years as a lobsterman, who has always added to the fabric of the community.

• George Lane Marlette for his unfailing accessibility to all and generosity of his time and advice as the Town Moderator. For fielding the "ayes and nays" in an equitable manner and pattern of fairness; for his good judgment and respectful demeanor.

• John K. McNabb Jr. for his dedication to the environment in the interest of protecting the water supply and for his commitment to the position of Water Commissioner.

• Arthur "Hap" Pompeo and Larry Vangel for manifesting in their daily dealings with the community friendliness, honesty, decency, generosity and acceptance and respect for all persons no matter what their social background.

• Marjorie Steele for her tireless service as director of the Cohasset Food Pantry and behind-the-scenes dedication to the people of the community in need of food and personal care items. For many years, she has carried out her duties in a discrete, kind and compassionate manner.

• Hubert van der Lugt for embracing his adopted country and town and contributing his talents and energies in many areas including building a successful business, service on the Historical Commission, Historic District Commission, as a trustee to Wheelwright Farm and more.

• Larry Vangel for sharing a laugh, being helpful, and quietly helping his fellow townspeople. For most of his life he has been "the wind beneath the wings" of so many lives and for epitomizing all the things that make Cohasset a community.

John Coe, the 12th Citizen of the Year, joins prior honorees: Gerard Keating, Joe Buckley, Robert Sceery, Gary Ritts, Anna Abbruzzese, Katherine Stanton, Clark Chatterton, Mary Jeanette Murray, Glenn Pratt, Arthur Lehr and Marjorie Murphy.

Flurry of thanks for blizzard help

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh would like to extend her thanks to the many people who helped out during the "Blizzard of 2005." Walsh said compared with the Blizzard of '78, it was a much different situation, because with the previous storm, "We knew we were closed." However, with this recent storm, which hit in two separate phases, "It was a difficult week because of the uncertainty," she said.

Walsh commended the Department of Public Works for "working around the clock with minimal staff," and said even with some machinery breaking, they were outstanding. In addition, she praised new Facilities Manager Brian Adams for his dedication, as he was at the school during the blizzard at 2:30 a.m. plowing the parking lots. Using the utility vehicle which was purchased with funds allocated by voters at the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting, Adams kept busy clearing the lots as the snow continued to fall. However, with drifts reaching between 10 and 12 feet behind the Osgood School, it did take crews a little while to dig out, which caused the delays in the schools being reopened.

Walsh said currently, the schools have used the maximum number of snow days allowable. To make those days up, it looks right now as if the school year could run until June 29. However, she said it is still very early in the winter to have used all the snow days, and if the district is required to take any more, the calendar will need to be modified.

The School Committee voted to make up some time lost during the blizzard during the Friday, March 18 professional development day. Instead of all teachers participating, one designated teacher from each grade level will participate and report back to the other teachers. Substitutes will be called in for those teachers who attend, and the program will be opened up to teachers from surrounding districts. Because the school had contracted with the company providing the training, it could not be cancelled.

In addition, the School Committee voted to make the Good Friday holiday a half day, which will count toward the number of days school is in service, but will still provide students and their families with an opportunity to attend church services in the afternoon.

Walsh said other communities have considered taking time from the February and April vacation weeks to make up the snow days, but Cohasset will not. She said she well aware families make plans long in advance, and she does not wish to interfere with those plans.

Walsh is a member of the Lighthouse Association of Superintendents, and she said many superintendents in coastal communities are considering petitioning for a snow day waiver. She said because a state of emergency was declared during the blizzard and state workers were advised not to report to work on Monday and Tuesday (Jan. 24 and 25) it was obviously not safe to open up the schools. "It would be nice if they would give us an extra day or two," she said.

Walsh said she will be in contact with superintendents in neighboring communities to see how they will be dealing with the situation. She has drafted some potential calendars for next year, which include changes to ensure even with some snow, students are not in school until late June. However, that would require students returning to school potentially the first week in September, prior to Labor Day, which with the late dismissal this year would make for a short summer vacation. The committee will discuss next year's school calendar at upcoming meetings.

Changes in watershed won't affect Little Harbor sewer

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town will submit a schedule for sewering homes in the Little Harbor watershed to the Department of Environmental Protection for its review, which will make some Cohasset residents very happy. However, still others might be uneasy at the prospect of hearing the definition of the watershed has changed. That means some connections may not be mandatory from the state.

But town officials say the decision to sewer all of Little Harbor is still on track, and even without a mandate from the state. All the homes which were told they would receive a sewer connection, will still be included in the project.

"I've certainly learned over the last few weeks just how important a project this is," said Town Manager Bill Griffin, who assured the Board of Selectmen Tuesday he would work with the state to ensure all homes within the Little Harbor area of town receive the same treatment. He said while formally, the state is only requiring the town to sewer within the watershed, it does not take away the town's promise to other residents in the area.

The DEP asked the town to define the Little Harbor watershed because the Second Amended Final Judgment only requires the town sewer those homes. The Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, and the town reached an agreement with the state to supply modern wastewater treatment. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment. Since then, the town has been working on a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor area of town.

Residents in the Little Harbor area have been waiting for sewer to be extended to their neighborhoods for years, in the hopes of evading mandatory inspections and upgrades of on-site systems. With a set plan and sewer connections on the way, homeowners in the area would be given amnesty from upgrading sewer systems, regardless of whether they intend to sell.

The sewer project has become the focus of many contentious debates, especially since a citizens' petition was floated for the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting. Voters ultimately approved the article, and the town was directed to add a sewering schedule into the Judgment. Residents felt by incorporating a schedule into the Judgment, it would formalize the town's commitment to the project.

In light of the Town Meeting vote, several town officials held a powwow with the DEP Jan. 21 to talk about the town's plans to tackle its wastewater problems in the Little Harbor area. Griffin said as a result of that meeting, the town was asked to answer two questions: what is the town's definition of the Little Harbor watershed, and what is the town's tentative schedule for sewering the Little Harbor watershed.

In order to provide the state with the correct information, Griffin said he convened a meeting with Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, Daniel Coughlin of Tutela Engineering, the Sewer Commission's engineering consultants, Health Board Chairman Steve Bobo, and Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

Griffin said the Wastewater Management Plan compiled by Tutela was essential in helping move the process along. He said information in the report gave details regarding which homes are in the watershed and a final count of 378 units that will be required to hook up. Griffin said it is important to note the number the town is working with is units, not parcels. He said because there are condominiums in the watershed, counting six units as one parcel to be connected does not make sense.

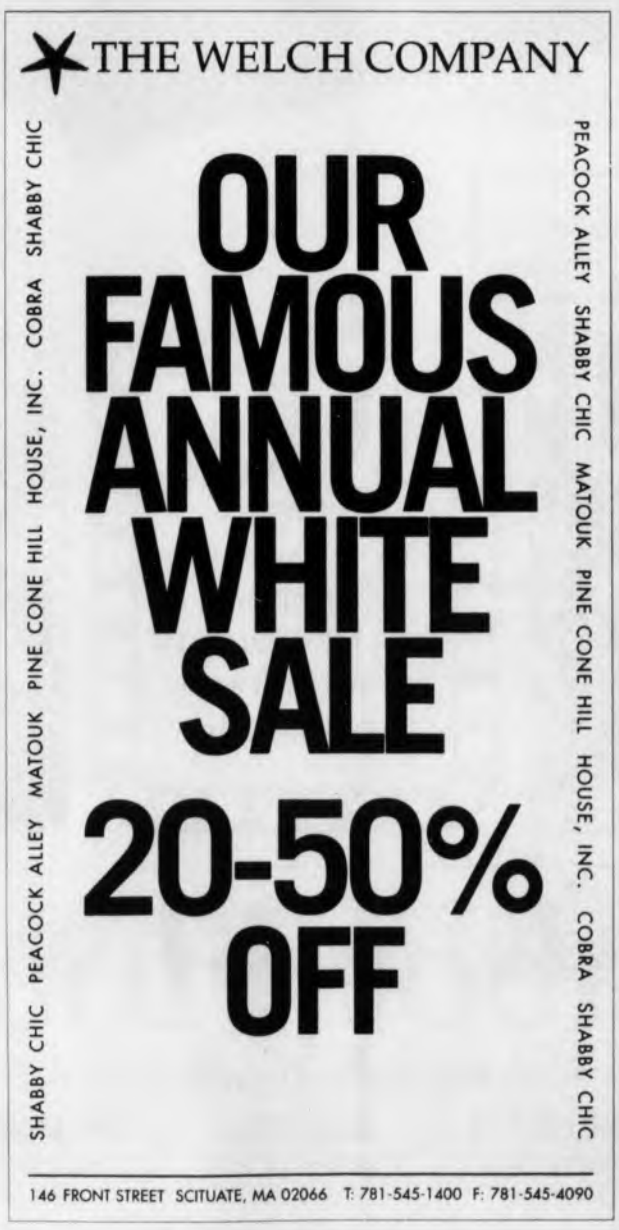
However, Griffin reiterated he fully recognizes the promise the town has made to homeowners in all of Little Harbor and said those homes which are not in the watershed but have been part of the plans to install sewer will receive connections. He said he will serve as the negotiator on behalf of the town and the agreement with the state will be flexible enough that the town include more than its required connections to the project plans.

Griffin said it is important for the town to provide the DEP with the information it is requesting as soon as possible, as it is going to be important to secure funds in a timely fashion in order to begin the permitting process and secure construction plans for next spring.

"This does not rule out acting on it in a few weeks," at Town Meeting, he said, when an article requesting funding for the sewer project may be voted on. "The town reserves the right to do more and to do it quicker," he said, adding the town will make sure it has the option completing the project all at once or in phases.

Griffin has been authorized by the Board of Selectmen to send a letter to the DEP answering its questions as well as maps of the watershed and a proposed schedule for sewering. The schedule is the same schedule suggested by Tutela in its wastewater plan. Griffin was authorized to begin negotiations with the state after motion was passed at the Feb. 1 meeting of the board.

The motion stated, "The Town Manager, with the assistance of Town Counsel and the town's engineers, in consultation with the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health and the Sewer Commission, be authorized to explore with the Department of Environmental Protection possible language to amend the Second Amended Final Judgment to include both a schedule for the sewering of Little Harbor and the specifics of reciprocal benefits to the town of Cohasset."



Griffin said in light of the motion, his discussions with the DEP are only that, and nothing has been set in stone. He and other town officials will meet with the DEP again Tuesday, Feb. 22.

EDITORIAL

An unsung hero

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that John Coe of Pond Street is the Citizen of the Year. The 83-year-old Cohasset resident has touched countless lives through his outgoing, friendly manner and sense of humor which he readily shares with one and all.

Those who love the Senior Center, worry about the well-being of our older citizens, or anyone who has had to visit South Shore Hospital on a Monday may have benefited from John quiet congeniality over the years.

Whether you're visiting Cohasset for the first time and meet our "Town Crier," so ably and warmly portrayed by John at the Village Fair year after year – or are a regular at the Senior Center lunch on Thursdays, you haven't gone away without a smile after a little small talk.

He was gracious in accepting the honor, which will be formally presented at a reception in the spring.

"I was surprised and very pleased," he says.

A total of 21 different individuals took the time to propose a citizen for the annual award, detailing the nominees' contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

The selection committee consisting of Chartis Tebbetts, Howie Altholtz, Merle Brown, Joe Nedrow and myself met at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the heartfelt letters of nomination. The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the very deserving candidates.

Tom Healy says it best in his nomination. "John is a very quiet and all-around great guy," he wrote.

And Tom knows that better than anyone. The two men are now "old" friends having gotten acquainted when their sons became pals as youngsters. When Tom's wife, Josephine, became ill – John would stop by every week with a lunch from the Senior Center where he volunteers as a server on Thursdays.

Anna Abbruzzese, a past Citizen of the Year and fellow Senior Center volunteer, describes John in three simple words. "He's a jewel," she says.

Anna also points out that John, a glider pilot in World War II, is truly a member of the Greatest Generation. "We are lucky to have him," she says.

So here at the Mariner we extend our warm congratulations to John, who is still actively engaged in the community he loves. We are also pleased for his family, his wife Marcia, son Charles who is a major in the U.S. Army, and their daughter Mary and her husband Joe. John and Marcia also have three grandchildren, Stephen, Kevin and Christine Connolly.

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock stars or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Hire Chief Hussey for permanent post

TO THE EDITOR:

I've often thought that we as a Town have a tendency to form committees and study to the point of tedium some things that should be a no-brainer.

The most recent example of this in my opinion is the notion that we should conduct interviews for the position of Police Chief. In the brief time that Chief Hussey has been on the job, he has brought about many positive changes in the Department. We no longer have cruisers with dark tinted glass. The SWAT uniforms have disappeared. We have had a town-wide survey in an attempt to address the concerns of the community. The Chief has been to many meetings to hear first-hand what people in Cohasset want and expect from their Police Department. The Chief has even pulled over on his way in to work to direct traffic!

No interview process can compare with Chief Hussey's performance and impact on the Police Department over the last few months. Anyone who is happy with the Chief's performance and the positive impact he has had on the department has interviewed Chief Hussey. Anyone who attended any of the functions he has appeared at has interviewed him. Chief Hussey seems to have the right mix of humor, fairness, and commitment the job requires. Let's skip the interviews and hire Jim Hussey as the full time Police Chief.

Kudos for contributors

TO THE EDITOR:

Watching the board of Selectmen meeting Tuesday night, I was impressed by the savvy and energy displayed by Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, and it made me think of the many citizens who contribute their time and energy responsibly on the various boards, committees and organizations that serve us. We may not always agree with their judgments , and can get bent out of shape particularly when their cost predictions are off, but sensible people appreciate their efforts and understand the difficulties of being close to perfect.

Thinking about these good people also stimulates my irritation with the perennial stone throwers and handwringers. The extent of their ire usually is inversely proportional to their grasp of the issue and all relevant factors.

HEALTH NOTES

Tips to help avoid the stomach flu

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Going on a Cruise?

Each year millions of U.S. citizens enjoy cruise vacations. In 2003, approximately 8.3 million passengers embarked from North American ports for their cruise vacation (from Cruise Lines International Association). Traveling on cruise ships exposes people to new environments and high volumes of people, including other travelers. Although an infrequent occurrence, this exposure creates the risk for illness, either from contaminated food, water or more commonly through person to person contact.

Wash your hands! The single most important activity a cruise passenger can engage in to prevent the spread of Norwalk-like virus, also called viral gastroenteritis, is frequent and proper hand washing. Before and after eating, smoking, after touching your face, going to the bathroom; any time when your hands are dirty. It's a good idea to wash your hands upon returning to your cabin and frequently throughout the day even if you think they don't need to be washed. The proper way to wash is: Wet hands with warm water. Apply a generous amount of soap and lather hands well. Rub hands together for 20 seconds, paying special attention to the areas between fingers and under nails. Rinse hands thoroughly with warm water. Dry hands with a disposable towel. Use the disposable towel to turn off the faucet and open the door.

Other Precautions Leave the area if you see someone get sick (vomiting or diarrhea). Report to cruise staff, if not already notified. You could become sick if you ingest contaminated particles that travel through the air.

Take care of yourself. Get plenty of rest, drink lots of water. Resting helps rebuild your immune system. Drinking water helps prevents dehydration.

Be considerate of other people's health. If you're ill before taking a cruise, call the cruise line to determine if there are alternative cruising options.

What is Viral Gastroenteritis? Gastroenteritis means inflammation of the stomach and small and large intestines. Viral gastroenteritis is a contagious infection caused by a variety of viruses that results in vomiting or diarrhea. It is often called the "stomach flu," although it is not caused by the influenza viruses. The main symptoms are watery diarrhea and vomiting. The affected person may also have headache, fever, and abdominal cramps ("stomach ache"). In general, the symptoms begin 1 to 2 days following infection with a virus that causes gastroenteritis and may last for 1 to 10 days, depending on which virus causes the illness.

For most people, viral gastroenteritis is not a serious illness. People who get it almost always recover completely without any long-term problems. Gastroenteritis is a serious illness, however, for persons who are unable to drink enough fluids to replace what they lose through vomiting or diarrhea. Infants, young children, and persons who are unable to care for themselves, such as the disabled or elderly, are at risk for dehydration from loss of fluids. Immune compromised persons are at risk for dehydration because they may get a more serious illness, with greater vomiting or diarrhea. They may need to be hospitalized for treatment to correct or prevent dehydration.

Viral gastroenteritis affects people in all parts of the world. Each virus has its own seasonal activity. For example, in the United States, rotavirus and astrovirus infections occur during the cooler months of the year (October to April), whereas adenovirus infections occur throughout the year. Viral gastroenteritis outbreaks can occur in institutional settings, such as schools, child care facilities, and nursing homes, and can occur in other group settings, such as banquet halls, cruise ships, dormitories, and campgrounds.

Treatment Treating viral gastroenteritis includes rest and rehydration by drinking fluids and to prevent severe loss of fluids (dehydration). There is no vaccine or medicine currently available that prevents viral gastroenteritis. A vaccine is being developed, however, that protects against severe diarrhea from rotavirus infection in infants and young children. Medications, including antibiotics (which have no effect on viruses) and other treatments, should be avoided unless specifically recommended by a physician.

The CDC's Vessel Sanitation Program (VSP) helps the cruise industry to control and prevent the spread of gastrointestinal illnesses aboard cruise ships and assists them in monitoring ships if they have an outbreak. VSP protects passenger and crew health through sanitation inspections, disease surveillance and investigations, onsite inspections of new ship construction and renovation and reviewing construction plans for new ships. VSP also trains crew in proper public health techniques including food handling and preparation, drinkable water system management, and pool and spa operation and maintenance. VSP posts inspection scores and outbreak information on the VSP Web site: http://www.cdc.gov/nceh/vsp/default.htm

Citizen petition zoning article explained

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN, MARK DEGIACOMO & RICK SWANBORG

As members of the citizens' group who has put forward some zoning articles for the upcoming Town Meeting, we'd like to give a brief explanation of these articles.

All derive out of the letter and/or spirit of the Master Plan. Together with other articles that have come to Town Meeting before, the overall goal of these articles is to provide the Town with new tools to address new growth and development challenges and meet the mandate that you the people of the Town gave to those of us who worked on the Master Plan – to preserve the character of the Town.

Demolition Delay Bylaw – The citizens' petition and that of the Historical Commission are identical and will be combined. This returns after being withdrawn during last spring's town meeting after some debate. This year, it is proposed as a zoning, rather than non-zoning, bylaw, to allow the Bldg. Inspector to legally enforce it.

There are 6 categories of buildings that can be subject to this bylaw. The first three are buildings on a national, state or local (the "HT" buildings) register of historic buildings. The next three involve buildings that are over 100 years old (up from 50 years from last year's version) and which are found to by the Historical Commission to have some historical or architectural significance. Not all buildings over 100 years old are thus affected.

This bylaw simply delays, but does not prohibit, the teardown of a historically significant building. During the period of delay, its goal is that some mutually advantageous solution that preserves the building can be found. Over 200 municipalities in Massachusetts have some form of this bylaw.

Large Home Amendment – This bylaw setting out a review process for homes that meet a certain threshold in size and bulk was passed last spring. It was intended to address the issue of teardowns and mansionization, which you the community identified as a big issue in the Master Plan surveys, and have remarked upon at meetings for projects such as 3 Jerusalem Ln., 150 N. Main and Whitehead Rd. In a compromise with opponents of this and many other innovative solutions that the Master Plan proponents are trying to bring forward, this bylaw was watered down to where it has no teeth, and it is merely providing notice to abutters and a discussion.

After a year in practice, we believe teeth are needed. Thus, this amendment seeks to return to the original draft and make this review a special permit process, under which a proposed building that even complies with conventional dimensional zoning would be reviewed as to whether it is "substantially more detrimental to the neighborhood". This standard is applied often throughout Cohasset due to our substantial number of non-conforming lots.

This special permit review process is a very familiar, longstanding and workable process and standard of review, employed under all communities' zoning bylaws. It is not impossibly subjective or susceptible to abuse any more than any other special permit process has been during decades of applications and case law. A reminder a) that a house must be quite large to be subject to this bylaw – at least 3500 sq. ft. and in some cases as large as 6000 sq. ft., and b) that this bylaw does not prohibit such homes, but only regulates them.

After a year in practice, we believe teeth are needed.

Section 8 Amendments (incompletely identified as New Construction Bylaw) – Section 8 of the Zoning Bylaw governs non-conforming lots and structures only, but of which we have many. This proposal has not come forward before, due to more compromise with opponents, but needs to come forward. These proposed changes address situations that arose out of the 3 Jerusalem Ln. project and elsewhere – the initial decision not to hold a special permit hearing, the later decision to do so, the still-present dispute amongst town officials and others over when special permit hearings should be held, and the disputes that sometimes arose during the hearings as to which portion of Sect. 8 governed the case.

The purpose of this proposal, then, is to avoid future controversy surrounding Section 8 as much of as possible by the addition of definitions distinguishing specific construction scenarios, and then more clearly defining what rules apply to these different construction scenarios. The intended result, going forward, is that Section 8.3 will govern new construction, 8.7 additions to and tear-downs of existing buildings, and 8.9 reconstruction due to casualty loss. It is also intended to counter the Bldg. Inspector's interpretation, that we (and the ZBA) believe is legally incorrect, and require a special permit hearing with notice to abutters in all instances where there is an enlargement of a structure on a non-conforming lot.

Earth Removal Bylaw Replacement – Our current earth removal bylaw, Section 11 of the Zoning Bylaw, is of limited scope. Attempts had been made recently to amend the bylaw by adding "ledge protection" provisions. These efforts received majorities, but not the necessary two-thirds majority. The purpose of this proposal is to replace the existing earth removal bylaw to incorporate the purpose of the previously proposed "ledge" bylaws. (It also carries over the existing earth removal limits). But also, since the character of the land, of thus of the Town, can be as much affected by grading and filling activities as by simply the removal of ledge or earth, the intent of this bylaw is to create a broader and more comprehensive protection against all forms of potentially adverse site alteration done in connection with construction of buildings and structures only. There is no intent to regulate maintenance of your existing yards or property. The goal is to create a broader land alteration bylaw that does not focus simply on one aspect of the landscape, like ledge, but addresses all aspects of the landscape, and also addition, as well as removal, of material to a site.

Scenic Road Bylaw – This is not proposed in connection with some particular recent case or pressing issue. It is based on a model bylaw that exists in some form in many communities across the state. It is proposed as another arrow to have in the quiver of protection of the Town's character. This bylaw offers protections to stone walls and trees only that lie within a road's right of way. (Often, people think that part of their lawns or walls are on their property, but in fact may be on the Town's property, since rights of way are usually broader than the width of the actual pavement). We know of some people that would like to protect more, like views, but that is another issue completely. So this bylaw is limited in its reach, but offers protections we presently do not have. The bylaw sets out a public hearing process for a road to be designated as a scenic road, but no such designations are proposed as part of this article.

Tom Callahan, Mark DeGiacomo & Rick Swanborg are all Cohasset residents. Callahan is a former selectman and conservation commissioner, DeGiacomo is a former member of the Zoning Board of Appeals and School Committee, and Rick Swanborg chaired the Growth and Development Committee.

On merit pay for teachers: Yes!

COMMENTARY

PATRICIA MCGRAIL & EDWARD LEONARD

The Cohasset Teachers Association read, with interest, Mr. Joe McElroy's opinion piece in the Jan. 28, Cohasset Mariner in which he pointed to the importance of putting "merit" into the teacher contract. While you did not spell out exactly how he would to this, we think that the matter certainly should be explored.

We too have been looking at pay for performance. Here's what we've discovered.

Cohasset schools have been out performing over 95 percent of the school systems in Massachusetts, as judged by student performance on standardized tests such as MCAS, SATI and SATII and by placement in elite colleges.

Cohasset schools have been out performing over 95 percent of the school systems in Massachusetts...

Average teacher salaries, as reported in a study by Boston Magazine, show that Cohasset teachers earn, on average $50,448. Similarly, the average teacher salary for the other top performing school districts is well over $60,000.

Were Cohasset teachers to be pegged to any of the standard indices of merit, the average pay would need to be increased $10,000. This would mean that in addition to the average raise negotiated by comparably performing school districts over the next three years (figures that are roughly between 2.5 percent and 4.5 percent a year) Cohasset would need to add no less than a 10 percent boost.

To the extent that Mr. McElroy supports this true merit pay for Cohasset teachers, we the Cohasset Teachers Association embrace his suggestion.

Patricia McGrail is CTA President and Edward Leonard, is Negotiations Chairperson.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Shadd announces her campaign for selectman

Long-time Cohasset resident Deborah A. ("Debbie") Shadd has officially announced her candidacy for Selectman in the Town election scheduled for April 9. Shadd, who served two terms on Cohasset's Advisory Committee, submitted her nomination papers to the Town Clerk this week.

Commenting on her candidacy, Shadd said, "There are a number of critically important challenges facing our town. These include maintaining excellence in our school system; providing affordable and senior housing options; protecting our health and environment by completing necessary sewer projects; establishing a responsible and appropriate town budget; encouraging constructive dialog and openness in government; and managing development in a way that protects and enhances our quality of life."

Added Shadd, "My years on the Advisory Committee have provided me with significant public policy experience, as well as the skills needed to bring people together in compromise in order to make progress. I look forward to this campaign and to talking about these and other important issues with the voters."

Shadd, 51, and her husband Bill Grimm have been Cohasset residents since 1981. They have three children: Kate, 21, a graduate of Cohasset High School; Jon, 18, and Michael, 15, both students at the high school. A non-practicing attorney, Shadd is a graduate of Middlebury College and Columbia Law School.

Debbie Shadd

Shadd served on Cohasset's Advisory Committee from 1997-2003 and is a long-time director of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a local land trust. She is on the boards of the Cohasset Soccer Boosters Club and the Cohasset Garden Club, has served as an adult advisor with the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project and is a past board member of the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association.

Shadd also has extensive experience with the Cohasset Public Schools. She is a former member of the Cohasset Middle/High School Council, worked as a team member for the Middle/High School accreditation process in 2001-2002 and is a past President and board member of the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

Super Bowl was not racy enough

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I have to admit I watched the Super Bowl the other day but it wasn't to see Tom Brady pass, Corey Dillon run or Rodney Harrison tackle,

I was watching for the naked babes.

Ever since Janet Jackson suffered her "wardrobe malfunction," or, as it is called down at the poolroom "mammarygate," during the halftime show at Super Bowl XXXVIII, the greatest show in sports seems to have morphed into a Shannon Tweed classic on Cinemax.

I had to start watching the Super Bowl XXXIX show early for fear I might miss one of those commercials like the one earlier in the season where the Desperate Housewife drops her towel and jumps naked into the arms of Philadelphia Eagles star Terrell Owens.

Who says NFL stands for the No Fun League?

Frankly, I was disappointed in the quality of the commercials until midway through the first half when an ad for something called GoDaddy.com came on the screen.

It showed a suitably endowed young lady apparently testifying before a Congressional committee over the caption "Broadcast Censorship Hearings." This looked like fun.

While she is testifying, one of her bra straps breaks but she catches it just in the nick of time while the paparazzi go wild with their cameras and one of the senators puts on an oxygen mask.

I waited for the commercial to be repeated later in the game because I was sure that GoDaddy.com wasn't going to pay $2.4 million to Fox for just one 30 second showing. I waited in vain.

Sometime between the first and second halves of the Super Bowl, while Paul McCartney was performing (fully clothed, let it be noted), the NFL decided it wasn't worth GoDaddy.com's $2.4 million to run it a second time.

Especially since the FCC had rung up $8 million in fines for indecent programming at the rate of $32,000 per incident in the year since Janet's wardrobe malfunctioned.

"We poked fun at censorship and guess what? We were censored. It's kind of scary," said Paul Cappelli, chief executive of Ad Store, the spot's creator.

Incidentally, if any of you guys taped that commercial, I'd like to see it. She can't be quick enough to catch that strap every time.

The FCC's definition of indecency, which drove GoDaddy.com off the air and is scaring the four-letter words out of the entire broadcast industry, is delightfully vague.

It is "language or material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory references."

President Bush, who rode to a second term on a wave of family values, is no help, either.

"Government can, at times, not censor, but call to account, programming that gets over the line," he said in a recent interview on C-SPAN. "The problem, of course, is the definition of 'over the line.' That's the key."

Won't somebody tell the broadcasting industry where that is?

ASP UPDATE

- Appalachia Festival - One of the highlights of the Appalachia experience is hearing local musicians on culture night. Give them a stage and the Appalachian artists appear. For a musician, performance is their art. In the spirit of our Appalachian friends, ASP invites local artists to get on the stage and share their craft.

On Saturday, March 19 Cohasset ASP is hosting an evening of homespun fun and entertainment! In addition to the musical performances, see photos and hear stories about the ASP experience. Enjoy complimentary desserts, see and purchase beautiful Appalachian crafts, and win prizes in an old fashioned "Tea Cup Raffle".

Purchase tickets from any ASP volunteer or at All the Best Health Food Store in Cohasset. For more information about the festival contact Linda Keller at 781-383-6873.

- Musical performers wanted for the Appalachia Festival. Come and share your musical talents with an appreciative community on Saturday, March 19. Tryouts are at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 5 at the CHS Cafeteria. For more information, contact Pam DeLorenzo (781-383-6904) or Barbara Hoyler (781-383-6212).

Hope for return to civility

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to support the call for a return to civility made by fellow residents Coleman Nee, Agnes McCann and Susan Kent. We are a small town, after all, and a close knit town, where individuals must feel that they can comfortably interact with their neighbors in an environment of respect.

Really, it's nothing new that we're calling for civility in town; the difference lies in the foundation of civility. The ruckus being noticed by Mr. Nee, Mrs. McCann and Mrs. Kent is the noise of a town that is tired of the old foundation for civility in Cohasset—otherwise known as the call by officials for citizens with opinions to "sit down and shut up." The reality is that Cohasset residents are no longer interested in this contract. To renew calm in the town we will have to forge a new form of civility with a strong foundation of respect for all Cohasset residents with their differing opinions and dissenting voices.

At least for the past few years, civility in Cohasset has originated from a silent surrender to the status quo and unquestioned authority of elected officials. While this certainly keeps things quiet, it is also a very risky strategy for small town governance.

The risks of insufficient oversight and a lack of questioning of standard policy can be seen in the police scandal and the various town manager scandals. The risks of allowing elected officials to have unbridled power can be seen in the increasingly disrespectful attitude of certain individuals on the Board of Selectmen toward citizens going in front of the board.

My wife certainly witnessed this treatment when she applied to sit on the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission and not only had to wait six months for a reply, but also endured a couple members of the Board insisting that the letter of appointment and swearing in she had received from Town Hall were invalid until they reviewed her candidacy and actively recruited other candidates that they preferred. Further, the risks of allowing elected officials to make sweeping decisions regarding what's best for Cohasset while ignoring the voice of the people can be seen in the Cook Estate and Little Harbor disputes we're facing today.

So I agree that we need to return to civility. This time let's forge a new culture of civility that is based on respect for the differing opinions of our fellow citizens and the energy and passion that they are offering up in their drive to get involved. There are new voices in town and plenty of old-timers too who are tired of the quiet status quo that has left us with government scandals and personal agendas.

It's time for a more direct democracy in Cohasset based on deep respect for the individual interests of the residents of our town. It's time for elected officials to focus exclusively on serving the interests of their constituents, the people of Cohasset.

Realistically, we are in a very small town with an active citizen population—we do not need an executive branch acting in a vacuum to make high-level decisions regarding what is best for the town. This is why we have the town meeting format—because at our size it is possible for our government to be directly responsive to the people.

The Selectman position therefore does not entitle officials to authority over the citizens of Cohasset but instead creates an obligation and a responsibility on the part of the Selectmen to serve the will of the town's residents. Our elected officials are not truly volunteers and while we appreciate their service they are not doing us a favor; each election cycle the Selectman position is contested. So let's start with respect for the people, transparency, and good governance—and we'll see that a deeply rooted civility neatly follows.

Brooks responds to McMorris commentary

TO THE EDITOR:

I read with interest the set of letters in last week's Mariner from Ms. McCann, Mr. Nee, Ms. Kent, Ms. Charles and Selectperson McMorris. The central agenda of each of these letters, other than a few personal attacks by Selectperson McMorris, was advocacy for the Cook Estate project. That advocacy is quite understandable and has merit.

I will comment on the Cook project but first I must insist that Selectperson McMorris owes apologies to her named and all other Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue residents, all 1500 , for her unfounded accusation that these residents are seeking sewers to gain a Title V amnesty so they can sell their homes and move!

Sure, Ronnie, the area residents organized CEES, "Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions", back in 1997-that's 8 long years ago-for the absurd purpose you claim! That's quite a "reach", similar to your claim that you are an environmentalist! You have been a Selectperson for 9 years and though you may have initiated or supported other projects for the benefit of Cohasset, the extensive fecal coliform pollution of vast Little Harbor and our once pristine coastal waters, first documented by the EPA and DEP in 1978, 27 years ago, remains uncorrected to this very day. That is truly embarrassing for all concerned.

I point out to all readers that CEES was founded in 1997, led by mothers, because the DEP and State Attorney General, fed up with Cohasset's decades of non-compliance under the Superior Court's clean-up Consent Order, were on the brink of levying $10,000 per day fines and other severe sanctions against Cohasset. We are all quite indebted to this CEES large group of alarmed citizens, led by Ms. Lisa Lojacano, a mother of small children, who intervened and persuaded the DEP and AG to hold off on those fines and sanctions and in-turn made a CEES commitment to work with Town Officials towards compliance with the Court Consent Order. That's the true, hard-won "amnesty" that CEES obtained, for the benefit of every Town resident, including Ms. McMorris, and like the pollution, its still in place, but now threatened once again due to the continued, non-compliant arrogance of a few, misguided Selectmen. I believe Ms. McMorris was serving her first term as a Selectperson in this 1997 period.

Yes, parts of the Consent Order have been complied with but the largest, most offending area of pollution-Little Harbor and coastal waters-remain uncorrected and the DEP and Attorney General are back and very angry! You would see how angry if the Mariner could see fit to publish the now-public letter of Dec. 22 from these agencies to the Board of Selectmen. I don't blame them for being angry! They are well aware that Selectpersons Sullivan and McMorris are falsely claiming, in meetings with and in documents to the DEP/AG, that the pollution has been remedied and the Consent Order complied with. Quoting from the letter cited above, "woefully inadequate" is the language used by these law enforcement agencies to describe Cohassets clean-up activities. Recent Government testings, even a 2004 study by our own Board of Health, clearly show the fecal coliform pollution is as bad as its ever been, still 20-200 times the levels set by law!

I also mention that our fine Sewer Commission, even though it has "earned" them and their engineers a recent, scurrilous, retaliatory attack orchestrated by misguided Town Hall officials, remains steadfast in their long standing conviction, eloquently expressed by the Commission's Chairman, that the Town has an obligation, morally and legally, to remedy existing, neighborhood pollution problems, long overdue, as top priority before yielding to pressure from Town Hall to give away our precious, limited sewage expansion capacity to large, new housing project developers. This conviction was strongly endorsed by overwhelming vote at the recent Dec. 6 Town Meeting and I expect we will see a similar, ringing vote endorsement for the Commission's Articles at the upcoming April 2 Annual Town Meeting. God bless integrity and plain common sense!

Finally, relative to the Cook Estate proposed housing development, a project most all support, it clearly can_proceed at any time using the same, on-site, environment-friendly wastewater treatment system that the Cedamere developer has now adopted and gained full DEP approval to implement. This tertiary treatment/water recycle process which, perhaps coincidentally, I described in detail in my Letter to Editor published in the Nov. 5, 2004 Mariner for the Cook developer to consider, may be a bit more costly than sewer connection and usage fees, but it saves substantially on water usage and costs and makes the environment, mother nature and our children smile! Is the Cedarmere developer smarter and more environment-friendly than the Cook project developer? I hope not since so many citizens and seniors wish to see the project matriculate. Perhaps its time for a different, more environmentally conscious Cook developer to be selected? Just a thought!

Coupled with over 45 years of experience, I am intentionally listing below some of my applicable credential base for speaking out on these matters of great concern to me, Cohasset and all my fellow neighbors and citizens. I moved to Cohasset, our favorite Massachusetts town, with my family in 1999, for semi-retirement, an excellent school system and great golf. We were assured at that time by the Board of Health that sewers would be installed within 2-3 years! We had the prudence, however, to insure that our home was equipped with a new, modern, state-of-art biological "Fast" septic system. I have no personal sewer-need ax to grind, other than the area's pollution, and we have no intention of moving! Thank goodness! Little did we know!

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week, BHRC examines the recent legislative pay hikes and reviews other benefits received by legislators.

$2188.61 PAY RAISE FOR ALL LEGISLATORS - All of the state's 200 legislators received an automatic 4.1 percent annual pay raise effective January 5 for the years 2005 and 2006. The hike increases the $53,380.80 annual base salary to $55,569.41. Gov. Mitt Romney was required to establish the raise under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income for the preceding two-year period— as ascertained by the governor. The new $55,569.41 salary represents an increase of $9159.41 or almost 20 percent over the $46,410 salary that legislators received following approval of the constitutional amendment in 1998.

BONUS PAY FOR 100 LEGISLATORS- One of the first actions of this year's legislature was passage of a bill that increases the total number of representatives and senators who receive annual bonus stipends of $7,500 to $25,000, beyond their annual base salary of $55,569.41. The bill provides that one-half of the state's 200 legislators receive bonus pay for their service in leadership positions and as committee chairs and vice-chairs. All 40 state senators and 60 out of the 160 House members will receive the bonus pay. The total cost of the measure is estimated to be $120,000 above the total amount of bonus pay that legislators received last year. Supporters say the additional pay is necessary because of the recent reorganization of the Legislature's leadership and committee structure including the creation of new committees and the consolidation of others. They argued that committee chairs, vice-chairs and legislators in leadership positions should be appropriately compensated for their many responsibilities and hard work. Critics say it is shameful that the Legislature rushed through a bill, without public hearings and without debate, to raise some members' salaries. They noted that funding for human service programs, health care, education and local aid are more important than pay hikes.

PER DIEMS- Legislators are also entitled to collect "per diems" to reimburse them for mileage, meals and lodging expenses for travel from their "place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of their of ficial duties." The amount of the per diem allowed varies based on the city or town in which a legislator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These reimbursements are not taxable income and range from $10 per day for legislators who reside in the greater Boston area to $82 for Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Lawmakers in 2004 received a total of more than $600,000 in reimbursements that ranged from $270 to $14,850 for individual members. The Legislature in 2000 doubled these per diems to the current levels. Supporters of the per diems say they are a reasonable reimbursement for legitimate expenses. Opponents say that the idea of paying a per diem is outrageous. They noted that other state workers and most private workers are not paid additional money for commuting.

$7,200 FOR EXPENSES- Each legislator also receives a $7,200 annual general expense allowance. The Legislature in 2000 doubled this allowance from $3,600 to $7,200. This separate, flat rate expense allowance is not based on a lawmaker's geographical distance from the Statehouse. It is designed to pay for some of the costs of legislators' Statehouse and district offices and to pay for other district expenses including contributions to local civic groups and the printing and mailing of newsletters. Legislators are issued a 1099 from the state and are required to report the $7,200 as income but are not required to submit an accounting of how they spend the $7,200.

PARKING SPACE- Lawmakers are entitled to a parking space inside the Statehouse garage or at the nearby McCormack State Office Building. The space is for the most part a tax-free fringe benefit under federal and state tax guidelines that apply to all public and private employees— not just state legislators. The first $195 in monthly value of the space under 2004 federal regulations and the first $200 under 2004 state regulations is tax-free. Any value of the space above those amounts is treated as income and legislators are required to pay taxes on it. The value of the parking spaces is estimated to be around $315 and legislators are taxed on $120 monthly by the IRS and $115 by the state.

HEALTH INSURANCE- Legislators are eligible to choose from nine health insurance plans offered by the state's Group Insurance Commission that manages the plans for 67,000 state workers. Monthly premiums for family plans range from $662 to $1,221 while individual plans are available from $276 to $538. Most lawmakers pay 20 percent of the premium and the state pays 80 percent. Some legislators elected after July 1, 2003 pay 25 percent while the state picks up only 75 percent. State and federal privacy regulations protect this information and it is not possible to obtain records about which plans individual legislators have purchased. Gov. Romney's fiscal year 2006 budget proposal calls for all state workers, including legislators, to pay the higher 25 percent. Supporters of Romney's plan say that most private sector workers are required to pay 25 percent and sometimes as much as 50 percent. Opponents of the governor's plan say the current system is fair and argued that the governor's plan would be a burden on many middle-income workers and their families.

DENTAL INSURANCE- Legislators are also eligible to choose one of two dental insurance plans. Monthly premiums for family plans are either $72 or $102 while individual plans are available at $23 or $33. Members pay 15 percent of the premium and the state pays 85 percent.

FEDERAL TAX BREAK FOR SOME LEGISLATORS- Legislators who live more than 50 miles from the Statehouse are eligible for a special federal tax break. A 1981 federal law allows these state legislators to write off a daily expense allowance when filing their federal income tax return. The complicated system determines a daily amount, ostensibly for meals, lodging and other expenses incurred in the course of their jobs, which can be deducted for every day that the annual legislative session is in existence and has not adjourned for the year. The Massachusetts Legislature remains in existence 365 days per year and does not formally "prorogue" or end an annual session until the next annual session begins. This allows legislators to take the deduction for all 365 days regardless of whether the Legislature is meeting. Legislators do not even have to travel to the Statehouse to qualify for the daily deduction. The amount of the deduction varies from year to year and is estimated for 2005 to be between $150 and $200 daily or between $54,750 and $73,000 annually. It is estimated that one-third of the state's 200 legislators qualify for this deduction and are eligible to pay little or no federal income taxes on their legislative salaries.

Police welcome new officer

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Upon the recommendation of Police Chief James Hussey, Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed Edward Bagley to the position of Patrolman in the Cohasset Police Department.

"We're very fortunate to have him," said Hussey of Bagley, who comes to Cohasset with 10 years experience working in Chatham on Cape Cod. Hussey said Chatham is a community very similar in size to Cohasset, which is also somewhat off the beaten path, and Bagley should be a great match for the community.

At 37 years old Bagley not only has experience working in Chatham, but he also spent six years working with the Boston Municipal Police in the 1990s. Currently, he is working on earning his bachelor's degree in criminal justice. He has joined the 4 p.m. to midnight shift, and Hussey said with his extensive experience, "No training period has been necessary."

Bagley's first day in Cohasset was Monday, Feb. 14, and he said in the short time he has been on the department, things have gone very well. "It's a very similar community to Chatham," Bagley said in terms of its size, population, and the size of both its fire and police departments. "I think I'll be a good fit," he said.

In addition, Bagley said growing up in Quincy and attending many weddings and other functions in and around Cohasset, he knew even before joining the department, he liked the town.

Hussey said he has worked cooperatively with Chief Kevin Fitzgibbons of the Chatham Police Department during the transition. Hussey said he delayed Bagley's transition to Cohasset to allow him to stay on a little longer in Chatham and help with the after-effects of the blizzard.

With Bagley, the department is now operating with 17 officers, and in the next week or two, Hussey said Cohasset's department will continue to grow as it takes on another officer. The department is operating at full capacity with 19 officers on board. Hussey said hopefully the additional men on the department will help cut down on some of the overtime which is accrued by officers when there is limited staff.

Car booster seats can help protect children

Motor vehicle crashes are the number one killer of children ages 2-14.

The use of belt-positioning booster seats lowers the risk of injury to children in crashes by 59 percent compared to the use of vehicle seatbelts. The finding comes from a study of children ages 4 through 7 by Partners for Child Passenger Safety, a State Farm-funded research project at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

That's why the Cohasset Police Department is joining with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the Ad Council and others around Valentine's this year to commemorate National Child Passenger Safety Week. The purpose is to place special emphasis on reminding all parents and other adults responsible for children traveling in motor vehicles: if the kids are under 4 ft. 9 ins., they need a booster seat.

"While 94 percent of America's toddlers are now regularly restrained, not enough kids ages 4-8 are properly and safely restrained. Only 10-20 percent of kids ages 4-8, who should be using booster seats to protect them, are actually in them," said Chief James M. Hussey. "This puts children at an unnecessary risk of being injured or killed in crashes because they are simply in the wrong restraint for their size."

"Only 10-20 percent of kids ages 4-8, who should be using booster seats to protect them, are actually in them."
— Police Chief James M. Hussey

Children need to be in the right restraint for their size and age. One study showed that children ages 2-5 who are moved to safety belts too early are four times more likely to sustain a serious head injury than those restrained in booster seats. In a traffic crash, the shoulder strap of a safety belt will hit a child shorter than 4 ft. 9 ins. across the neck or face rather than the chest, and there is also a greater risk of internal injury because an adult belt hits across the child's stomach rather than his/her lap. These children need a booster seat – which raises them up so that adult safety belts fit over their chests and hips properly – and protects them in the event of a crash.

Chief Hussey said as children grow, how they sit in your car, truck, van or SUV should also change. For maximum child passenger safety, parents and caregivers simply need to remember and follow the "Fourt Steps for Kids":

- Use rear-facing infant seats in the back seat from birth to at least one year of age and at least 20 pounds;
- Use forward-facing toddler seats in the back seat from age one and 20 pounds to about age four and 40 pounds;
- Use booster seats in the back seat from about age four to at least age eight – unless the child is 4 ft. 9 inches or taller;
- Use safety belts in the back seat at age eight or older or taller than 4 ft. 9 inches. All children age 12 or younger should ride in the back seat.

"Many parents are under the false impression that children who have outgrown child safety seats can move right into safety belts, but nothing could be further from the truth. Safety belts, which are designed to fit adults, won't fully restrain a child in a crash," said Chief Hussey.

So, this year, during National Child Passenger Safety Week, police are working hard to remind all parents, grandparents, childcare providers and other adults in charge of children, to always remember that if their kids are less than 4 ft.9 ins. tall, they need a booster seat.

"Some parents or caregivers may regard booster seats as a hassle to use or a pain to convince their children to use. But we want to remind them this year at Valentine's that truly protecting the ones they love means getting past the temporary complaints and perceived hassles because their children's lives are really at risk.

"We want parents and caregivers to always remember that using a booster seat will better protect your child from being thrown from the vehicle, or thrown around inside it, during a crash," said Chief Hussey. "So, always remember the bottom line: if they're under 4 ft. 9 ins., they need a booster seat."

For more information about the proper use of booster seats and child safety seats, please contact Officer Jeff Treanor at 781-383-4138 X1034 or visit: www.boosterseat.gov

Cohasset's Ted Straughn will lead his team into battle three times over the next four days. The Skippers need four points from these final three games to make the tournament.

Three for two

Skaters need a couple wins in their last three games to make tourney

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Two weeks ago, not many would have thought it possible.

The Cohasset hockey team was 4-8, and thoughts of qualifying for the state tournament seemed somewhat far-fetched.

Four wins in their last five games, however, have brought the Skippers up to 8-9. Now, they need two wins in their last three games to make it happen.

It will not be easy. Cohasset travels tonight to take on Wareham, a team the Skippers defeated in their season opener, 5-3. That game was at the friendly confines of Pilgrim, and was actually tied a three until a couple late goals, including an empty-netter at the buzzer.

Saturday, the Skippers travel to Canton to take on Westwood, one of the better teams in Div. 3. Cohasset ends their season at Pilgrim on Monday at 4 p.m. with a game against South Shore League rival Norwell.

Perhaps the most reasonable scenario would be a split of the Wareham/Westwood games, with Cohasset playing for a postseason spot against the Clippers.

No matter how things shake out, the fact that Cohasset is even in this position is quite commendable, noted head coach Ben Virga.

"It's a credit to these kids, and to our captains for not letting the team quit," Virga said.

Those captains are Ted Straughn, Joe Durkin, Tim Pilczak and Crandon Leahy, who made his return to the ice in Wednesday night's 6-1 win over Carver and looked impressive in doing so.

Straughn, the first-line center for most of the season, has moved to right wing on a line that is now centered by Austen Lanzillotti. Brian Straughn, the team's leading goal scorer with 12, plays left wing.

Ted said after Wednesday's game the move has not bothered him and has improved the

Cohasset finally tops Foxboro; eight in contention for state title this weekend

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The six seniors on this year's Cohasset wrestling squad set a goal early in their high school careers to win a sectional championship in their last year at CHS.

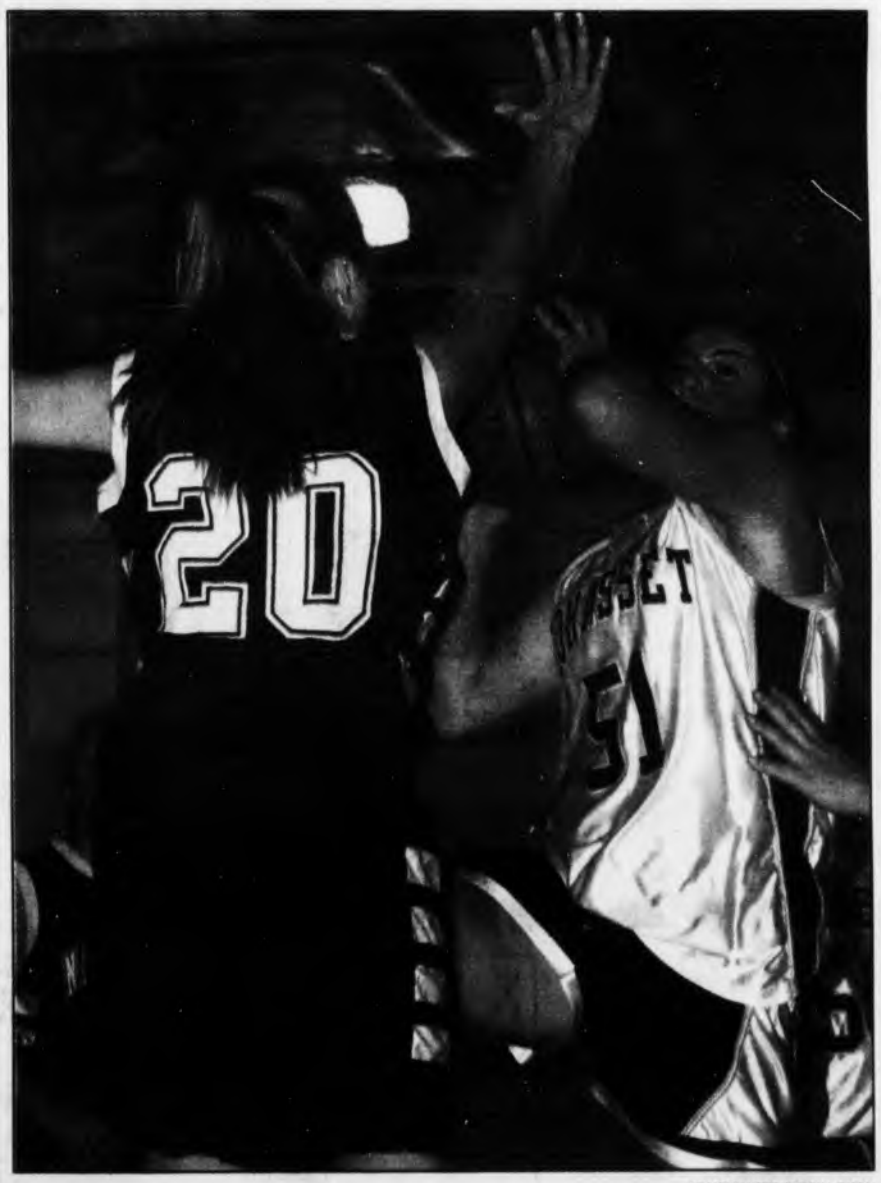
Last weekend, they got the job done.

Joe Kehoe, Jonathan Littauer, Kevin Dinsmore, Matt Casey, Matt Baroudi and Colin Regan all placed in the top-6 at Holliston High School, and led Cohasset to a Div. 3 South sectional championship.

"These six seniors have been together since the seventh or eighth grade; I know this has always been a goal of theirs, to win the sectional as seniors," said head coach Torin Sweeney. "This is a credit to them and their hard work. They've gone to the wrestling camps and they have put the time in. They deserve it."

The sectional competition has long been dominated by Foxboro, who have won it the last nine years. In 1999, they shared the title with Cohasset. The Skippers were third last year, and second in 2003.

But thanks to those seniors, along with strong performances by juniors David McKenna and Shane Dorian, and sophomore Nick Cambi, Cohasset came out on top this year. The Skippers finished with 203 team points; Foxboro was second with 188.



"This is a huge accomplishment, considering we're the smallest school out of the 19 that were there," Sweeney said. "This is a great accomplishment for the kids. It's the result of a lot of hard work.

Of course, it's not over yet. The wrestlers mentioned above will be making the trip to Taconic High School in Pittsfield this weekend for the Div. 3 state championship. Cohasset had three state champions last year (Kehoe, Baroudi, and the graduated Phil Strazzula), and will be hoping to at least match that this season.

If the sectional is any indication, there appears to be a good chance of that happening.

Kehoe (160-pound weight class) and McKenna (145) both won their divisions at the sectional, and both were

Haracz's clutch free throws clinch postseason berth for CHS girls

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

High school basketball doesn't get any better than the blockbuster showdown last Friday against neighboring Hull. Bottom line: the Lady Skippers captured a coveted playoff spot in an absolute nail biter of a finish

Stephen Speilberg could not have scripted a more exciting ending. Like a comet out of the sky, sophomore Haley Haracz banged in two free throws seconds before the final buzzer to nail a one point victory, 37-36.

What made the story even better? Faced with a shortage of players due to a host of player injuries, head coach John Levangie had just plucked Haracz off the JV team in time to join the varsity squad.

From the opening tip, it was obvious that these teams were equal. The Pirates brought to the floor a very obvious height advantage. The Lady Skippers offset this factor with their own lightning-quick speed.

During the first half the Skippers scored in the widespread way Levangie had hoped for. Casey Anderson led the way, followed by her sister Meg, Nicole Whitney and Lacey Richardson.

Hull guard Kate Walper kept the Pirates in the game. At halftime, the score was knotted at 21.

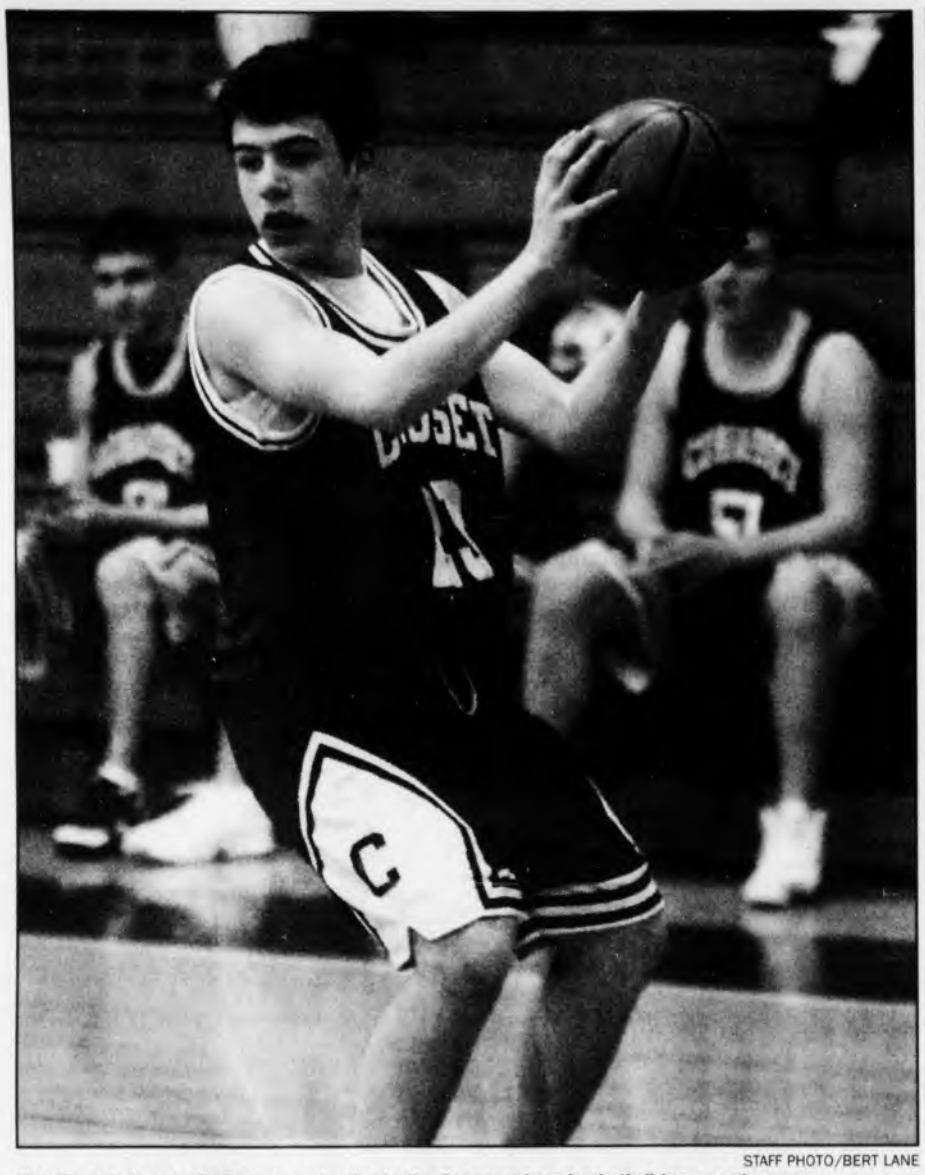
In the back of their minds, the Skippers knew one more victory would catapult them into a tourney spot. They ran the floor with fire. To no one's surprise the Pirates matched the high-paced tempo.

In a post game interview with the Mariner, Levangie said, "The girls knew this was the key game. Everyone stepped up and contributed, and their determination clearly paid off."

With 20 seconds left on the clock, the Pirates led Cohasset by a single daunting point. As the final buzzer grew closer, the nail biting factor intensified on the bench and in the stands.

So what does Levangie do to surprise Hull? Set up a play for Haracz and hope she draws a foul. Bingo.

The tension could be felt throughout the entire gymnasium. At the foul line Haracz took a deep breath and put up her two shots. She knew the winning marbles rested on her performance.



As her second and winning throw sailed through the hoop, the future unfolded for the Lady

Boys hoops end on a winning note

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With no seniors and several varsity newcomers playing key roles, most Cohasset boys hoops fans knew coming into this season that wins and losses may not be the best gauge of the team's success.

Finishing at 5-15, the Skippers will not be making a second consecutive trip to the Div. 4 state tournament.

It is how their season ended, however, that will hopefully serve as a foundation for future achievements.

Cohasset won three of their last five games, highlighted by a buzzer-beater at home Monday against Nantucket.

Down by one with under ten seconds to go, Cohasset turned the ball over, and the Whalers certainly had the upper hand. On the ensuing inbounds pass, however, sophomore center Justin Alexander made a great play to anticipate the pass and steal the ball.

The Skippers called timeout with 5.6 seconds left, and set up the final shot for junior guard Trevor Brady.

Chris Bryan inbounded the ball to Brady, who used a couple screens to get himself open. Brady, a team co-captain, fired away from NBA range, with the shot banking in as time expired to give the Skippers a 40-38 victory.

Winning a game in that fashion will hopefully give the team a new level of confidence heading into next season, said head coach Dorian Bryant.

"It was an exciting win; we were down and made two huge plays and wound up winning the game," he said. "They know they can win tight games. With that, I think we have a chance to do some special things next year."

Bryan had a team-high 15 points for the game. Brady scored 10 and freshman John McCarthy scored nine.

It was the second game against Nantucket in three days, as the boys boarded the ferry and traveled to take on the Whalers last Saturday. That was another win, this time via a 45-41 score.

The story of the day here is the fact that the Skippers came back from a 12-point deficit in the second half to win it.

"The kids fought back well, and they pulled out a win," Bryant said. "It was a very good win for them, to see that the system works."

Bryan had a season- and career-high 18 points. Brady chipped in with seven.

Cohasset got these last two wins without the services of freshman guard Pat McCarthy, who suffered a concussion early in the first Nantucket game. McCarthy has been one of the team's better and more consistent performers over the course of the year.

The season ended Tuesday night with a loss to Norwell. The Clippers are fighting for their postseason lives, and yet, Cohasset hung tough for a good part of the game.

It was tied at 16 at one point, and the Skippers were down by only six with less than a minute remaining in the first half. Norwell hit two threes in that last minute, however, and repeated the feat in the first minute of the second half.

That was a lead too big to overcome, but Bryant was not discouraged afterwards.

"I can't really complain. We won two games in a row for the first time all year," he said.

The key for the Skippers' program will be to play together over the offseason and improve their game. It would be a good continuation of what Bryant has seen over the last four weeks.

"This last half of the season has been very positive," Bryant said. "There were definite signs of improvement. I think the kids know now that they belong in this league, and they will compete next year."

Skippers. Levangie and his players would head into playoffs for a second year in a row.

Meg Anderson also played a major role in contributing to the valued tourney berth. She made her presence felt on both ends of the floor.

"We knew we could win this game before we started," she said. "Our mindset and determination earned us this victory. Winning really took a lot of pressure off."

The very next day the girls literally boated to Nantucket for another contest with the Whalers. Nantucket probably wished the Lady Skippers got stuck on the mainland. Though this match-up proved no nail-biter, the blowout victory helped build the Skippers' confidence going into the postseason.

The Skipper's easily contained Nantucket with, according to Coach Levangie, "one of their best defensive performances of the season." At the end Cohasset amassed 44 points to Nantucket's meager 17.

Katie James spearheaded the offense with an impressive 13 points, followed by Casey Anderson with 10, Lacey Richardson with eight, and Meg Anderson with seven. For the second game in a row, the Lady Skippers had accomplished what Coach Levangie wanted: spreading around of the offensive game.

When asked about her reaction to lopsided victory, James said, "We knew this was a game we could easily win. We still worked very hard and it felt great."

Things did not go quite as smoothly Tuesday night, when Cohasset traveled to Norwell to take on the Lady Clippers. It was Senior Night for the four Norwell seniors, and they played their last home game in style, sending the Skippers home with a 58-33 defeat.

Norwell had little answer for Casey Anderson down low, as the senior (and recently named South Shore League All-Star) had 24 points and 17 rebounds, with eight of those boards coming on the offensive end.

Cohasset was down by only eight with 11 minutes to go, but Norwell dominated down the stretch. Turnovers and subpar shooting were the main problems for the Skippers on this night.

"This is an easy one to forget," Levangie said afterwards. "We played poorly, that's it. We definitely have to take better care of the basketball."

Meg Anderson did play pretty well in the loss, a fact that was not lost on Levangie after the game.

Cohasset was 11-8 heading into last night's regular season finale against Hopedale.

Tournament pairings

According to the MIAA website, state tournament committees will meet Friday, Feb. 25, at 9 a.m. to determine the brackets for the upcoming state tournament.

To see where Cohasset is seeded and where they will be playing, log on to www.miaa.net. The brackets should be available online that afternoon.

team's offensive capabilities.

"Austen has been playing really well," Straughn said. "He moves the puck well. Playing with my brother is awesome, and with Austen as the third guy on the line, we've really been able to do some things."

Virga says Lanzillotti, only a sophomore, has improved his game with each period and will only get better as he matures and plays more.

"I think next year, Austen will be a South Shore League All-Star," Virga said. "The only question will be if he leads the league in scoring."

The Carver game allowed Virga to play a number of his younger players for far more shifts than usual. Corbin Faber notched two goals in the first period. The sophomore caught a case of hat trick fever and tried his best throughout the game to get a third, but it wasn't meant to be.

Leahy also scored off an assist by R.K. Quebec, who got a goal of his own a few minutes later. Brian Straughn scored the other goal in Cohasset's five-goal first period.

In the second, sophomore Ben Massotta got his first varsity goal to finish the night of scoring for the Skippers.

It was a continuation of the veritable goal-fest that occurred the night before against Mashpee. Led by a Pilczak hat trick, the Skippers won 8-2.

Faber, Quebec and Melissa Crowley-Buck both scored the first goals of their varsity careers on this night. Faber's came early in the second period and broke a 1-1 tie, propelling Cohasset to a five-goal period and the win.

Durkin and Brian Straughn scored the other Skippers goals. Ted Straughn had three assists.

dominant in doing so. McKenna beat the numbers 2- and 4-seeds in the last two rounds, winning those matches 17-3 and 16-4, respectively.

McKenna had been hurt through most of December, but is now hitting his stride, Sweeney said.

It was a big day for Kehoe, who had finished in third place at the sectionals three years in a row. His coach said he dominated all opponents during the sectional.

Littauer (119), Dinsmore (130), Dorian (140), Casey (171) and Baroudi (189) all finished second at Holliston. Casey and Littauer were probably the closest to winning their championship matches.

Casey was matched with a top-notch wrestler in Foxboro's Joe Bordieri, and battled well for all six minutes. Bordieri took a 2-1 decision.

Littauer also had an opponent from Foxboro, Justin Thomas, and stayed in it until the third period before he was caught and pinned. The two could very well square off again at the states.

Cambi (215) finished fourth in his division, while Regan (152) finished sixth.

Also earning team points for Cohasset by winning at least one match were Jake Watts (103), Adam Smith (125) and George Miller (275).

Last year's states were held in Cohasset. This year's travel arrangements are vastly different, needless to say, going to Pittsfield. The team will be spending the weekend there.

Sweeney said the long bus ride should not an effect on the team.

"There's enough down time to prevent that," he said. "We'll get there around 10 or 11 [in the morning], and we won't start wrestling until 1 in the afternoon. We should be ready."

As was the case with the sectionals, athletes will have to win two matches on Friday to advance to Saturday's later rounds.

Cohasset girls to play twice at Boston University

The Cohasset girls youth lacrosse program will play the first-ever youth lacrosse game hosted by Boston University, when the 15-and-Under squad squares off against Northboro/Southboro on Saturday, March 19.

As part of an outreach to the regional lacrosse community, the nationally ranked Boston Terriers women's lacrosse team is hosting several youth games at Nickerson Field, prior to its own home games. Nickerson Field - a landmark visible from the Mass Pike - is the home of the Boston Cannons from Major League Lacrosse.

Cohasset's seventh- and eighth-grade girls will play at 10 a.m. on March 19, right before the Terriers play Loyola University in a match-up of two nationally ranked teams.

The girls will then return to the B.U. campus on Sunday, April 17 to play against Billerica, prior to the Terriers game against SUNY-Binghamton. The April 17 game is "Senior Day," the final home game for the Terriers for the year, and a big crowd is expected.

"The first game lets us play earlier than most of our regular-season opponents, and the second is a chance to match up during vacation week against one of the best programs in the state," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse and head coach for the girls teams. "And both games give our girls a chance to play in a terrific facility, under the watchful eye of college coaches who are always looking to see which communities are developing talented young players. ... It's a great opportunity for our program."

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will field 11 teams of boys and girls this spring, playing in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League. Regular season games will start in early April and the season will run through mid-June.

For more information on Cohasset Lacrosse, go to www.cohassetlacrosse.com or contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858.

Nor-Coh gymnasts come up just short

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team has barely missed out on making their third state tournament in four years.

After going 11-2 in their dual meet season, the girls' average score in their four best meets was less than half a point behind the eighth and final qualifier for Saturday's South sectional at Foxboro High School.

Those top four meets resulted in an average score of 130.25 points. Foxboro was the last qualifier with an average of 130.61.

The other teams that will be competing are Barnstable, Attleboro, Sandwich, Sharon, Mansfield, King Philip and Canton. Both of the Cape teams represent the very competitive Cranberry League that Nor-Coh competed in this season.

Nor-Coh performed well throughout the season, and saved their best for last by topping the 130-mark three times in their last three meets, including a season-high score of 130.7. The team had hopes of making the sectional, as a similar score put them in last year, but it wasn't meant to be.

This past weekend, athletes from the Nor-Coh squad participated in the league meet at Marshfield High School. Coverage of that event will be in next week's Mariner.

The Stars play again Monday, Feb. 21 at Rockland at 12:50.

Mite C1

The Coastal Stars Mite C-1 team faced an undefeated Hanover team Saturday and came away with a 4-2 victory. Tyler McKinnon was a brick wall in goal, frustrating Hanover through three periods.

The line of Daniel Cronin, Sean Feeney and Ben Swim with - defensive help from Davis Cronin and Jake Moore - kept the puck out of their zone and the pressure on.

Cam Mastrangelo started the goal scoring with a great breakaway. James Dietrich and Feeney, who did double duty, kept the puck moving in the Hanover zone. Joe Deyeso and Joe Proctor held off many Hanover opportunities and were awesome on defense.

The other three goals came from Liam Manning, who had his own breakaway goal, and Jack Conlon, who had two goals with an assist from Hugh Healey. The boys had great backup from the strong defensive line of Jack Shaw and Tommy Prendergast.

The Stars face Braintree next week.

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 team came from behind in the last minute of play to tie the Braintree Mite C2 team 3–3 on Saturday at the Devine Arena in Dorchester. In one of the most exciting games of the year, Derek Benson took a feed from Jo Jo Carbone with less than a minute to play and beat the Braintree goalie on the short side with the tying goal.

Despite a scoreless first period, the two teams skated hard with the Stars having several good scoring chances. Carbone and Gunnar McKenzie each had solid shots on goal. Harrison Sheldon almost scored on a breakaway scoring chance after stealing the puck at the blue line.

Andrew Kuppens, Seamus Ryan, Matty Johnson, Robert Bothwell and Shaelyn Tobin displayed some solid play on defense during the period while Evan Antonuccio played a solid two way game at wing, including some solid back checking.

The Stars kept solid offensive pressure on Braintree during the second period. Brian Mathews was stopped on an uncontested breakaway after making a great move at the red line and Kyle Bowman was denied a goal on a wrist shot to the upper corner on a another great save by the Braintree goaltender. Braintree took the lead late in the period scoring two goals on back to back shifts.

Trailing 2-0 going into the third period, Antonuccio got the stars on the board setting up a goal from right side of the net. Tucker Antico then tied the game at two on the next shift assisted by Mathews.

It was evident that both teams wanted the win. McKenzie made an outstanding defensive play on a Braintree breakaway, giving up his body on slide reminiscent of Don Awry. Christopher Phillips made several great saves down the stretch and showed incredible toughness staying in goal after taking a wrist shot to the unpadded area above the knee.

The Stars pulled the goalie for the last shift putting in the "Fire" line. Mathews, Carbone, Mats Nelson, Bowman, McKenzie, and Benson were relentless keeping the pressure on Braintree leading to the tying goal.

Mite B

The W's keep piling up for the Stars Mite B team. Playing the toughest part of their schedule, here is a re-cap of the past two games:

First up was a feisty Pembroke team. The Stars had a weapon - a missile named Curtis Golden. Golden came roaring out of a scoring slump and lit the lamp three times with assists from Robert Reidy, Tucker Ambrose, and Joey Redfearn. This was the fourth hat trick of his career.

Adding to the scoring fest, Matt Doyle and Jeffrey Powers each scored a goal off assists from the Evitts brothers, Jack and Brendan. The game ended with a 5-2 score, in favor of the Stars.

Next up on Sports Center – Weymouth. This proved to be a tough contest, but once again the Stars prevailed, outmuscling Weymouth by a slim margin and a 3-2 final score. Kal Maier (between the pipes) faced his toughest challenge of the season. He displayed laser-like focus in deflecting shot upon shot. With the help from his defensive partners, Declan Leahy, Bryan Bowman, James Hussey, and Redfearn, a.k.a. "The Department of Defense," Maier resembled a young Patrick Roy.

The Stars held the high-scoring Weymouth offense to just two goals. The fans must have felt like they were at Gillette Stadium watching the Divisional playoffs between the Pats and the so-called "high scoring" Colts.

The Stars countered with a side order of Rice - Sam Rice. Rice received a room service pass from the hustling Patrick Graham and buried a wrist shot at 12:09 in the first frame. Weymouth tied the score at the end of the period.

The second period started with the marvelous skills and nifty passing from the line of Reidy, Michael Lund and Aiden Bereford. At 13:08 of the second frame, Reidy gained the blue line, fed a lead pass to Lund on the "Rush Limbaugh" right wing. Lund threaded the puck through the needle of the Weymouth defensemen and the puck landed on the center of Bereford's stick. Bereford didn't waste any time and scored the go-ahead goal, making the score 2-1. Weymouth, however, answered the call and tied the score 45 seconds later.

The third period featured great defense from Leahy and Hussey. Maier was in a zone and the Stars shut down countless Weymouth attacks. With 3:05 to play, the conehead line of Jeffrey Powers, Ambrose, and Rice took over: Powers to Ambrose to Rice and it was nothing but net!

With the 3-2 win, the Stars are in sole possession of first place.

Girls travel basketball report

Sixers battle in triple OT thriller

The sixth grade girls took on the iron of the South Shore League over the weekend, traveling to undefeated, league-leading Abington on Saturday and then returning home to host second place Duxbury on Sunday.

The Blue & White acquitted themselves well in both contests. In the Abington game, Cohasset led for most of the first half and went into the intermission tied at 6.

However, a three-minute stretch of poor decision-making by the Blue & White at the start of the second half allowed Abington to pull out to a 12-6 lead, which Cohasset was unable to challenge. Still, Cohasset came away with a moral victory in that the 14-8 final score was the lowest number of points scored by Abington this season. Emma Musto was the leading scorer for the Blue & White with six points and Kate French added a bucket.

The Cohasset girls treated the large crowd in attendance at Sunday's game at the CHS gym to a real barn-burner, forcing the contest into triple overtime against a Duxbury squad whose only losses this year have come to Abington. Once again, the Sixers put on a tough defensive display in the first half, limiting Duxbury to few opportunities and only four points in the opening 20 minutes.

The Cohasset girls had their chances to break the game open, but many shots of the "around the rim and out" variety kept the game to a 4-4 deadlock at the half.

Similar to the Abington game, a poor three-minute stretch midway through the second half seemed to doom Cohasset as Duxbury grabbed a 12-6 advantage with less than eight minutes showing on the clock. However, Cohasset, employing its half-court trap effectively for the first time this season with a lot of energy, tied the game up in quick order thanks to buckets by Musto, Carli Haggerty, and Carly Martin.

Eliza Kinneally then gave the Blue & White their first lead since the opening half, sinking two clutch free throws. However, Duxbury came right back to tie things back up at 14.

French came through with a big hoop as the clock wound down under a minute, but two Duxbury free throws evened the contest, sending it into overtime.

Cohasset had the best chance to score in the first OT, sending a girl to the free throw line, but was unable to convert the opportunity, leaving the score at 16-16 going into the second OT.

Both teams picked up the frenetic pace even further in the second OT. Duxbury drew first blood with a pair of free throws, but French came right back for Cohasset with a big hoop. Once again the Sixers had a girl at the line in the final minute, but once again the Blue & White was unable to take advantage of the opportunity.

Duxbury opened OT number three by quickly taking advantage of a costly Cohasset foul in the backcourt to sink both ends of the one-and-one. Musto responded with a nice hoop underneath to tie the game at 20-20, but two more Duxbury foul shots and then a clinching "rainbow" shot from inside the three-point line made it an insurmountable lead for the visitors as the seconds ticked away.

Rachel Fredey hit the front end of a one-and-one with five seconds to go, but Cohasset was unable to rebound the ensuing miss off the second free throw to set up for a possible three-point shot at the end, leaving Duxbury with a hard-earned 24-21 win.

In addition to everyone who scored points over the weekend, the coaches praised the efforts of Caroline Fein, Amy Costa, Logan Pratt, Emma Quigley, Lindsay Davis, and Olivia Murphy for their rebounding and defensive work. Despite the twin losses, the Sixers coaches were pleased with the efforts of their team, which already has clinched a playoff berth in the competitive South Shore League.

"I think our play this weekend showed that we can compete against anyone in the league," said Coach Steve Fredey, "and is a good omen as we look ahead to the playoffs in March."

Telling tales out of kindness

Story Tsunami to benefit disaster victims

By Elizabeth Malloy
EMALLOY@CNC.COM

The American storytelling community is small and close knit, with members regularly gathering to share ideas, and sometimes raise money for each other when someone is in need.

This weekend, several storytellers will come together at the First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset to lend their support to another, much larger community — the countries devastated by the tsunami disaster that killed more than 150,000 on the day after Christmas.

Marshfield resident and renowned storyteller Jay O'Callahan will perform at the Story Tsunami tonight in Cohasset.

"Something like The Herring Shed is about an enduring pain. You go on, and these people [the tsunami victims] will go on with death."

— Storyteller and Marshfield resident Jay O'Callahan

The Story Tsunami benefit Friday, Feb. 18 will feature six internationally known storytellers and musicians, who will entertain guests with stories that somehow relate to the disaster, either the through the plot of their stories or through the feelings they convey.

"There was an awareness that all the interest in the tsunami was going to disappear quickly, but not for [the victims]," said Jay O'Callahan, a world renowned storyteller who lives in Marshfield and will be participating in the Story Tsunami benefit. "In five years, or ten, their children are still gone or their mothers are gone or their wife — gone."

Some of the storytellers will pay direct homage to the region hit by the tsunami, like New York's Bob Reiser who plans to tell folk tales from Sri Lanka, and Derek Burrows, another Massachusetts-based storyteller who will talk about time he spent in Bali. O'Callahan said he is going to tell a story about a different community affected by a different kind of tragedy.

O'Callahan will be telling one of his earliest stories, The Herring Shed, about a fishing community in Nova Scotia during World War II. The village is not hit by a natural disaster like the tsunami, but is instead withstanding a constant stream of telegrams informing them their sons and brothers have been killed in the war.

"Something like The Herring Shed is about an enduring pain," O'Callahan explained. "You go on, and these people [the tsunami victims] will go on with death."

Storyteller Andrea Lovett of Abington helped organize the event and will also perform.

"The public has short memories when the tragedy is several thousand miles away," Lovett said. "It is important to keep this tragedy in the news as it is not a problem that will go away overnight."

Lovett planned the event after storyteller Lee-Ellen Marvin created a Web site asking others to organize Story Tsunamis. They are now being performed all over the country.

In addition to O'Callahan, Reiser, Burrows and Lovett, storyteller Wiesy MacMillan, who is also from Marshfield, will perform as well, along with flutist Barbara Wall. The proceeds from Story Tsunami will go to the Red Cross. There will be a separate children's program for youngsters under age 12 Sunday, Feb. 20 at 2 p.m. at the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, the proceeds of which will go to Oxfam. That performance will feature Lovett, MacMillan, storyteller Diane Postoian as well as vocalist Katie Shepard and harpist Jen Poole, both of whom are just 14-years-old.

O'Callahan said that while his story is somewhat sad, he and his fellow storytellers do not intend for the night to be depressing, but rather about coming together to help some people in desperate need.

"We don't want the night to be a great sadness, I'm hoping mine will be the really sad one," O'Callahan said with a laugh.

The other storytellers echoed that sentiment.

"The stories are around themes of laughter, love and hope - three universal antidotes to pain suffering," said Reiser. "I hope to celebrate the countries which have been so damaged by this terrible event, so that the audience can appreciate the people who they are aiding."

Generating a sense of community will be at the center of the evening though, several storytellers said. Like Reiser, Burrows said he wanted to give the audience a sense that they were helping real live people. A native of the Bahamas who came to Boston in the mid-70s, Burrows said the outpouring of support for tsunami victims reminded him of the Blizzard of '78, when some of his rather cold Bostonian neighbors who had never said hello to him before were suddenly very helpful.

"One thing that is always impressive about humans is that even though we can be a selfish group at times, we also have the capacity for extreme generosity and willingness to help and give," Burrows said. "As storytellers we have the ability to affect people through our words and images and stories. Anything we can do to help those who need help is important, whether its giving money or helping to raise money."

GIS software training for high school students

The Center for Student Coastal Research (40 Parker Ave.) is offering free training to high school students interested in learning computer mapping skills utilizing GIS software.

Through a grant from Massachusetts' Coastal Zone Management agency, the GIS training is the first part of a year-long project designed to address non-point source pollution in the Gulf River.

This is an incredible opportunity for area high school students to advance their understanding of pollution issues in our watershed, to work toward solving a real problem in our watershed, and to advance their individual career interests.

Mark your calendar: The first training module for the grant project — GIS computer mapping skills — will take place at CSCR as follows: March 1 (Tuesday) and March 3 (Thursday), 7-9 p.m.; March 8 (Tuesday) and March 10 (Tuesday), 7-9 p.m.

The grant award also allows CSCR to offer 18 modest stipends of $324 per high school student for work on this project. There are also two senior leadership stipends of $1500 for highly motivated, highly responsible, and scientifically-oriented high school seniors or college students.

Students interested in participating in the project, beginning with the GIS training program, should contact Jack Buckley at Cohasset High School (jbuckley@cohassetk12.org), or at the Center for Student Coastal Research, 781 383 0129, jbuckley.cscr@verizon.net

Water purification for village in Haiti

The Middle School Youth Group at St. Stephen's Episcopal church is working to raise enough money to provide a water purification system for a village in Haiti. Last spring, the youth saw a video shared by teens involved in Caribbean U-Turn, a Mattapan- based program that seeks to help troubled Haitian youth in the Boston area. The video documented the devastating conditions in which the majority of Haitian people live. Often, walls in housing are formed from deteriorating mattresses and fresh, clean water is unavailable. In a December 2003 article in the South Florida Sun-Sentinel, Haiti was listed at the forefront of a global water crisis. According to recent studies by the United Nations, Haiti is ranked among the worst in the world for water supply and quality. Internationally, 4 million children die every year from water-borne diseases such as cholera and diarrhea, one child every 8 seconds. As you are reading this article, children including Haitian children are dying because of inadequate clean water supply.

St. Stephen's Middle School group is determined to help combat this problem. Our goal is to raise $10,000 in order to purchase and send a water purification system to a village in Haiti. Working with Water Missions International who partners with the Episcopal Diocese in Haiti and Partners in Health, it is the group's intent to send a system next fall.

One of our major fundraisers will be held on Sunday March 13, at Country Club Lanes in Hingham. The group will participate in a Bowlathon. Teams of four will bowl to obtain the highest possible average score. Sponsors are asked to make pledges per point. Each member is hoping to collect a minimum of $100 in pledges. If you are interested in helping the group reach their goal of $10,000, send your check made payable to St. Stephen's Haiti Water Project c/o St. Stephen's Episcopal Church 16 Highland Ave. Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Tea party rescheduled

A Valentine Tea Party will be held Friday, Feb. 25 at 1 p.m. at Second Congregational Church, Bates Hall.

The event is sponsored by Cohasset Elder Affairs and will feature Marie Dunn Frazier, Tea Historian, Specialist, and Lecturer who will present an afternoon Tea Seminar, "Reflections on the Fine Art of Tea Drinking." Frazier will speak about the early beginnings of tea, its myths and legends, as well as an exhibit of memorabilia connected with tea.

Beginning at 1 p.m., guests will be invited to sample teas and sandwiches, followed by dessert, all in a Victorian setting. Frazier's seminar will begin at 2 p.m.

There is more to a nice cup of tea then people are aware of. Tea has played a part of History, Health, and even Politics. The event has been rescheduled from Feb. 11 because of the potential of snowy weather.

For more information or to sign up for the event, as seats will be limited, please contact the Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112, or stop by its office, located in the South Shore Community Center at 3 North Main Street. All are welcome to attend.

OUR LARGEST SELECTION* IN 35 DAYS

A little over a month ago, we had the biggest, most successful rug event in our 40 year history ...So big we had to spread it over seven stores. And that became a problem. Some customers complained that, try as they might, they couldn't see all the rugs...the event was just too big.

That's why we're repeating it. Marjorie has changed the selection in each and every store. If you go to the Building #19 you shopped last time, you'll see over 300 new and different rugs.

If you missed the event, and you've thought about owning a fine Oriental Rug, you get a second chance to see some of our best rug bargains ... ever.

Apparently, over half of New York City's oriental rug importers (there really aren't that many) were concerned that the current world chaos would dry up their sources ...So they very quietly brought in far more that they usually do. I guess they figured that the world upheaval would reduce production of hand made rugs and make it too dangerous or expensive to transport them.

At the New York Market on November 14th, most of them were surprised to find such an over-supply, and so was Marjorie, our astute buyer, who phoned my son Bill who said,

"If these are bonafide bargains that we will be proud to sell, keep buying. We may never get another chance like this! After all, that's what banks are for!"

TOO MANY RUGS FOR ANY ONE STORE

OVER $6,500,000.00 AT LEGITIMATE RETAIL

AUTHENTIC HANDMADE ORIENTAL RUGS

IN SIZES 2X3, 3X5, 4X6, 6X9, 8X10, 9X12, 10X14, A FEW OVERSIZES, AND HARD TO FIND RUNNERS AND ROUNDS.

FROM INDIA

Traditional Persian designs in a variety of designs, colors, and sizes. Whether you're just starting out or furnishing that dream home, you'll find the perfect rug.

From Pakistan

Sumptuous 16/18 Persian designs- some of the finest rugs made in the world today. Beautifully detailed with almost 300 knots per square inch, these rugs are fit for a palace as well as your home.

FROM CHINA

A gorgeous color palette of 160 Line and some 200 Line Persian designs with silk highlights. Perfect for the person who wants an elegant look

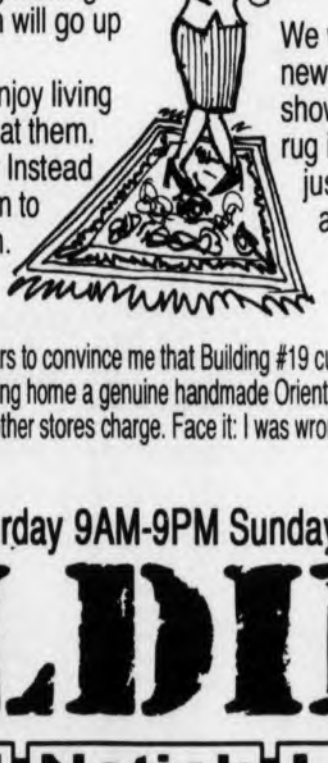
FROM PAKISTAN

Traditional Geometric Kazaks. A wonderful tribal look that complements contemporary as well as traditional.

...And From Heaven-Knows Where!

Every collection like this has a few whose pedigree is questionable ...but who cares! they still look pretty nice to me!

In addition, you'll see some:Afghani Bokharas with their strong geometric design; Antique look Chinese rugs reminiscent of the 1920's Art Deco movement; Nepalese rugs with the Tibetan flavor Persian Gabbehs with their sophisticated Tribal look; Turkish rugs with the fashionable vegetable dyes!



ALL TO BE SOLD AT 50% to 77% OFF FANCY RUG SALON PRICES!

ARE THESE RUGS A GOOD INVESTMENT?

No one really knows! I would guess that as "western culture" spreads, the cost of rug making will go up, and the costs of transportation will go up . . but no one really knows.

They ARE a good investment if you enjoy living with them, walking on them, and looking at them. I consider them a work of art for the floor Instead of for the wall ...and a desirable heirloom to pass down from generation to generation.

WE WANT YOU TO LOVE YOUR NEW RUG!

We want you to be so proud of your new rug that you throw a party to show it off! if you don't think your new rug is good enough to brag about, just bring it back within 30 days for a full refund.

It took Bill nine years to convince me that Building #19 customers would pay the kind of money it takes to bring home a genuine handmade Oriental rug...even if we sold it at half to a third of what other stores charge. Face it: I was wrong.

Sandy beaches, excursions lure passengers to Holland America's own Half Moon Cay

By Arline and Sam Bleeker
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

LITTLE SAN SALVADOR ISLAND, Bahamas æ "Heeere stingray! Heeere stingray!" cried one excited teenager as he tried to coax the silky sea creature closer as if he were calling a cat. "Holy mole," he said when the graceful, whip-tailed fish nibbled food from his fingers. "I'm talkin' to a stingray!" The teen was among the dozen or so passengers from Holland America's Westerdam snorkeling in gin-clear water on Half Moon Cay, the cruise line's slice of paradise on this 2,400-acre island about 100 miles southeast of Nassau.

We were all totally mesmerized by one of the island's newest amenities: Stingray Adventure. Unlike the more famous stingray attraction on Grand Cayman, where rays are free to come and go, Half Moon Cay's facility is an acre-sized, lagoon-side pen that houses 26 rays, assorted marine animals and a hawksbill turtle named Precious. As one snorkeler lifted Precious from the water, the maize-and-black dotted amphibian posed languidly for photos. She was no Cindy Crawford, though, and eventually tired of the limelight, squiggling until she was placed gently back into the water. The island's stingrays, some a quarter-century old æ Methuselah in fish terms æ didn't seem to mind the habitat's constraints and, anyway, whenever need be, they scuttled beneath the soft-sand bottom for a reprieve.

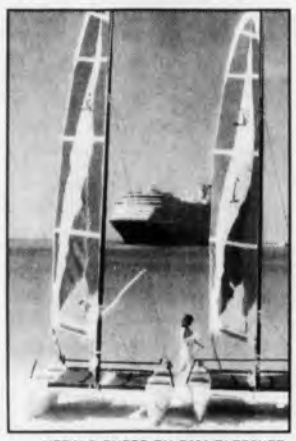
A woman pats a stingray at Holland America's Stingray Adventure facility, a one-acre, lagoon-side pen that houses 26 rays, at Little San Salvador Island in the Bahamas.

When it comes to habitat, Half Moon Cay was divine for passengers, too. This Garden of Eden spot is only open to cruise passengers. Holland America purchased the island in 1997 for $6 million and sank another $10 million into its development. Most of the line's Caribbean cruises æ and some of its Panama Canal cruises as well æ include a daylong stop here. Sister line Windstar Cruises also has ships that visit. Today the place includes an aqua sports center, a children's playground, a straw market and food pavilions, an ice cream store, a post office, even a Spanish-style chapel for wedding and renewal-of-vows ceremonies. All but 55 acres of the island has been purposely left pristine; a sanctuary for birds, a delight for visitors. Relaxing here for the day is worlds apart from typical stops at popular Caribbean islands. You and your fellow passengers have the place to yourself. You can kick back on an isolated outcropping of sand amid rocky ruins the Arawak Indians once might have called home.

Children play at Holland America's Half Moon Cay facility at Little San Salvador Island in the Bahamas.

The island boasts plenty of white talc beach and ample lounge chairs, the perfect place to while away the day doing nothing but developing a tan. But then you'd miss some of the fun activities. In addition to the stingrays, a standout is the newly debuted horseback ride into the surf. Minutes after stepping off the ship's tender, we were at a 5-acre paddock where Molasses and 23 other water-loving steeds awaited their romp along the beach and a wild dash into the surf. The experience is exhilarating. If proverbially you can lead a horse to water but not make it drink, these muscular chestnut- and oak-colored mounts sure loved to swim. The specially trained herd from the famed Chukka Cove in Montego Bay, Jamaica, were flown first to Eleuthera aboard a 727 then ferried to Half Moon Cay. Here they do five rides a day and the 1 1/4-hour excursion costs a reasonable $59.

Not into horses? Take a Jeep to the other side of the island for a Jet Ski excursion that zooms over wave crests at 38 mph. We skipped that in favor of a guided nature walk. Our leisurely jaunt wended through Half Moon Cay's version of backcountry, where guide Frank Smith eagerly described the flora and fauna. Starting nearly every sentence with "Believe you me, my friends," Smith said sapodilla trees are the source of Chiclets. Several neon-blue lizards darted across the sand. Following their tracks, we spyed a curly-tailed lizard posing in the sun. Rising to only 90 feet above sea level, Half Moon Cay has such delights as wild orchids. As Smith chatted, the lyrical song of Bahamas mockingbirds provided background music æ Smith said these creatures can even mimic chain saws and telephone rings, though we laughed skeptically. Among the bird species that thrive on the island is the yellow banana bird, which is quite visible around the island's barbecue lunch spot.



Lunch on-island is an open-air affair, a buffet barbecue, free to all passengers. We piled our plates high with burgers, chicken and all the fixins', including luscious brownies for dessert. Beverages are extra. It was not as if we had overworked ourselves but, hey, who can ignore the call of the island's massage parlors æ two open-air huts overlooking the beach? Here you can opt for an hour massage that will leave you limp. For a taste of true luxury, some passengers lounged in seaside cabanas. Eight private cottages dot the beach, available for those willing to fork over $249 per day. Each accommodates up to six people. Tack on another $200 and you get butler service and drinks all-around for the day. As we headed for the dock to catch the tender back to the ship, we decided next time we'd gild the lily and splurge on one of those.

Islands help cruiselines rock the boat

Several cruise lines are in the real estate business, having bought or developed uninhabited bits of the Bahamas and other Caribbean islands to offer passengers seclusion and a sybaritic day at a beautiful beach. Think Gilligan's Island, minus the shipwreck. You won't feel like a castaway. Most of these pristine islets are replete with lush lagoons, sugar-sand shorelines and water sports aplenty. A spokeswoman described Princess Cruises' private island, for instance, as a resort without the hotel rooms. Indeed, many cruisers say private islands provide one of their more memorable ports of call. A leisurely day on any of them garners an outdoor feast under thatched-roof pavilions, plenty of playtime and a semblance of privacy and safety not necessarily found on the regular roster of tropical ports.

Paradise doesn't come free, though. Expect to spring for sports equipment æ from Banana Boats to floats æ and other activities where available. In addition to Holland America's Half Moon Cay, cruise line islands include the following: Norwegian Cruise Line's Great Stirrup Cay is a 4-square-mile isle in the Bahamas' Berry chain, about 120 nautical miles east of South Florida. Princess Cruises' Princess Cays offers a 40-acre site on the southwest coast of Eleuthera in the Bahamas that includes a mile and a half of talcum powder beach. Royal Caribbean International has two private islands, Labadee, a 260-acre wooded hideaway (really a pensinsula with multiple beaches) cradled by towering peaks, located on the north coast of Hispaniola; and CocoCay, a 140-acre island in the Berry chain between Freeport and Nassau (Celebrity Cruises ships also visit here). Costa Cruise Lines visits Catalina Island, a private beach off the southeastern coast of the Dominican Republic. Disney Cruise Line's Castaway Cay is a 1,000-acre playground in the Bahamas' Abacos that gets a creative boost thanks to Disney's Imagineers. Imagine, they even deliver snow in winter! Radisson Seven Seas Cruises entertains passengers on Motu Mahana, a spit of land off Tahiti that was formed by the sinking of a volcano. Here, as you luxuriate on shore, the luxury line's staff sets up bar service in the water.

Local voices join in 'The Little Prince'

Sam Wartenberg

Local singers will be among those featured this week when "The Little Prince," the beloved Antoine Saint-Exupéry story, has its East Coast premiere at Boston's Shubert. A collaboration between Boston Lyric Opera (BLO) and The Wang Center for the Performing Arts, "The Little Prince" is a part of BLO's 2004-2005 Season and The Wang Center's 2004-2005 Family Series.

The role of the King will be performed by Falmouth native David Cushing and Milton's Sam Wartenberg will be in the 21-member children's chorus under the direction of Johanna Hill Simpson.

With music is by Rachel Portman and libretto by Nicholas Wright, the production will be conducted by BLO Music Director Stephen Lord. It will be sung in English with projected text. Lord is joined by Stage Director Francesca Zambello and Associate Director/Choreographer Denni Sayers. The production features Set and Costume Design by Maria Bjørnson and Lighting Design by Rick Fisher.

Noted baritones Keith Phares and Hugh Russell will perform the role of the Pilot on alternate performances.

Based on one of the most read and printed books of all time, "The Little Prince," by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, the opera brings to life this tender and enlightening story cherished by generations of children and adults throughout the world. The opera tells the story of a pilot who finds himself stranded in the Sahara desert as a result of engine failure and is forced to crash land in the desert miles away from any habitation and chance of help. He meets the Little Prince, who teaches the Pilot to look at life through the eyes of a child and to discover the wonders of the world that the eyes can't see.

"The Little Prince" will be performed at The Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston, February 16 - 27, 2005. Tickets for THE LITTLE PRINCE are on sale at The Shubert Theatre Box Office, online at www.wangcenter.org <http://www.wangcenter.org> , or by calling Telecharge.com at 1-800-447-7400.Y: (888) 889-8587.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

HEARING AND HEALING

According to recent research, elderly individuals who are about to undergo rehabilitation following a hip fracture may want to see a hearing specialist before going to a physical therapist. The study shows that elderly patients who have trouble hearing tended to show poorer functioning before hip fracture. They also took longer to complete rehabilitation and fared worse from the rehab program. On the basis of this finding, it is suggested that elderly hip-fracture patients have their hearing losses attended to with the introduction of a hearing instrument. This strategy does not come immediately to mind when an older person fractures a hip; however, it can have a big impact on the outcome of the rehabilitation if hearing is optimal.

When an uncorrected hearing loss causes the loss of important moments in life, it's time to rediscover the benefits of healthy hearing and the marvelous wonders now available in hearing instruments. Begin with a free hearing test administered by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER if you feel you are hearing less than you once did. If you have a hearing instrument you are unhappy with, we'd be happy to consult with you about it and try to find a better match. Come see us at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144.

P. S. Poor eyesight was also found to be an impeding factor among older individuals who were rehabbing from hip fractures.

Clock is ticking for Cook Estate

Hull connection floated as option

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Faces were flushed and tensions were high as a divided Board of Selectmen faced the reality that time will soon be up for the Cook Estate project and a wastewater solution is nowhere in sight.

Although Selectmen signed a third amendment to the purchase and sale agreement with the heirs of the Cook Estate roughly one month ago — which extended the deadline for the town to find a wastewater solution for the project until April 30, 2005 — no progress has been made on the issue.

"We have two months and one week left and if we don't have a solution, it goes back onto the market," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer of the Sohier Street property, adding in his opinion, the town should either begin negotiating to bring the size of the project down which would make an on-site wastewater system feasible, or begin looking either to the town or its neighbor, the town of Hull, for sewer connections. "We need to take action," he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she is not in favor of changing the scope of the project, which is building 95 units of senior housing on the combined 22-acres of Cook land and 8.7 acres of adjacent town property. "After so many years, we finally have a project and it is better than we ever imagined," she said. She added Cook project is a town-sponsored project and the board is fully behind it and will carry out the wishes of the residents which approved it at Town Meeting.

The town voted on the Cook Estate project at the 2003 fall Special Town Meeting. At that point in time, a developer had not been chosen and plans for the project had not been presented. Town Meeting voted to approve the allocation of $4.5 million for the purchase of the Cook land, knowing it would be marketed and sold to a developer with the adjacent town land for the purpose of building senior housing.

'He left Cohasset a better place'

Dr. Robert Sceery passes away at 84

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It's going to be hard to imagine Cohasset without Dr. Robert Sceery.

Dr. Robert Sceery, who passed away last Friday, is fondly remembered by family, friends and former patients.

While Sceery — who, in his more than four decades of "doctoring" served patients beyond the borders of this town — undoubtedly belonged to Cohasset.

Countless residents, some of whom are now grandparents themselves, remember visiting Dr. Sceery when they were children.

Sceery passed away last Friday (Feb. 18) at 84. And although he "officially retired" back in 1997 when a reception was held in his honor, his family said this week he never stopped seeing occasional patients in his home.

"Dr. Sceery forever left Cohasset a better pace for his years of service and his countless acts of kindness."
— The Thompson family

A pediatrician, who made house calls long after other doctors had stopped the practice, Sceery loved children and they loved him. He would take early morning phone calls, as well as make house calls at any time of the day or night. And if his patient was extremely ill, he would drive, with the mother and child in the back seat, to Massachusetts General Hospital, where due to his affiliation with the hospital, was able to ensure the child would get the best treatment.

The affection and respect so many have for Sceery led to his selection as the 1995 Citizen of the Year.

In a Mariner interview that February, Sceery said it was pure luck that he and his wife Phoebe came to Cohasset because they'd already bought a house in Centerville on Cape Cod.

The house they liked on North Main Street was a little beyond their means, but the couple that owned the home were so pleased a young doctor was coming to town, they traded Sceery the house at the corner of North Main and Green streets for the one in Centerville, which the couple then sold.

"It cost me about 27 cents to make the transaction," Sceery recalled. "So we had a big house with two kids and no furniture, just a bed and cribs."

That was 1953 and the beginning of a relationship with the town and its citizens, who grew to trust and revere the old-fashioned doctor.

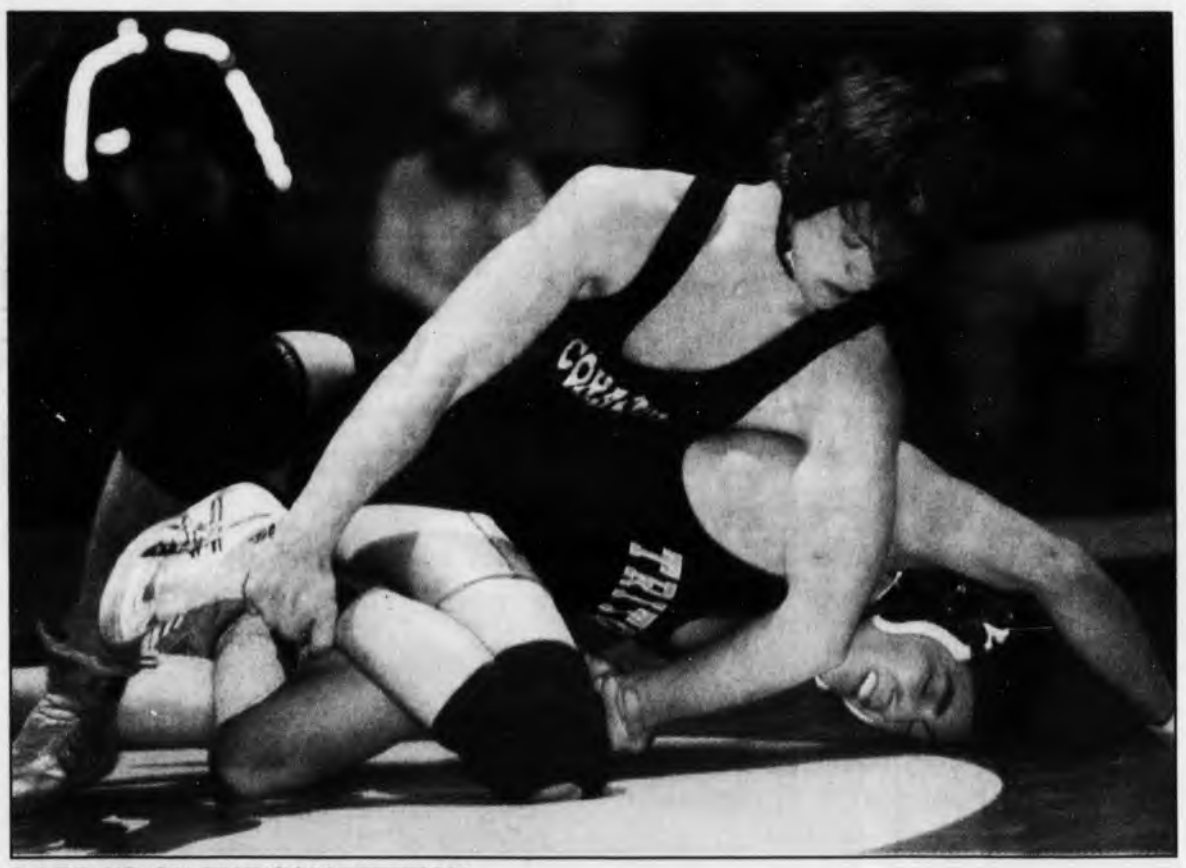
Election season begins in earnest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Campaign signs have become a symbol of spring in Cohasset, and just as sure as the crocuses will bloom, candidates names will begin popping up on residents' lawns as the annual Town Election approaches.



While spring is a rebirth of nature, the election provides the opportunity for boards to take on new members with new ideas, and this year some are eager to either begin new roles, or continue their current ones in public office.

Residents, Gary Vanderweil, 500 Jerusalem Road, Debbie Shadd, 31 Summer St., and incumbent Fred Koed, 92 Pleasant St., will vie for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Roger Hill had pulled papers for the position, but did not turn them in.

Vanderweil said he would like to use his 20-plus years of experience on the Sewer Commission as well as his professional engineering experience to help move the town forward as a selectman. He is a 1958 graduate of Cohasset High School and says over the years he has come to know the town quite well. Vanderweil's goals for the future include preserving the character of the town, encouraging affordable home ownership, and working toward fiscal stability and controlled tax rates.

Denial is expected on sewer for Avalon

ZBA cites uncertainty over future capacity

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals has not voted nor penned a decision, yet it doesn't take a crystal ball to see what it is going to say.

The specifics won't be known until a decision is filed with the Town Clerk and that won't take place until after March 7 when the ZBA expects to vote – but that vote in all likelihood won't give Avalon the green light to absorb some of the town's existing sewer capacity.

Avalon, which is planning to build 200 apartments off Rte. 3A including 50 affordable units, is seeking a modification of its comprehensive permit that would allow it to hook up to the town's sewer treatment plant. Avalon asked the ZBA to determine whether there is adequate capacity and presented testimony during the public hearing last month from its own consulting engineers that there is.

But the ZBA isn't going to wear the "sewer" hat and will defer to the Sewer Commission, which are the local "subject matter experts" on the issue. In other words, the ZBA is conceding that the Sewer Commission knows best. The Sewer Commission says whatever sewer capacity that may exist today must be reserved for the expansion of the sewer system to incorporate the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area.

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick said the board would support the Sewer Commission in its view there may not be adequate capacity to do both Avalon and Little Harbor, even if the plant were expanded. There could be extenuating circumstances affecting plant expansion, such as the additional amount of fresh water that would be discharged into the harbor negatively affecting the lobsters stored there, he explained.

Although 40B projects have a lot of leeway, Bobrowski said they cannot violate state or federal health and safety standards.

According the ZBA consulting attorney Mark Bobrowski, who is an expert on 40B projects, Cohasset has "extraordinary circumstances" due to a court order – dubbed the Second Amended Judgment – requiring it resolve its existing wastewater woes that are polluting its waterways, including Little Harbor.

Although 40B projects have a lot of leeway, Bobrowski said they cannot violate state or federal health and safety standards.

Bobrowski said he spoke with the state Attorney General's office about Cohasset and learned a "Third Amended Judgment" is expected very soon that will require the town to sewer Little Harbor.

Chittick said there is some uncertainty whether an expanded plant would be able to accommodate the entire Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area expected to generate as much as

Red Sox trophy coming to town

State Rep. Garrett Bradley informed Selectman Rob Spofford that Cohasset will host the Red Sox World Championship trophy Sunday, March 13. Although Spofford said the specifics have not yet been worked out, the trophy will most likely be on display at Cohasset High School from 2-4 p.m. Spofford said he will provide an update as details become available.

TM article discussions

The Advisory Committee has two sessions of Town Meeting Warrant article discussions left, during which both proponents and opponents as well as any board or groups which would like to have a say in the articles will be invited to attend. The meetings will be televised, and all are welcome to sit in on the open sessions, to be held in the Selectmen's meeting room beginning at 7 p.m. At the March 3 meeting, all sewer and water articles will be discussed, and at the March 10 meeting citizens' petitions as well as any housekeeping items will be discussed. The Warrant will be sent to the printer March 11. For more information on Warrant articles, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Opening on S.S. Recycling Co-op

Although he was one of the co-founders of the South Shore Recycling Cooperative, John McNabb has announced he must resign from his position on the committee effective March 1. In a memo to the Board of Selectmen he states he will be leaving his post reluctantly, but recommended the board appoint Arthur Lehr to take his place.

McNabb, who is Chairman of the Water Commission, said he has not been able to give the time necessary to serve on the board in the past few years, but added he expects to continue to be involved when needed. Selectmen accepted McNabb's resignation, but have not made any appointments for the position.

Turkey Hill tree clearing

The Trustees of Reservations have until March 15 to submit a grant application, which would provide the funds to clear four acres of woodland on a section of Turkey Hill. The clearing would expand the size of the existing field for grassland dependent wildlife and maintain the scenic view from the hill.

The trustees, town of Cohasset, and town of Hingham all own a portion of the property at Turkey Hill. Under the proposal, most of the trees would be cleared from Cohasset land. In a memo sent from Town Manager Bill Griffin to the Board of Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Department of Public Works, he states the Trustees of Reservations is seeking the town's approval to undertake the project. Griffin said before approval is granted, he would like to receive input from all three groups no later than Friday, March 4.

The Board of Selectmen gave its approval, subject to approval from the other departments.

Alternative energy sources committee

The Board of Selectmen is looking for residents to serve on a committee to investigate alternative energy sources, such as harnessing solar and wind energy. The committee will either be appointed by Town Meeting or by the board itself. It will be charged with investigating various "green" energy methods, and will report back to the Annual Town Meeting with its findings in 2006.

To date, residents Benjamin Bixby, Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street and Luciano Lauretti of Jerusalem Road have expressed interest in being a part of the committee alongside John Dunn of Schofield Road, who brought the idea forward to selectmen with Merle Brown.

Bixby, a member of the Cohasset High School class of 2001, is currently a candidate for a Bachelor of Science in Foreign Service (BSFS) at Georgetown University's Walsh School of Foreign Service in Washington, D.C. He expects to receive his degree with honors in International Politics, specializing in Trans-State Actors in World Politics this May.

Bixby has studied under the tutelage of Dr. David Jhirad, current Vice President for Science and Research at the World Resources Institute and former Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy for International Energy Policy, Trade, and Investment.

In his letter of intent Bixby writes, "I would enthusiastically undertake any assignment in the context of this committee, and participate in its work both in person while possible and by phone in all other cases. I am confident that my current location in Washington would serve as an asset to the committee; I am proximate to both international and federal sources of information, and perhaps financing. As part of my service on the committee, I would like to investigate the present and potential benefits to the town of federal — as well as Commonwealth — legislation encouraging renewable energy investment."

Willard has had a strong interest in renewable energy for many years and in his letter of intent said he has supported paying a higher rate on his electric bills to support the purchase of energy generated by renewable methods. He said he believes it is "a wonderful idea for Cohasset to begin the process of exploring new ways to provide power to the town and lessen our footprint on this earth."

Professionally, Willard has been in manufacturing sales for the past nine years and has worked with firms that are building and inventing new energy generation and storage devices. He has worked with firms in both the fuel cell and solar energy industry along with firms specializing in energy storage with a primary focus on transportation.

Lauretti told selectmen in his letter of intent for the position that he has background experience in project financing and operations of large natural gas fired cogeneration facilities. He also has experience in banking and private equity investments.

Interested candidates should submit a letter of intent to Town Manager Bill Griffin at 41 Highland Ave., or contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Residents say to schools: 'Show us the money'

Want regular budget updates

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department must be hearing the message loud and clear — taxpayers want to know where their money is being spent, citizen activists say.

To help encourage more public disclosure of the budget moving forward, a group of concerned residents have banded together to place a citizens' petition on the Annual Town Meeting Warrant, which will ask the School Committee as well as the town's Director of Finance to make budget figures available on a regular basis.

Proponents of the petition, Leonora and Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Raod, came before the Advisory Committee Thursday, Feb. 17 to present the article.

"We just want to see the numbers," said Leonora Jenkins, adding budget figures are public records and by law are available to residents at any time. "We are requesting to have the information available so citizens don't have to ask for it every month."

The petition comes in the wake of the town's passing a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 fiscal year 2005 budget override last spring to cover school costs, as well as the recent discovery of potentially $500,000 in unbudgeted and underbudgeted FY05 school costs. The school department has not yet come forward with any firm numbers regarding how much the FY05 deficit is, or how it will be paid for.

In addition, the school department is requesting a roughly 8 percent budget increase for FY06. The school department says because a little more than 4 percent of its total budget increase will be spent on Special Education out-of-district tuition costs, which are a school obligation mandated by the state, it is really asking for a little more than a 3 percent increase. The town has said it can afford to give the schools a 2 percent increase.

The petition asks for Town Meeting to approve a bylaw change, which reads: "The town Director of Finance and the School Committee will present to the Selectmen on a monthly basis an accurate monthly expense status report of the line items in their budget. This report shall indicate MTD (month to date), QTD (quarter to date) and YTD (year to date) figures. The information shall be available to the public at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Town Clerk's office and shall be updated on a monthly basis."

Advisory Committee member Merle Brown said one major factor which could affect whether the town and school departments are able to produce regular budget updates is whether there will be a cost associated with it. Director of Finance Michael Buckley said there will be no cost, adding "I do it already." Buckley, at the Board of Selectmen's request, said he has been providing monthly budget updates to the board for roughly the past six months.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters asked Buckley how difficult it would be for the schools to conform to the request. "For me, it's not difficult at all," said Buckley, adding the library has a mailbox where the information can be dropped off, and for him, the Town Clerk's office is right downstairs. Waters added the school department has a Web site which is constantly being updated, and the information could be posted there as well.

However, Brown said he wasn't sure the updates would be possible. "If you listened to what the School Committee said last time they were here, they can't even figure out last year's budget. How are they going to do it monthly?" Brown asked Buckley if he would see a problem with the School Committee being able to provide the information every month, to which Buckley replied, "No."

Waters added, "The community is entitled to the information. If the School Committee can't comply, that's going to raise a whole new set of questions."

Asking the School Committee to report its findings to the Board of Selectmen has raised some legal concerns. According to members of the Advisory Committee, as of Thursday's meeting, initial conversations with Town Counsel Paul DeRensis had indicated he was concerned both with the wording that says the School Committee will present its findings, as an elected board cannot be directed, and the fact that it would have to report to the Board of Selectmen which does not have authority over it.

Leonora Jenkins said however that she has been in touch with the Secretary of State's office and the State Attorney General's Office, and both has a different opinion than Town Counsel. "They don't see any reason why the School Committee can't report to the Board of Selectmen."

Separate for a reason

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said she has a problem with requiring the School Committee to present the figures monthly. She said the school department budget is separate from the town budget for a reason. She said the role of the School Committee is to not only deal with the finances, but to serve as an advocate for education. "Because of its separateness, you can advocate for the best public education," she said.

MacCarthy said the reporting of the FY06 budget this year has been "a step above what we've seen in past years," and she said while there may be a lag in the flow of information, "I think we're getting better and making headway." MacCarthy said keeping the two budgets separate is "for the good of the schools."

However, Advisory Committee member Roger Hill said the intention of the bylaw change is not to unite the two budgets. He said the purpose is to ensure that after the town is given its allocated amount of money, and after the money is spent in the best interest of the schools, there is a process that comes into effect to keep taxpayers informed. "We just want to know where it has been spent. Show us," he said.

The Advisory Committee said because there are some potential legal issues, it would like to speak to Town Counsel. The Jenkinses said they and other proponents would be willing to work with the town to craft some language that accomplishes everything the residents and the board wants and ensures the article is legal. Overall, the Advisory Committee said it was in favor of the bylaw. "This is exactly the kind of information the board has been asking for," said Waters.

The Jenkinses came before the Selectmen Tuesday, Feb. 22 to present the articles and it too said it would like feedback from counsel before making any recommendations. While Selectman Rob Spofford said he understands where the citizens are coming from, as he has been asking for regular budget updates from the school department for some time now, he said no one likes operating "with a hammer over their head." He suggested the board speak with Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh and the School Committee about the article before making any recommendations.

The Advisory Committee will be having weekly Thursday meetings to discuss Town Meeting Warrant articles until March 10. The School Committee was slated to vote on its budget Thursday, March 3 at the time the Mariner went to press, but there had been talk about postponing that vote in order to give the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Board time to weigh in on the budget. For more information, please contact the Town Clerk's office at (781) 383-4100 to check on meeting postings, or the Superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

Complementary TM article requests more financial info

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Citizens have signed a petition asking both the school department and town to provide monthly budget updates. As a complement, a second petition has also been floated which will ask Town Meeting to decide whether the town and school department should also provide monthly reports on all revolving and enterprise accounts.

Both accounts operate by taking in money for the services they provide. The petition would ask residents to approve a bylaw change which would read, "A detailed income and expense report with MTD (month to date), QTD (quarter to date), and YTD (year to date) totals shall be presented to the Selectmen on a monthly basis. All costs relating to fee for services, including: salaries, benefits, any and all insurance not limited to worker's compensation and liability, utilities, maintenance, repairs, cleaning, equipment updates, supplies, rent of space and all other applicable charges shall be reflected in expense totals. This monthly information shall be available to the public at the Paul Pratt Library and the Town Clerk's office and a yearly report shall be included in the Annual Town report."

Proponents of the article say the intent of the petition is only to request information. One of the article's proponents, Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, said by keeping track of the activity in the accounts on a regular basis, trends can be spotted, and potential deficits can be planned for in advance. "This can be used as a very helpful tool," she said. While there had been some concern the article was meant to spot deficits in programs and require full cost recovery moving forward, that is not the case. "Run it at a deficit if you want, just tell us you are," said Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Rd, also a proponent.

In an interview after the meeting, Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained the difference between revolving accounts and enterprise funds. He said revolving accounts charge users a fee

Correction to MBTA story

A page 3 story about Greenbush work in Cohasset that appeared in last week's Mariner should have said:

The town parking lot is the "knottiest problem we've come across," said Tom Gruber. He explained the mitigation agreement calls for 182 parking spaces and plans currently show 149.

The story incorrectly stated "The town parking lot is the 'naughtiest problem we've come across [emphasis added].'" The Mariner regrets the error.

There would be a double closing, transferring the property from the Cooks to the developer. The town was assured none of its money would be spent during the transaction.

A Request for Proposals was sent out to attract potential developers for the site, and a search committee was formed to make a recommendation to the Board of Selectmen on which senior housing proposal it felt would best suit the needs of the town. The board appointed the Northland Residential company in March, 2004. It was thought at that time the project, dubbed "The Villages at Deer Hill," would be complete by December 2006.

Selectman Fred Koed said in his opinion, when the article was presented at the Special Town Meeting in the fall of 2003, "We promised we'd go on site," with any wastewater disposal plans for whatever project was eventually presented. Tests on site concluded the soils would not be able to support the kind of wastewater the project would generate, and with different plans in place, he believes Town Meeting should be informed. He said articles were floated for the Special Town Meeting this year which would have asked the town's opinion on the wastewater issue, but they were withdrawn at the last minute. "Why were they withdrawn if that's what we wanted?" he asked.

McMorris said sewer has been a very contentious topic and there has been some concern that sewer capacity would be given to projects over existing residences. However, she said "There is a lot of capacity available from our neighboring town of Hull," and perhaps the town should begin looking to it as a viable solution.

But looking to gain a connection from Hull may only cause more problems.

Avalon, a proposed 200-unit apartment project slated to be built off Route 3A, has also been seeking a sewer solution and began talking with Hull about the prospect of purchasing capacity. If Avalon was able to secure a connection to Hull, its pipes would be laid down Route 3A and the Cook Estate pipes could potentially run down Sohier Street and connect to them. However, the Sewer Commission has not been receptive to allowing Avalon to open the road to install the pipes. Now, to allow the Cook Estate a connection to the Hull plant and allow it to open the streets would surely mean the Avalon lawyers would have a strong argument against the town. "The Sewer Commission would get crucified," said Selectman Rob Spofford.

McMorris said a few years ago, she met with Town Manager Mark Haddad and Dan Coughlin of Tutela Engineering to discuss the prospect of building senior housing on the Cook Estate property. She said at that time, the possibility of building 60 units was floated, as well as running a pipe through the Deer Hill school and down to Evergreen Lane.

"I hate to be the skunk at the garden party, but this doesn't seem to be going anywhere."

— Selectman Fred Koed

"That was probably before Avalon said it had room for 200 units," said Sewer Commission Chairman Raymond Kasperowicz.

Dormitzer reiterated the importance of the town's having a contingency plan with a smaller project as the second of two options, which could accommodate for sewer on-site and wouldn't affect any other projects in town.

"We don't have that option," said McMorris.

Selectman Chairman Michael Sullivan said the Cook Estate will not impact other projects and said, "You're giving the community the project they voted for."

"And worked for," said McMorris.

However, Koed said regardless of what the board would like to see in terms of wastewater solutions, "Town Meeting would have to approve it and we've got nothing on the Warrant."

"Then why didn't you draft one and bring it in?" asked McMorris.

Koed said the board stood up at Town Meeting and told the public there would be no sewer connection necessary for the project, "It's like bait and switch."

"It is not like bait and switch. Don't put us in a position like this," said Sullivan. "You're talking about this like you're someone who just came on the scene."

"Where have you been the past year?" asked Sullivan.

"The question was asked do you need sewer?" said Koed, adding the public was told no, and that's fine, but he thinks Town Meeting should decide whether it would still like to support the project if it is seeking a sewer connection.

"I think the reason it was pulled was because you didn't think the votes would be there," said Koed.

"You're unbelievable," said Sullivan.

Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee said she was at a meeting where the town held negotiations with the Cook Estate heirs and said she believes if the community examines all possible options for the project and determines what if any viable opportunities it has and brings that information back to the heirs, she believes they would have that discussion. "I believe they would talk if we've looked at every option, pros, cons, and all," she said. However, McGee said exploring every option will mean considering a Hull connection at full plan size as well as the possibility of downsizing the project to accommodate an on-site system.

"But, do we say there's a viable option, but we can't do it because it'll allow another project in?" asked McMorris.

"I don't think they care," said Dormitzer, as the deal with the Cook heirs is a business deal and any problems the town has aren't their concern.

Koed said in his opinion, downsizing the project should be considered, but the town will need to know just how much the soils can accommodate. He said because a decrease in the size of the project will yield less funds, the town may want to look at private fund-raising. "We built the library with town funds," he said. "I'm trying to be creative to save the project."

"If you think the project can be saved, what do we do?" asked McMorris.

"I don't know, I just don't believe it's the only option the way it's constructed right now," said Koed, adding the town needs a contingency plan. "I hate to be the skunk at the garden party, but this doesn't seem to be going anywhere."

McMorris floated a motion which asked each member of the Board of Selectmen to commit to the Cook Estate, the "town's project," and ask Town Manager Bill Griffin to begin discussing the purchase of capacity with the town of Hull. Koed suggested amending the motion to include also looking into alternate projects as a contingency plan to what has already been proposed.

However, Spofford said in his view, asking Griffin to begin negotiating with Hull supercedes the Sewer Commission's role and he thinks it is bad public policy for the board to overreach like that. He said he would amend the motion to allow the Sewer Commission to begin discussions rather than Griffin.

"Everybody's hot to go to Hull," said Kasperowicz, but he reminded the board running the pipe down 3A will open up the lines to everyone who lives in front of it. "This is steroid-induced growth, it's not natural growth," he said, which is extremely hard to plan for.

Roger Hill of Highland Avenue owns 166 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, the building which houses Good Sport and the Pizza Zone, and said if the pipe goes to Hull, "I'll be the first standing in line to hook my building up," and he expects many others would follow. He added there are roughly 100 acres of property which could be developed on the opposite side of 3A and if a sewer connection becomes available, "It would open an enormous can of worms," he said. "It needs to go back to Town Meeting. It's crucial."

The board agreed to form a committee, including Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee, Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Ronnie McMorris, Senior Housing Committee member Joe Nedrow, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, Town Manager Bill Griffin, and Town Counsel, to work throughout the next two weeks to come up with some solutions before the April 2 Town Meeting. The Warrant goes to the printer March 11.

Town Census forms due

The Town Census for 2005 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2005. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2004 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781-383-4100.

ZBA expected to rule against Avalon on town sewer access

150,000 gallons of wastewater per day. Therefore, any existing capacity needs to be reserved in the eventuality a plant expansion cannot completely accommodate that project, he said.

Bobrowski said Avalon has "jumped in the middle when the final picture is not drawn."

"Avalon is coming to us in the middle of the game," said Bobrowski, quoting what Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said during the public hearing. "What if Little Harbor takes more than 150,000 gallons per day capacity? Do we ask Avalon for the capacity back?"

Avalon expects to generate roughly 22,000 gallons of wastewater per day.

The ZBA expects that Avalon will appeal its denial of access to sewer capacity to the Housing Appeals Committee, the state arbiter on 40B project disputes. The ZBA granted Avalon a comprehensive permit with conditions roughly 15 months ago under 40-B, the state affordable housing law.

Conditions included Avalon's obtaining a ground water discharge permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection for its on-site system. But the Water Commission has appealed the ZBA's issuance of a comprehensive permit because it believes Avalon's on-site system could pollute Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. That appeal is still tied up in court.

Subsequently, the ZBA granted Avalon a modification to its comprehensive permit for sewer access subject to available capacity as determined by the Sewer Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction

The town has also not been receptive to allowing Avalon and other private projects to hook up to Hull's treatment plant. Hull has excess capacity to sell.

During Monday's deliberations, Chittick voiced what Avalon's likely argument would be before the Housing Appeals Committee. He reiterated what Avalon attorney, Steve Schwartz, has said, that the town – which has little affordable housing — has thrown up roadblocks to Avalon's efforts to find a way to dispose of its wastewater as a way to prevent the development.

If the Housing Appeals Committee rules for Avalon, then the ZBA could appeal that decision to Superior Court. The Sewer Commission can present evidence to the Housing Appeals Committee but it cannot be a party to the appeal, the ZBA said.

After 50 years we still think of Rockland affectionately as home.

THANKS FOR THE FIRST FIFTY

It will be fifty years this March since a young man from Dorchester named Bob Sullivan opened his place of business at 859 North Union Street in Rockland. With the unwavering trust and support of the people in this community, Bob Sullivan & Sons Washburn Tire became a fixture in the Rockland landscape. Whether they came in for new tires, used tires or retreads, customers were treated with a level of customer service that became the hallmark of the family business.

Today, Sullivan Tire has many locations throughout New England. Our family of Sullivan Tire employees has grown from 7 to close to 700. We owe a lot of that success to the people living and working in and around Rockland. Our pride and sense of community are deeply rooted in that very first Sullivan Tire location. While we have grown quite a bit, we remain on the same strong foundation. Thank you Rockland.

The Quilt Show at the Second Congregational Church draws people from all over the South Shore and beyond.

Annual Quilt Show benefits charities

For most of us, springtime can't arrive soon enough. But a taste of spring always arrives a little early with Cohasset's Annual Quilt Show and Luncheon, the first Saturday in March.

"When the idea of a small quilt show and elegant luncheon came to mind, we thought it would be just a one-time, cheerful way to spend a March Saturday," says Carol Sandblom, one of the event's original organizers. "It was not intended to be a fundraiser, but ... if we made a little money, it would go to charity. We must have struck a chord: over the past12 years we've shown 650 quilts and donated over $14,000 to charity."

This year, more than 60 quilts will be on display at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, March 5. Tickets are just $10 each and include a sit-down luncheon where volunteer waiters serve homemade strata, salads and a selection of desserts.

"It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

— Carol Sandblom, Quilt Show

"We decorate the tables with linens and beautiful flowers to help bring a hint of spring to the midst of winter," Sandblom added. "It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

The quilts displayed come from all over the South Shore and beyond. And each quilt has its own story which is shared in the show's program. This year's show includes an antique quilt dating back to 1885 which features fine embroidery stitching on satins, silks and velvets.

Cohasset resident Betsy Millard describes her "Grandchildren in Stitches" quilt as a sampler of sorts. Inspired by a photo she had taken of her grandchildren, Millard experimented with a variety of techniques including hand dying and painting fabrics, hand and machine appliqué, machine embroidery and snippets to create a fun, family heirloom.

All proceeds will be shared between the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Center's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets should be bought in advance at the Second Congregational Church next to Cohasset's Town Hall on Highland Avenue. Stop by the church office from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday to Friday, or call (781) 383-0345 for more information.

Beloved pediatrician will be missed

What many may not know is Sceery, after completing his undergraduate studies at Harvard, served as a communications officer in the Navy from 1943-1946.

"I was in the first LST (Landing Ship Tank) to land on Utah Beach on D-Day," Sceery said in the 1995 interview. "We discharged the Army and then had to wait for the tide to get back in.

"Fortunately there was a big cliff opposite where we landed and the German guns were not suppressed enough so all the missiles landed astern."

The GI Bill made it possible for Sceery to attend medical school at Yale where his mentor encouraged him to go into pediatrics. He completed his residency at Massachusetts General Hospital. There he met Dr. Leroy Eldredge, who a year ahead of Sceery, had started a pediatrics practice in Hingham and persuaded Sceery to come to the South Shore. Eldredge's urging and the appeal of Cohasset brought the Sceerys to town.

But as a young doctor in a new town, Sceery wasn't sure how quickly he'd gain acceptance.

"My first patient called on July 4, 1953 and I had to leave a party where people were trying to introduce me," he recalled. "The child had a high fever with no other signs. So I said it was roseola and he'd have a rash for three days.

"Then I sweated for three days until I was sure I was right."

Eldredge described Sceery as a "great pediatrician, who was very much loved by kids and parents."

He said even though Sceery's health was failing over the past year, his mind was as sharp as ever. "His body was giving him all kinds of problems, but his mind was flying," Eldredge says.

Eldredge takes pride in playing a role in persuading the Sceerys to come to Cohasset back when baby-boomers were being born and there weren't enough pediatricians. "We were so busy at the time with all the kids being born – it was a madhouse!" Eldredge says. "But he loved the water, so it was a good fit all around."

Jean Thompson of Reservoir Road worked with Sceery over 25 years: 10 years as a school nurse and 15 in his office.

"But we go back 50 years," Thompson said this week. "We moved to town in 1955, my son was ill and I knew I had to find a doctor and I found Dr. Sceery, who took care of my children and then my grandchildren.

"I can't say enough good things about him he was very caring, very compassionate," she said. "When he brought the child and mother into his office – it wasn't just about the child. He'd ask how everyone else was doing."

Thompson and her two sons, Douglas and Robert Jr., have written a letter to the Sceery family, that reads in part, "Dr. Sceery forever left Cohasset a better pace for his years of service and his countless acts of kindness. He had that rare combination of skill, instinct and compassion that made he the very best of physicians."

Sceery operated his practice at three locations – 109 N. Main St., 89 Ripley road, and 95 Atlantic Ave. He also served as the school doctor for more than 40 years. He was also a long-time member of the Board of Health and an outspoken advocate for worthy causes at Town Meeting. The Sceerys have six children and 17 grandchildren.

Ed Lincoln met Sceery the way so many parents did, through their children.

"After our first child was born, he had just moved to Cohasset and lived around the corner," Lincoln recalled. "We've known him and Phoebe ever since – it was the beginning of a long friendship."

Lincoln said Sceery was not only the family's pediatrician but he would also come over to give advice or fill out a prescription if Lincoln or his wife,

Dr. Robert Sceery, who passed away last Friday after more than 40 years as a pediatrician in town, takes care of one of his grandchildren.

Katherine ("Kay"), were under the weather. He said Sceery kept up his medical knowledge evening making rounds at Massachusetts General Hospital up to a year ago – and in walker, no less.

Not only was Sceery compassionate and kind, he was highly skilled and had great instincts.

During his "retirement" reception back in September 1997, some of Sceery's former patients stopped by to say hello. One such former patient was Mark Cigrino, who at age 7, was diagnosed with polio by Sceery.

"The other doctors thought it was impossible because I had been given the vaccine," Cigrino recalled in the 1997 interview. "But it turns out that Dr. Sceery was right after all and because of early detection and proper treatment, I was able to walk."

Sceery's son Michael, who lives on Atlantic Avenue, said his five sisters each inherited a trait from their dad, like his keen intellect that went to Amy, who is a doctor of psychology.

"But I'm the one who inherited Cohasset," Michael says, adding none of his siblings live in town. "I'm the lucky one to be part of this special community that my Dad appreciated so much."

While so many appreciated Sceery as a doctor and friend, Michael said he was also hard to top in the father department. Michael met his future wife, Helene, when she was working in Cohasset as an au pair for a local family back in the summer of 1978. They fell in love and months later Michael went to Paris to meet her family and ask her father for Helene's hand in marriage. But he was quickly turned down.

"'Certainly not,' Helene's father said," Michael recalled. When he telephoned his Dad with the news, Sceery told him not to worry and come home. But Sceery (who also used the trip to visit one of his daughters staying in the French Alps) booked a flight the next day. It was the end of February.

"He met with my (future) father-in-law and they hit it off," Michael says. "So Dad called me from Paris and said, 'How does the 7th of July sound?'

"Dad negotiated a great peace treaty with France," quipped Michael, adding his father-in-law was flying in to attend today's (Friday) memorial service for Dr. Sceery.

When Sceery was selected as Citizen of the Year, it was a heartfelt letter from one of his legions of fans that set the stage for the honor.

At the time, Barbara Meehan wrote, "professionally and personally, Dr. Sceery represents all that is good about Cohasset. He and his lovely wife, Phoebe, raised an outstanding family. His grandchildren are spectacular young people.

"Dr. Sceery's kindness and attention to the goodness and well being of Cohasset is unmatched."

For Dr. Sceery's obituary, see page 19. A memorial service will be held at Saint Anthony Parish today (Friday, Feb. 25) at noon followed by a reception for relatives, friends and patients.

Question of the Week

The selectman's and school committee races promise to perk up what could otherwise be a sleepy April 9 Town Election.

Former sewer commissioner Gary Vanderweil, former advisory committee member Debbie Shadd, and incumbent Selectman Fred Koed are in a three-way contest for two seats on the Board of Selectmen.

Leonora Jenkins and Pam Wilson are in a two-way race for the one-year seat on the School Committee. Alfred Slanetz is running for the three-year School Committee seat.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates in contested races. However, we would also like to invite Mr. Slanetz to participate in the School Committee questions even though he is unopposed. It would provide an excellent forum for him to share his views on the issues and let the voters get to know him.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Starting next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

The following is the first Question of the Week for both the selectman and School Committee candidates:

Prop. 2-1/2 overrides have become annual events and are often driven by school budget needs. What, if anything, can be done to reverse this trend?

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words) per week, from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or short statements on issues.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Getting priorities straight

TO THE EDITOR:

For once I agree with R. Murray Campbell. Personal accusations, self-serving agendas, and partisan maneuvering do nothing but distract us all from working together on the very big problems facing this very small town.

Having read several weeks' worth of letters about town sewer issues, full of accusations about Selectmen and underhanded tactics, I have yet to form an informed opinion about this issue (Little Harbor vs. Cook Estate). Both sides have valid points, but opinions and decisions should not be made based on who presents the most convincing legalese in the form of Letters to the Editor. It would be very helpful if the Mariner could run an in-depth review of this controversy, written by an independent journalist rather than a biased town resident, to help clarify the facts.

We need to get our priorities straight, in a hurry. Just imagine if all the energy put into those years of arguing over "beautification," underground utilities and wrought-iron fences had gone into figuring out how to develop truly affordable senior housing? Maybe we wouldn't be in this predicament today.

Sally Sisson

Please, get to the point!

TO THE EDITOR:

Could I suggest in the future that brevity in letter writing be suggested. In this past week's issue, two people wrote letters on Page 14, that quite frankly made my eyes glaze over. It was difficult to read their entire letters as they both took up half a page. (Or almost as there was one letter that took up about 2 inches.)

My feeling is if you want to make a point, make it quick. Having spent 25 years in the military, reports were short, concise, and to the point. The longer you wrote, the less people read.

More on merit pay for teachers

TO THE EDITOR:

I read with great interest Pat McGrail and Ed Leonard's response to my commentary (Cohasset Mariner, Feb. 18) on merit pay. It would be equally valuable to have the School Committee negotiating team share its thoughts.

Pat and Ed are accurate in saying that the performance of the Cohasset School District is in the top 5 percent of the State. It is also true that 20 years ago, Cohasset real estate taxes were in the mid-range of Massachusetts communities whereas we are now in the top 3 percent largely driven by disproportionate increases in school operating costs.

As I noted in my initial commentary, Cohasset should leverage its small School District with a high achieving student body to contain costs. The Boston Patriots are a "Dynasty" and yet their payroll was 24th out of 32 teams when it won Super Bowl XXXIX!

I am absolutely certain that if you transferred Cohasset teachers to Brockton, Boston, Lynn, Salem or many other communities; they would not be realizing near the performance levels that they are in Cohasset. We all know that Cohasset students are strongly motivated by the very upwardly mobile families that reside in Town.

Pat and Ed spoke of an average salary of $60,000 in other top performing school districts versus $50,448 for Cohasset. Of course those numbers aren't meaningful without further dissection of seniority levels, fringe benefits et al. However, for calendar year 2003 your(Pat/Ed) average salary was $69,927 and neither of you have ever functioned under a merit system. For calendar year 2003, there were 55 administrators and teachers in this small School District who earned more than $60,000. Not bad for a year punctuated with vacations and the summer off; or, about a 185-day work year versus about 220 longer days in the private sector.

What Pat and Ed will never agree to is to have different rates of compensation for outstanding versus average and mediocre teachers. I have no problem with an outstanding teacher like Tom O'Neill(foreign languages) being paid 20 or 30percent above those with similar seniority. I do have trouble with mediocre teachers being paid the same as outstanding teachers. In fact, it should be made much simpler to fire them.

I also believe that market forces should influence compensation. If it is difficult to attract foreign language, math and science teachers; the administration should be able to offer them greater compensation while reducing compensation for disciplines that may be glutted. As a starting point, why don't the negotiators consider accelerating the advancement of 20percent of the faculty while slowing the advancement of the bottom 20percentof performers?

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset train station needs pedestrian access

Recently, there have been two dramatic wakeup calls to some of us on the Board of Health about the state which we've reached with regard to getting around.

First there was a consensus recently to move the Cohasset MBTA station out of Town, a good thing, if one considered he had to drive to it.

The second was that someone seriously proposed running a shuttle to the waterfront from the Common if during the Festival on the Common in June there was to be an event of any importance on our waterfront. Now really, is it necessary to bus people a thousand feet from Town center to the Cohasset Harbor Inn? The second example is unthinkable to any reasonable person.

But having the MBTA (T) station up by the cemetery near North Main street, what about that?

Unfortunately, the current design of the (T) station in Cohasset has no pedestrian access. Naturally, the Board of Health is opposed to such a plan. As you may know, the Board sought and received Community Preservation funds to design a Rails With Trails pathway along parts of the (T) right-of-way. In many places, the (T) has agreed with the plan. Further, they planned pedestrian access from Hingham to the Cohasset Station, and from the Cohasset Station to Wompatuck Park, and even planned to pay for building these amenities.

This discussion with the (T) about walking represents one more example of the desperate need for people to change habits of a lifetime and get back their freedom from the bondage of the convenient car.

In December of 2003, Paul Smith of Alta Planning and Design, the Town's contractor for Rails with Trails under the Community Preservation grant, reported to the Board of Health his final technical assessment, stating among other things: "On Dec. 3, I forwarded a summary of our initial analysis for the rail-with-trail feasibility study.

"The MBTA's plans include a sidewalk on the south side of the railroad right-of-way (ROW) leading from the Cohasset Station into Hingham connecting to an existing sidewalk on the south side of East Street. The new sidewalk will be offset from the railroad centerline by about 20 feet.

"A similar facility should be considered linking the Cohasset Station into Cohasset. There are three options in the segment from Cohasset Station to Avenue Extension (King Street). 1) construct a path on the north side of the railroad ROW 2) construct a path on the south side of the railroad ROW

Our record speaks for itself

COMMENTARY

PAUL DERENSIS

Let us set the record straight regarding a series of unpleasant letters-to-the-editor in the Cohasset Mariner making reference to Town Counsel.

1. Perhaps the writers of Letters to the Editor do not know that Town Counsel is not a policy maker: we provide advice, and we implement the instructions we are given. Those unhappy with the success we have achieved while implementing instructions we are given are "shooting the messenger" when their ire is directed at Town Counsel. Does it make sense for unhappy letter writers lash out at the men and women serving in Iraq because they believe our Nation shouldn't be in Iraq? If you are opposed to the goals of the work we are doing, then act to change the instructions given to us to carry out.

2, At the request of the Sewer Commission, we have successfully defended Sewer Commission decisions to deny connections to a variety of developers who have sued the Town to force such connections. How our compliance with instructions and our winning such lawsuits for the town somehow means, as suggested in a recent Letter to the Editor, that we are to be thrown in and lumped with officials that are alleged to be "pro development" is beyond comprehension. Our record speaks for itself.

3. We, as advisor to Town Meeting, have been criticized for reporting that the proposed Little Harbor article was not a legal article. The Town Moderator writes in his Letter to the Editor that he informed proponents at town meeting that "the motion was in all likelihood legally ineffective." We agree with the Moderator because he is saying in essence the same thing we said at town meeting just using different words, and at town meeting we offered a revised version of the article that would openly clearly state that the motion, to use the Moderator's word, was "aspirational" and not enforceable. Never, however, did we advise, belittle or otherwise recommend the conclusion that the non-legal motion that was voted at town meeting should be completely ignored. We are mystified how responsible writers to this newspaper somehow can confuse an opinion on the lawfulness of a motion, with the issue of whether or not the wishes of town meeting should be ignored.

We are mystified how responsible writers to this newspaper somehow can confuse an opinion on the lawfulness of a motion, with the issue of whether or not the wishes of town meeting should be ignored.

3. We wrote a Little Harbor implementation and funding article for the December special town meeting warrant, which article was, by action of others, not included on the warrant, and we provided the language for a revised version of the citizen-sponsored Little Harbor motion to give Town Meeting the comfort of having before it a lawful Little Harbor motion for the citizen article, all as we were instructed by the Town Manger to do.

We supplied such a motion to the Town Manager for him to use as he saw fit in accordance with the standing instructions to us regarding warrant articles. We had no idea that our help was controversial as we provide such assistance with regard to the warrant and the articles as a whole routinely, and did not know until Town Meeting was underway that our revised motion had not been shown to or discussed with the Town Moderator or the article proponents. This was a misunderstanding between the town manager and ourselves, and we apologize to those upset members of CEES for that misunderstanding — we thought such consultation was being done by others and we were only trying to help.

4. We are mystified at the false charge of "gamesmanship" at town meeting, when in fact we did arrive at town meeting on time, we did return all telephone calls that we are aware of, we did comply with all instructions given to us. Although we are accused of "twice at Town Meeting [he] declined to proffer opinion to the meeting", in fact exactly the opposite happened: to the contrary, we spoke twice to town meeting to explain our reasoning on the Little Harbor citizen article and to offer a more lawful version of the motion should it serve the town.

5. We fail to understand the writers of Letters who blast us for defending the Town's performance of the Second Amended Judgement, condemning us because we take positions that have the effect of opposing the payment by the taxpayers of penalties and fines. However, our instructions have been to do all we can to avoid financial loss and exposure to the Town, and so far we have been very successful in protecting the town. Perhaps rather than criticizing our defending the town by all lawful means, instead please consider that our success rate in accomplishing the instructions given to us should by any fair standard result in effusive thanks and praise.

We protect the town of Cohasset from harm. We do not deserve the unpleasantness directed our way in certain recent letters. We are good at what we do, and have been very successful at keeping the town safe.

What would sanity look like to you?

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

I was at a meeting the other day when someone sharing used the word "sanity". My mind wandered off on the topic of sanity and its opposite. I wondered, "What would insanity look like to me?" First I envisioned a couple having a bitter argument, each attempting to prove themselves right and the other wrong, and both becoming deeply entrenched in hostility. Then came an old Hollywood movie image of a mad person in a straitjacket in an outdated mental institution, gibbering and drooling.

These thoughts led me to: "What would sanity look like to me?" This proved a remarkably fruitful question. You might want to think about it yourself now, before you read on. What would sanity look like to you?

What came to me was:

• Sanity is when people relate to each other with love and mutual support, as if each individual is a vital part of creation.

• Sanity is living a meaningful day-to-day life. What makes life meaningful? It is when we participate in life with all our parts—our intellect, our instincts, our bodies, our soul and our feelings. When we think deeply and feel deeply.

• Sanity is feeling and experiencing a close, visceral connection with Earth, with Nature. Why? Because when you actually feel and experience your connection, your identity with Earth as your self, you stop hurting your self, or at least begin the process of stopping. Stopping hurting yourself is a sign of sanity.

• Sanity is when people don't destroy the natural systems that make life possible on Earth. Bluntly stated, when people don't crap in their own nest. (Don't you hate when that happens?) For example, it is now widely accepted, even by President Bush, that carbon dioxide emissions have already begun changing global climate, and drastic effects are anticipated within 25 to 50 years. We now has a commission, not widely publicized, making plans to deal with low coastal areas of Massachusetts becoming permanently submerged.

How do we move from this insane lifestyle to a sustainable one?

A society of sane, intelligent people would invent creative ways to stop this insane behavior. It's possible. It's good for the economy. Wind turbines, solar panels, ocean wave generators, sustainable public transit, green buildings, Smart Growth, . . . the list is endless. Instead we persist in our insanity and denial. We act as if we are helpless, powerless, and stupid. I think I'm living in an insane culture that thinks it's sane.

• Sanity is when a person thinks, each time they drive a car, use electricity, or turn up the heat, "I am now adding more emissions to the atmosphere. I'm contributing to smog. I'm adding filth to the air I need to breathe to stay alive." In a sane person, this would lead to altered behavior. A sane person would act in their own self-interest, and find ways to live that sustain Earth's ecosystems. Instead, we keep doing the same behavior over and over again, expecting a different outcome. This is one definition of insanity.

• Sanity is when a person thinks about using toxic pesticides, herbicides, insecticides, and synthetic fertilizers and concludes, "No, eventually these toxics will follow the watershed into my drinking water supply, and I'll be drinking toxic water."

How do we move from this insane lifestyle to a sustainable one? I don't know. I don't have pat, ready answers. What I do have is a vision of homes and workplaces heated by the sun, using electricity from wind turbines and photovoltaic panels. A vision of people supporting each other emotionally and spiritually. People enjoying a blissful connection with all of Nature. People walking and biking, riding convenient public transit powered by renewable electricity. How do we get there from here? Are we stuck in that New England conundrum, "You can't get there from here."?

I believe we have to start with ourselves, one person at a time, by ending denial, with accepting that our lifestyle is destroying the air, water, soil and species that keep us alive. Feel the pain of what we're doing to Earth. Let go of our guilt. Ask for guidance in moving toward a sustainable life.

Koed announces reelection bid

The days ahead will test Cohasset and its leadership. This will not be easy, but that is precisely why Selectman Fred Koed has chosen to run again. Stepping down now, when the going is tough, is not an option for him.

In over 18 years of public service to the town, Fred has always acted on a single principle: What is best for the Town of Cohasset? Recently he analyzed our Town's current situation as follows:

• The past two years have presented challenges, the outcome of which will significantly affect the character and direction of our town. I hope to continue as selectman during this critical period, continuing to bring commonsense and the perspective of a lifelong resident to the table. Now, more than ever, I believe I can make a difference.

• Cohasset is divided not only on issues, but also on the ways we choose to achieve our goals. We all want to balance budgets; maintain excellence in education; provide affordable housing for seniors; preserve the character and open spaces that define Cohasset; protect our water resources; and plan for and manage development. My goal is to represent these separate interests to the best of my ability while making sure it is in the best interest of Cohasset residents.

Fred Koed

• Cohasset is a wonderful town with great people. I am thankful to the people who elected me, and I am asking for one of your two votes on April 9, 2005.

Fred grew up in Cohasset, moving here in 1961 at the age of 9, and attended Cohasset schools. He and his wife, Lisa, raised their family in their home on Pleasant Street. Their daughters Ashley (22) and Mariel (18) both graduated from the Cohasset school system.

A systems analyst for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Fred holds a Master of Science degree in Public Affairs from the John W. McCormack Institute, and a BA from U Mass Boston. In 1990, Fred was appointed by the Governor as Commissioner on the State Board of Registration of Real Estate Brokers — a position he continues to hold.

Fred Koed has demonstrated his interest and abilities in all aspects of Cohasset governance through the number and variety of boards and committees upon which he has served: Advisory Committee (appointed by the Troika, 1983-1987), Fair Housing Committee (appointed by Selectmen, 1987-1989), Housing Authority (appointed by the Governor,1987-1992), Water Commission (elected, 1994-1997), Selectman (elected,1999-present).

Fred has served as chair on three boards, the Advisory Committee (1985-1987), Water Commission (1994-1997) and Board of Selectman (2001/2002.) — appointment to three separate boards by three independent entities recognizes Fred's ability and reflects his leadership qualities. Election to two offices confirms our community's belief in his commitment.

Ron Goodwin is Chair of Fred Koed's campaign committee. If you are interested in learning more about Fred's positions, or wish to become involved in his campaign, please call Fred at 781-383-6640.

Rating the presidents

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I guess they're right when they say it's not what you've done, it's what have you done lately.

A poll commissioned by Washington College in Chestertown, Md., has placed George Washington no higher than seventh on the list of greatest presidents, just below Bill Clinton and George W. Bush.

Boy, if that isn't guaranteed to frost both Rush Limbaugh and Barbara Streisand in one fell swoop, I don't know what is!

It's a popular academic pastime, ranking the presidents, one that stirs dormant passions in History 101 and gives members of an older generation a chance to grimace smugly, shake their heads and say, "These kids . . ."

Usually Abraham Lincoln wins hands down with Washington or FDR, depending on the prevailing political wind direction, finishing a strong second.

Personally, my favorite presidents never appear on anyone's list of the greatest...

Abe wins in the Washington College poll, too, but Ronald Reagan is right behind, which leads me to believe that "Knute Rockne, All-American," and "Bedtime for Bonzo," must have been the most recent double feature at the Student Union.

FDR was behind the Gipper in the poll and Jack Kennedy rounded out the top six, possibly because his term lasted less than three years and he didn't have time to pile up an impressive list of enemies.

I think it was John Collins, the former mayor of Boston, who recommended to a friend of mine that he "enjoy your first day in office because everything from here on is downhill."

Personally, my favorite presidents never appear on anyone's list of the greatest, or if they do they are far down near the bottom because, as far as I'm concerned, the critics are using the wrong criteria.

One of them is John Tyler, who is best known as the Tyler in "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too," the election-winning slogan of William Henry Harrison's campaign for the presidency in 1840.

Tyler had 14 children who lived to maturity, as they used to say before the days of incubators and the Salk vaccine. He had seven before he became president in 1941 and seven after he left the office, the last one at age 70 when his first would have been 45.

Marrying a young wife when the old one died helped but it's still an accomplishment.

In his later years, Tyler was elected to the Confederate House of Representatives from Virginia but he died before taking his seat.

Another is Warren Harding, who is usually written off by the pollsters as one of the few complete duds ever to live in the White House.

As a senator and with the enthusiastic help of a nubile young lady 30 years his junior, he managed to conceive a child on a couch in his senate office and continued to meet her as president in a 25-square-foot closet off the Oval Office.

Harding was also the first black president, if you believe the handbills that were circulated during the 1920 campaign by one William Estabrook Chancellor, a professor of economics, politics, social sciences and white supremacy at Wooster College.

The story was that Harding's great great grandfather Amos was from the West Indies. It didn't bother Harding. "How do I know?" he told a reporter. "One of my ancestors may have jumped the fence."

Marlette steps down from Moderator post

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After four terms of running unopposed over 12 years, Town Moderator George Marlette has decided not to campaign for the position and will hand the reins to Dan Evans.

Although Marlette had pulled nomination papers for this year's election soon after papers became available, Evans, of Howard Gleason Road, decided recently to run for the position. Marlette said Evans called him personally to let him know he would also be running, pledging a campaign of honesty and integrity. After letting the idea percolate, Marlette said he decided Evans would be the right man for the job.

"We found someone else who wants to take on the role," said Marlette, adding with the complexity and intensity of recent Town Meetings he was surprised to hear there was someone new who would be interested in serving in that capacity. However, he said after giving it some thought, he was glad to step down from the post and feels Evans is a very sharp lawyer who will serve the town well.

"He is a very capable individual and a bright lawyer who has paid his dues," said Marlette of Evans, adding if he had been told he could no longer be moderator, but would be responsible for choosing his successor, Evans would have been on his list of recommendations.

Marlette said Evans, "will be a straight shooter," adding he has many fond memories of Evans, then a member of the Advisory Committee, approaching him over the years to congratulate him on a meeting well done. Marlette said it was always nice to receive that positive reinforcement.

"I would never leave the town in the lurch with someone who was not qualified," said Marlette, adding if someone else had decided to run for the position whom he didn't think was capable of carrying out the duties in a way the town of Cohasset expects, he would have run again. However, he believes the town has found someone very well suited for the job in Evans.

"He is a very capable individual and a bright lawyer who has paid his dues."
— George Marlette

"I never knew when my time would come," said Marlette, but said he had a wonderful 12 years and would like to leave on a high note. "I don't want to be one of those people who stays too long at the fair," he said. However, with the anticipation of opening a new law office on Brook Street in Cohasset in just a few weeks and many other positive things going on in his life right now, "Certainly I'm not lacking for things to do," he said.

In fact, Marlette said not serving as Moderator will most likely cause him to become more involved in community activities. He said because he took his role very seriously, he was very careful not to express opinions or get caught up in politics that may be discussed at Town Meeting. "I never viewed it as a political position," he said, which was part of the reason a campaign for him was out of the question.

Although Evans is currently out of state, Marlette said he was able to get in touch with him to congratulate him personally before word got out he hadn't returned his papers. He said he has invited Evans to be his special guest at the April 2 Town Meeting, the last meeting he will preside over, and will formally introduce him to the community.

"What I'll miss the most is declaring the winners of the election," said Marlette, who said he will no double feel nostalgic when he declares Evans the new Moderator after the polls close. "I think of what has been accomplished on my watch and I'm proud," he said, adding its been great to see the number of residents who participate at Town Meeting continue to grow. He said it has also been fascinating to oversee the Town Meeting process as the town entirely rebuilt its infrastructure, bringing in a new Town Manager form of government. "Certainly I've done my best," he said.

Grimm have been residents of the town since 1981. She has seen her three children through the school system and was very involved in school programs such as the PSO and CMHS School Council. In addition, she served on the Advisory Committee from 1997 to 2003, and served as Vice Chairman for a time. She said she greatly enjoys working on policy issues and looks forward to the challenges ahead.

Koed has served in various capacities of town government for the past 19 years, including the Board of Selectmen since 1999, serving as chairman (2001-2002); a three-year term on the Water Commission, serving as Chairman during part of his term; two three-year terms on the Housing Authority; and one three-year term on the Fair Housing Committee. He was also on the Advisory Committee where he was also Chairman for a time.

The race for School Committee will be for two separate seats — a one-year and a three-year. The one-year seat was recently vacated by Chartis Tebbetts, who resigned from her post Feb. 2, the last day a resignation could be offered in order for the seat to be considered open during the election.

Dismayed with the current political climate in Cohasset, Tebbetts said the lack of public support shown to volunteer committees and the distrust of public officials had become disheartening and she felt her time could be better spent in another role.

Vying for Tebbett's seat are Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, and Pamela Wilson, 80 North Main St. Jenkins said she feels it is time for the schools to no longer be an island, but be an integral part of the community, with everyone working together for the good of the students, and she can help make that happen.

Wilson said with 12-year-old twins in the middle school, she is looking for a way to become more involved, and looks forward to becoming a part of the process.

Both Chris Allen, 21 Pleasant St., and Alfred Slanetz, 14 Nichols Rd., pulled papers for the three-year seat being vacated by Chairman Rick Shea, but only Slanetz returned his. Allen also pulled papers for the Housing Authority, returned those papers. Shea decided not to seek reelection due to the commitment he has to his job at Momenta Pharmaceuticals in Cambridge, as he has been increasingly experiencing time commitment conflicts.

Looking to fill three open seats on the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees are Rodney Hobson, who is running for the first time and will replace Roger Whitley, and incumbents Roger Lowe and Sheila Evans.

After 12 years, the town will see a new Moderator as George Marlette has decided not to run against Dan Evans to retain his post. Marlette has always run uncontested (see sidebar).

Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt's term is expiring and he is running unopposed, as is Stuart Ivimey for the Planning Board, Robin Lawrence for the Board of Health, Mary Granville for the Board of Assessors and Marion Douglas for Town Clerk. There is currently no one running for an open seat on the Recreation Commission. Douglas said that candidate will be written in by voters. She said the resident who receives the most votes can take the seat if they choose, but it is not required.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said everyone who returned papers has been certified. The election will be held April 9.

Zoning talks are under way

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting is a little more than one month away, and this year zoning article hearings are taking place earlier, to ensure voters are well informed and issues are well vetted to avoid confusing last-minute changes.

Currently, there are five zoning articles on the warrant, most of which have been brought forth by residents as citizens' petitions, as a way to help meet the goals of the Master Plan, specifically by helping maintain the character of the town.

While each is still a work in progress, some will look familiar, as they have previously been presented to the public in various incarnations.

The Demolition Delay bylaw was withdrawn at last year's Annual Town Meeting, but has undergone some changes and is back in the form of a citizen's petition as well as an article sponsored by the Historical Commission. The two will most likely combine before the Warrant is printed, as they serve the same purpose - to protect and preserve buildings of significance. The bylaw would put plans to demolish a structure on hold for six months to allow time to consider whether a building can be restored and see what other alternatives to demolition are available.

Specifically, all buildings which are listed on the National Register of Historic places, the Massachusetts State Register of Historic Places, and "HT" or town of Cohasset Heritage Trail houses would be subject to the bylaw, as well as buildings 100 years or more which have either architectural, cultural, economic, political, or historical significance. The bylaw has been changed from encompassing buildings 50 years or older to buildings 100 years or older from last year's version. In addition, this year's article has been presented as a zoning bylaw rather than a non-zoning bylaw, which will allow the Building Inspector to enforce it by withholding demolition permits.

"It is just a delay, it is not a prohibition," said Tom Callahan, one of the proponents of the article, adding the hope is that during the six-month delay period, a solution will be found to save the building. If not, at least the abutters were notified of any major changes prior to the demolition.

The bylaw will apply to any buildings that meet the criteria, meaning commercial buildings are subject to the bylaw as well. Callahan said it is important to keep in mind, just because a building is more than 100 years old does not mean it will be subject to the bylaw, as it must be of historical significance.

The Large Home Site Plan review, which was passed by voters at last year's Annual Town Meeting, last year will come before voters again for an amendment, which will "give it more teeth," said Mark DeGiacomo, one of the proponents of the article.

The large house review is triggered when construction plans for a home exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet. Plans under the bylaw must take abutters into consideration, as well as the surrounding neighborhood.

Currently, plans for large homes must come before the Planning Board for a public hearing process. However, the Planning Board currently only facilitates a discussion which ensures abutters are informed of plans for the large home.

The new bylaw would require large homes to receive a special permit from the Planning Board. Currently the process is highly discretionary and the new special permit process would have a set of criteria for the Planning Board to follow.

The large house site plan review bylaw was originally drafted to help avoid situations like 3 Jerusalem Lane from happening again, by giving notice to abutters prior to construction. Demolishing an existing home at 3 Jerusalem Lane and replacing it with a structure three times its size caused an uproar in town that lasted months.

Another bylaw being proposed as a result of 3 Jerusalem Lane is a new construction bylaw. The bylaw would require a hearing any time there are plans for enlargement of a structure on a non-conforming lot.

The Earth Removal bylaw has been written to "bring back ledge protection in another form," during construction, said DeGiacomo. He said removal, addition, or moving around of earth can be a real issue when construction is taking place, and this bylaw would set the threshold for what can and cannot be done "We're not trying to regulate what you do on your lot," said DeGiacomo, but it will provide a broad set of criteria for land alteration.

The Scenic Road Bylaw would be another bylaw to protect the town's character by providing protection to stone walls and trees located on roads designated as being scenie. DeGiacomo said often residents believe their property lines extend to the street and can therefore make alterations, but that is not the case, and the land is often owned by the town.

By designating roads as scenic roads, a public hearing process would be put in motion if a resident would like to make any changes on that property. The bylaw, if passed, would not designate any roads as being scenic at this time, but would begin the process which would one day allow the town to make those distinctions.

The Planning Board will continue its public hearings on the articles March 2, except for the Demolition Delay bylaw which will be taken up March 9. The articles will also be presented to the Board of Selectmen in the coming weeks.

3) construct a path along North Main Street

"The MBTA plans show significant wetlands on the south side of the railroad ROW between Cohasset Station and Avenue Extension (King Street) which may preclude constructing a path here. The Board of Health stated that wetlands along North Main Street probably would preclude construction of a path or sidewalk there as well. At the moment there appears to be potential for locating the path on the north side of the railroad ROW.

"Also, we suggest that the MBTA construct a pedestrian crossing of the railroad as part of the Cohasset Station Access Road grade crossing. This would allow pedestrians to access North Main Street where they are allowed to walk along the roadway shoulder. In addition the crossing would connect to sidewalk or path leading to Avenue Extension."

Later when Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, Ombudsmen for the Town, studied the plans, they found that the (T) was going to construct a maintenance road along the north side of the tracks the whole distance from the (T) station to King Street. Such a road could be used by pedestrians to connect sidewalks of the Town at King, North Main, Ave. and the rest of the Town to the North Cohasset (T) station. The roadway would be 25 feet wide but, as plans now stand, it would be fenced to prevent public access. To change the roadway to public use would require relocating an existing planned fence to the South side of the maintenance road and creation of a designated pathway along the north side of the maintenance road. The separation between the tracks and the path would be the same 20 feet width planned for pedestrian access from Hingham to the Cohasset (T) station.

This discussion with the (T) about walking represents one more example of the desperate need for people to change habits of a lifetime and get back their freedom from the bondage of the convenient car. There's a good reason! Cars kill more than 30,000 people annually in accidents; more, if you count generally poorer health of those who don't walk enough. Forbidding pedestrian access to the Cohasset (T) station will reduce ridership, and deprive the an estimated 20 percent of those riding on the (T), the means they would ordinarily choose, to access the station.. By approving plans for pedestrian access, the (T) is , in a small way, reducing dependence on cars and signaling that they favor healthy habits for Cohasset and their other rider communities.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 8

Nichols Road writers were on the mark

TO THE EDITOR:

In a Commentary in the Feb. 11, 2005 Cohasset Mariner, two Nichols Road contributors to an earlier issue of the Mariner were called wrong for asserting that the town of Cohasset has failed to fulfill its legal obligations under the Second Amended Final Judgement (SAFJ). It does not seem that the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) would agree with the Commentary.

In a letter to the Chairman of Board of Selectmen dated Dec. 22, 2004, the DEP states that Cohasset has not implemented the Waste Water Management Plan as required by the SAFJ and further comments on what in their view are the town's woefully inadequate efforts to implement the Waste Water Management Plan. It goes on to state that "The Department is prepared to take whatever action it deems necessary and appropriate to bring the town into compliance with the Second Amended Final Judgment, including by assessing civil penalties."

In their letter, the DEP called for a meeting on Jan. 21, 2005 with representatives of the town and the Attorney General's Office the purpose of which was to discuss modifying the Second Amendment Final Judgment to include the schedule for sewering of Little Harbor and to discuss the town's penalty liability.

I would say that the Nichols Road contributors had it right.

which is used to help offset some of the cost of producing the services, while enterprise funds are designed to cover 100 percent of the costs incurred to ensure funding will not need to be compensated with a tax levy.

While it is desirable for revolving accounts to cover the full cost of a program, he said that is not always the case, but the opposite can also be true and programs which are part of revolving accounts have the option of charging users enough for the program to make a profit.

Buckley said the town has three enterprise funds which are set up for the water department, the North Cohasset Sewer and the Central Cohasset Sewer, which would be monitored if the bylaw is adopted. However, the "big four" revolving accounts —the school lunch program, the KEDS (or kindergarten extended day school program), the athletic department budget, and the recreation department budget — would likely spark more interest.

Leonora Jenkins said the schools charge a fee to the recreation department for use of facilities that covers all costs associated with the building, including cleaning, and that is a model other programs operating in the school should follow. "Included in the fee is enough to cover all the costs to ensure they don't get put on the taxpayers or on the children by taking money out of the school budget," she said.

Leonora Jenkins said the same should be done for programs which are run by the school department, such as the KEDS program, and the school lunch program, which for many years was operating at a deficit and not covering all operational costs.

However, School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said currently, the school lunch program is "finally making money," and she said the KEDS program is paying for all of its employee salaries and benefits. "It is self-supporting, it is run by the schools, and it is taking care of our children," she said of the KEDS program.

Buckley said the school lunch program is now able to cover the salaries of employees and the cost of food, but not the employee benefits. In fact, he said the only revolving account that is able to pay for its employee benefits is the KEDS program.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said depending on the level of detail residents would like to see, the town could be able to provide monthly updates immediately, without any bylaw changes. He said quarterly to date updates may be an issue depending on the level of detail requested, but he said the town can definitely provide general monthly reports with a bottom line figure.

With the town on board, Leland Jenkins, said in the interest of openness, he doesn't see any reason why the School Committee wouldn't want to do the same. Advisory Committee member James Gilman said with the schools providing constant updates, the budget will be "much easier to unravel."

"And if there is a problem, we can help," said Leland Jenkins, rather than waiting until the last minute to find out there is a problem, after available funds have already been spent.

Cohasset grapplers pin down first state title in team history

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset can call itself home to a state champion.

Led by the performances of Joe Kehoe, Dave McKenna and Shane Dorian, all of whom won individual state titles, the Skippers edged out Foxboro for their first Div. 3 state championship in the program's history.

"That's just awesome, to win it as a team. It shows that our program is at a whole new level."
Torin Sweeney, Cohasset wrestling coach

All the hard work and long days in the wrestling room paid the ultimate dividends last weekend at Taconic Regional High School in Pittsfield. Torin Sweeney was a proud coach afterwards.

"That's just awesome, to win it as a team," he said. "It shows that our program is at a whole new level."

Sweeney said his team was confident going in that something special could happen.

"If we wrestled to the best of our ability, and things worked out well, we knew we could win or at least be in it," he said.

Matt Casey - one of six seniors on the team, along with Kehoe, Matt Baroudi, Jonathan Littauer, Kevin Dinsmore and Colin Regan - said earlier this week it was a measure of pride for the seniors to go out on top.

"It's good to be the first ones to win a team title," Casey said. "We've worked hard together for four years."

Cohasset earned 128.5 team points, with Foxboro coming in second with 116. The next three were Mount Greylock (105), Duxbury (85) and Mansfield (83).

After winning a title last year at 140, Kehoe competed three weight classes higher this year and won his second straight state title, the first athlete in Cohasset history to do so.

"It's really impressive to do that, no matter what classes you're competing in," Sweeney said.

In the semifinals, Kehoe defeated last year's state champ from the 152-pound division. That match was a nail-biting 6-5 decision.

The finals weren't nearly as close, as Kehoe took a 9-1 decision over Winchester's Adam Fiorenza.

In the 140-pound division, Dorian defeated Rockland's Jackie Erickson in the final; the same Erickson who had beaten Dorian at the sectional finals. Sweeney said he and assistant coach Peter Buckley suggested some minor tactical changes in the way Dorian approached his Rockland opponent, and it worked to perfection in a 5-3 decision in the state final.

"Shane executed it to a T," Sweeney said. "He did exactly what we wanted him to do. He had a different approach on the mat and how he attacked him."

Dorian said this week it was a goal of his to get revenge on Erickson.

"It was nice to get some closure for the year," Dorian said. "I wanted to redeem myself."

The number-2 seed in the 145-pound weight class, McKenna defeated the first seed in the final. The match was tied at two in the third period, but McKenna took down his opponent with about 30 seconds left and rode him out for the victory.

McKenna had been hurt for a good part of the year, but has truly rounded into top form. The junior's competitive side almost got the best of him during December's Marshfield tournament, where he wanted to wrestle through his injury.

Girls hoops motivated for tournament run

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Patriots have Belichick. The Red Sox have Francona. And the Lady Skippers have Levangie.

What do all three men have in common? A keen ability to both motivate their players and earn their respect.

John Levangie expected the graduation of 2004 would lead to some significant holes in his 2004-2005 squad. After all, he lost the outside shooting of Jen Buckley and the height of Ashley Faber.

So he set out to redesign the game plan with only five returning varsity players.

Like Belichick and Francona, Levangie played the card dealt to him.

He also relied on his able assistants Kay Long, Matt Salerno and his son, Jack Levangie to carry out many of the details. He cast his players in different positions. He re-wrote his tactics in the face of unanticipated injuries.

Tournament seedings and schedules will be posted on the MIAA website this afternoon at www.miaa.net.

When the bell rang at the end of the regular 2004-2005 season, John Levangie's team had posted a very impressive 12-8 record. Few other coaches can hold a candle to Levangie's ability to motivate high school athletes.

So the Lady Skippers sail into the playoffs for the second year in a row. And it is no accident that 2004-2005 represents Levangie's second year in Cohasset as well. The beginning of a "dynasty"? Who can predict where this journey will take us?

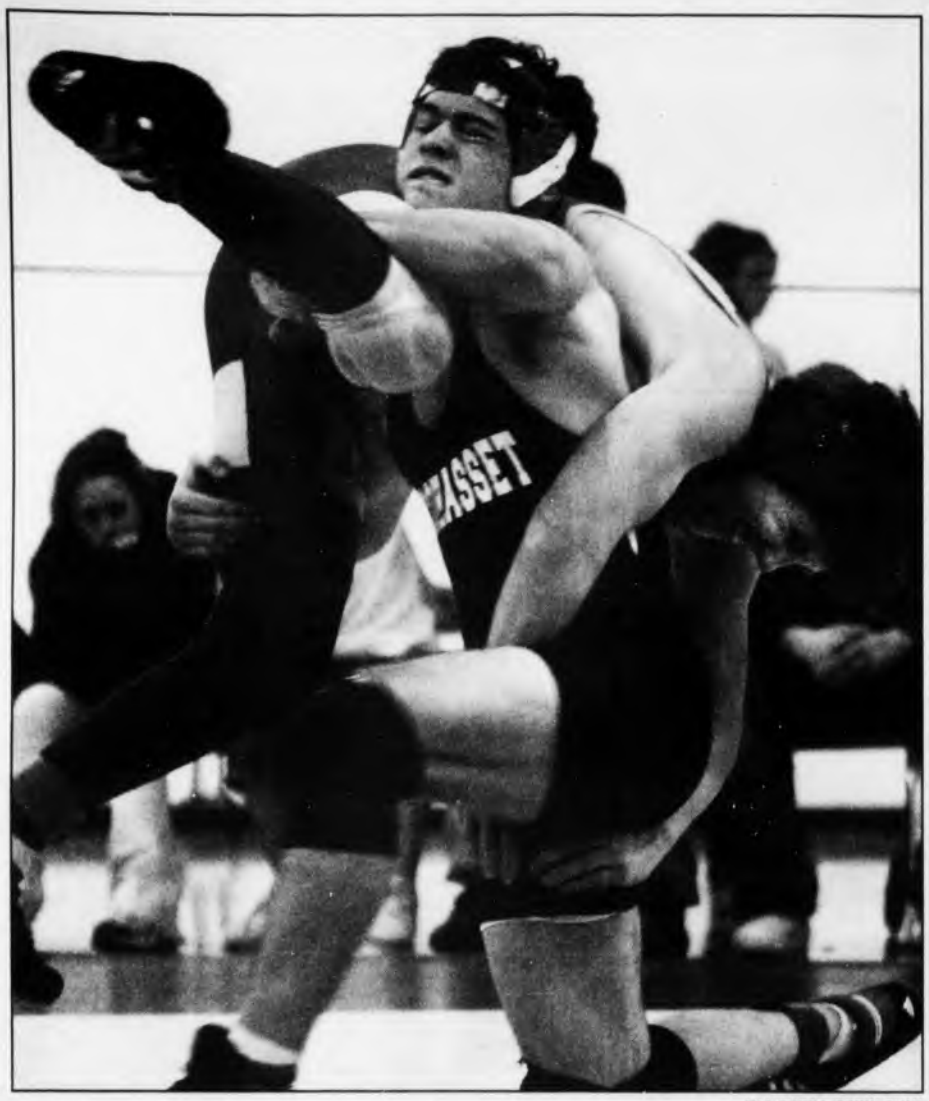
The Lady Skippers have now officially entered the crunch time of tournament play. They carry with them the momentum gained from their last regular season game, a sweet 47-42 victory against Hopedale. Earlier in the season, Cohasset had lost to this team.

As reflected by the tight score, this contest proved no cake walk for Cohasset. Hopedale's unrelenting fast breaks and quick defense kept the Skippers on their toes.

Yet, Cohasset's equally tough defense stopped Hopedale from running up the score beyond reach. Co-captain Nicole Whitney shut down Hopedale point guard Lakia Cowens.

Co-captain Casey Anderson posted 21 points while Whitney contributed 11. Freshmen Meg Anderson's confidence at the point guard position helped the Skippers keep their composure. Sophomore Lacey Richardson and junior Katie James did their part by ripping down rebounds like there was no tomorrow.

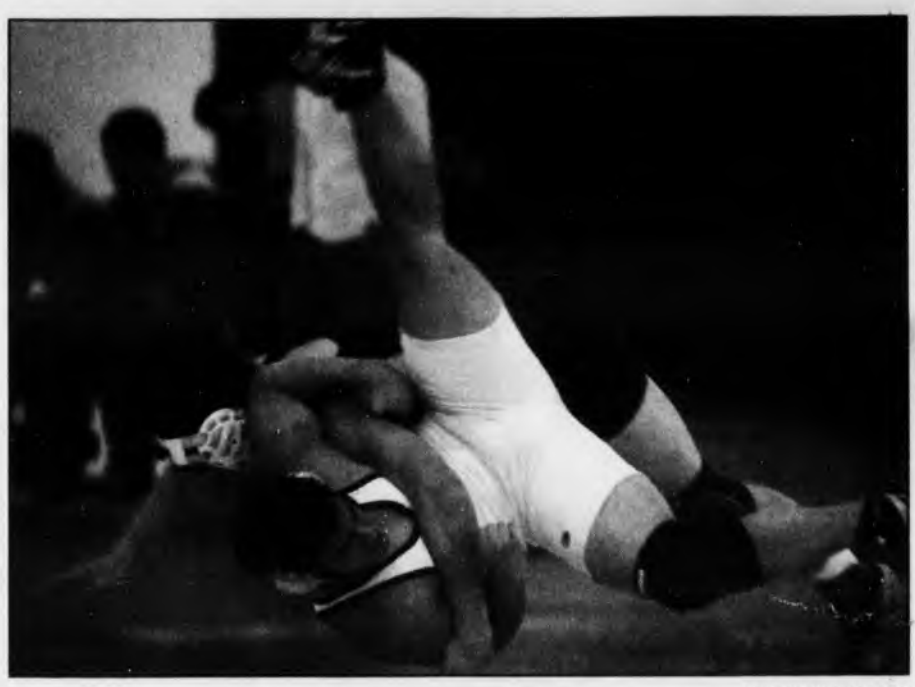
After the Hopedale game Coach Levangie ordered up a week of rest. Now the preparation for the tournament has swung into high gear.



"To succeed in the postseason, we need to work as a unit," said Casey Anderson. "We can't change anything big that we've been working on in the regular season. If we just play to our full potential, we could definitely go far."

Anderson should know. Last year she and her teammates fell out of the tournament in a second round loss to Harwich. Harwich eventually went on to win the Div. 4 state championship.

Like Anderson, Whitney, the team's other co-captain, also feels optimistic about the team's tournament potential.



"We're ready to go," she said.

During an interview on Wednesday that included McKenna and his coach, McKenna recalled a conversation he had during that tournament with Sweeney.

"Remember what you said to me?" he asked his coach. "'It's all about wrestling in February.' What if I had gone out there and got hurt?"

Baroudi was about a minute away from making it four state champs on the day. Against Rockland's Dan Bohenek, the Cohasset senior was ahead 6-5 before hurting his knee. He tried to continue, but the injury was too serious.

Sweeney said a couple days later Baroudi will be getting some treatment, and should be ready to go for the all-states.

Rounding out the cast of characters who will represent Cohasset at the all-states in Salem is Casey. He took fourth place in the 171-pound division, losing to eventual champion Joe Manley of Wayland in the semifinal.

"It took 17 kids to all make this team better."

Head Coach Torin Sweeney

Sweeney said he was proud of the way Casey competed.

"He wrestled a really good tournament," Sweeney said. "He's been battling an injury and wrestling through it. In my opinion, he was just phenomenal. He knew the team title was on the line and he just kept after it."

Littauer also had a solid tournament, going 4-2 and taking fifth place in the 119-pound weight class. He nearly made the finals, losing a 4-3 heartbreaker in the semis.

In the 130-pound division, Dinsmore finished sixth after winning three matches. Rounding out those who earned team points for Cohasset was sophomore Nick Cambi (215), who won one match for three team points.

"That was great for him to get that experience and get the win," Sweeney said. "It's only going to help him as his career goes on."

The coach says a major key to the state title has been the contributions of all 17 athletes on the team, not just the ones who are winning individual awards.

"It took 17 kids to all make this team better," Sweeney said.

The all-states are tomorrow at Salem High School.

While Norwell celebrates a first period goal Monday, the body language of Cohasset defenseman Crandon Leahy says it all. Norwell's 3-2 win knocked the Skippers out of the postseason picture.

One win short

Skaters miss postseason after one-goal loss to rival Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With 1:57 remaining on the clock and his team down a goal Monday, Cohasset's Joe Durkin skated back to his bench with both arms outstretched and his stick resting on his helmet.

After a game in which the Skippers gave just about everything they had, it was a look of defeat. Needing a win against Norwell to qualify for the state tournament, Cohasset would have needed two goals in the last two minutes to pull it out.

It wasn't meant to be, and the Skippers' season ended with a 9-11 record after Monday's 3-2 loss to Norwell at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham.

If not for a rough start to the game, things may have been different, and Cohasset may have been part of the Div. 3 South pairings that come out this weekend. But it took only seven seconds for Norwell to go ahead.

Right off the opening face-off, Norwell's Mike Guerra picked up the loose puck on a breakaway and went in uninhibited toward Cohasset goalie Stefan Parnell's net. He scored his 11th goal of the season, and Norwell had a very quick 1-0 lead.

The Clippers continued to carry play for the next five minutes, and at 9:56, scored again. This time, it was Paul Snell, who took advantage of a Cohasset give-away in their own end and scored a shorthanded goal all alone.

The score would remain the same through the second intermission, but there was still plenty of action. Crandon Leahy, Ted Straughn and Conor Holway laid some big hits on Norwell players, setting the stage for what many in the stands anticipated would be a wild and wacky third period.

Before the period started, Straughn, Leahy, Durkin, Brian Straughn and Austen Lanzillotti all huddled up before starting their shift, as if to say, "It's now or never."

And that is how Cohasset played the final 15 minutes of their season, especially after a Norwell goal with 9:30 remaining made it 3-1.

Only 27 seconds later, Holway blasted a shot from the left point that ricocheted in traffic and past Norwell goalie John Collins. The score was 3-2, and the Skippers nearly tied it up 40 seconds later, as Lanzillotti beautifully played the puck in front for Brian Straughn.

Norwell defenseman Brian White was there to tip it away at the last second. It was probably the best chance to tie that Cohasset had for the rest of the game, although they continued to force Collins to work hard in his crease.

Alas, it wasn't meant to be. But, if there is a silver lining to be found, it is the fact that Cohasset was even in this position to begin with.

The team battled through numerous injuries, personnel changes and a 4-8 start to the season. Cohasset won five of their next seven games, highlighted by a huge 3-2 road win over Wareham last Friday. The next day, the Skippers outplayed Div. 3 powerhouse Westwood in a 3-1 loss, setting the stage for the drama against Norwell.

Jones leads Sixers in Patriot League action

Down a little side road, off busy Hancock Street in North Quincy, is the Atlantic Middle School in the midst of a residential area. Looking primed for renovation, the gym floor creaked with every other step.

The bleachers and team benches were nothing more than metal folding chairs. Most of the light came from expansive windows casting shadows across the well worn hard wood.

But the performance of sixth grader Robert Jones made you feel as if you were in say, the Staples Center in L.A. or better yet, the Pepsi Arena in Denver where this year's crop of NBA superstars gathered for All-Star weekend.

Jones and his team took on Quincy in Patriot League vacation action. From the opening tip-off to the final buzzer, the Sixers worked their magic on the pine.

Jones started the action with a quick pass to Anders Goetz for the first points of the game. Ben Campbell, who consistently was in the right place at the right time through out the game, stole the ball and fed Jones for a bucket. Then it was Campbell to Jones to Goetz for two, then Jones to Gabe Seksay for two, and then Jones stole the ball and went coast to coast for two.

Goetz hassled the Quincy ball handlers with his speed and agility, creating turnovers and offensive opportunities. Eric Wasel has established himself through out the league as a low post threat. Sam Richardson found Wasel down low early for an easy bucket.

Richardson then executed a sweeping left handed lay up for another bucket. Cohasset pressed Quincy on the inbound and the alert Sixers created offensive opportunities for all.

Mike Monaco found Jones on the press break for a score. Drew Cobin found Wasel down low for a bucket. Campbell stole the ball on the press and found Wasel for two.

Wasel, on a resounding offensive board, scored again. Cobin and Monaco continued to work their ball handling magic with precision passing to lead the offense.

Robbie Hill's defensive energy befuddled Quincy. Hill prevented Quincy from penetrating the paint with his quick feet and hands. Robert Jones led all scorers with 28 points and Ben Campbell and Eric Wasel each contributed eight points in the win for Cohasset.

With only five players, the seventh graders took to the floor with the objective of staying in the game, playing smart and having fun. And that they did. Executing a spread offense and a solid zone defense, the seventh graders stayed in the game with the Quincy boys who not only had a size advantage, but had a surplus of players.

Brendan Doonan started the offense for Cohasset with a sweet 12-foot jumper. The boys in blue had few, if any, offensive rebounding opportunities and needed to stay out of foul trouble. John Kearney lit up the joint with three 3 point shots, finishing the game with 11 points.

Chris Brown, Johnny Maher and Kevin O'Connell rounded out the starting five and played the whole first half. At halftime, down by one, the boys gained one, as a directionally challenged Dana Valentine arrived to help out his team mates. Dana provided much needed size under the boards and created an offensive inside threat against the bigger Quincy boys.

Maher directed the offense from the point, keeping the ball moving out of reach of the defense and chewing up time from the clock. O'Connell and Brown played great, anticipating the opposition's ball movement and stopping several scoring opportunities.

Doonan not only was an offensive threat, contributing eight points, but played the wing on defense, reading the Quincy offense and coming up with many steals. The boys in blue lost to Quincy by three.

The eighth graders took to the floor next and scored early with Evan Richardson dumping in the first bucket.

The Eights had all pistons firing in the first half. Danny Martin was on fire defensively with several blocked shots. Nick Savage established himself as a rebounding threat, dominating the boards early. Offensively, good ball movement kept the Quincy defense in motion, leaving Richardson open for several shots.

Owen Landon was also an offensive threat, penetrating the paint against much larger opponents and laying in for an easy bucket. Landon also was quick with the hands, stealing the ball to feed Richardson for two. Landon then went coast to coast for two.

Quincy regrouped and put a man on Richardson. Adam Berger picked up the scoring responsibilities, driving the lane and getting fouled. At the charity stripe, Berger went 4-for-7. Mike Fithian, Nick Simonds and Ryan Daly kept Cohasset's big man presence under the boards and contributed offensively. Danny Brady kept Quincy on their toes with his quick hands and strong defense.

Despite losing to Quincy, the eights are showing real team work with precision passing and strong defense. Richardson had 18 points in the loss to Quincy.

"We feel more determined and committed compared to last year. I think our hard work will pay off in the postseason."

So what other teams will show up in the tournament schedule? Norwell and Harwich, a couple of teams with which Cohasset is certainly familiar, are a couple possibilities. Tournament seedings and schedules will be posted on the MIAA website this afternoon, www.miaa.net.

This information, in turn, provides the stage for the next chapter in Cohasset basketball history.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team skated away with a 4-2 win over Cape Cod on Sunday, Feb. 13.

After a scoreless first period, in which the Stars dominated in the Cape's zone but couldn't sneak one past the Cape netminder, the Stars came into the second period ready to roll.

After a handful of shots on net, Tommy Coyne knocked one in from behind the net that trickled off the goalie's pads across the goal line and in, for a long-awaited goal. Forward James Daley upped the Stars lead to 2-0 when he barreled in and stole to puck from a stunned Cape defenseman and headed straight for the net and slammed one in the lower right-hand corner.

Daley would leave the Cape defense dizzy again in the third period. After receiving a pass from linemates Andrew Tautkus and Ryan Melia, he danced around the defenseman and fired another rocket into the Cape net, putting the Stars ahead by three. The Cape followed suit, scoring on a breakaway, making it 3-1 Stars.

The Stars kept battling and their efforts paid off. Coyne, playing one of his strongest games of the season, picked up a loose puck at the blue line and fed it up to Andrew Tautkus who fired one in over the goalie's right shoulder. The Cape would answer again before the end of the period, making the final score 4-2 Stars.

Defensemen Nick Craig, Tristan Wiggin, RJ Neuls and Jonathan Gardner kept the puck away from their goal for most of the game. Stars goalie Max Hemmingway made nine saves to keep his team ahead and secure the win. Stars forwards Seamus Feeney, Michael McPartlin, Matthew Tautkus and Liam Rose kept the pressure on the Cape in all three periods.

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team defeated the Taunton Brewins 7-3 on Sunday, Feb. 6 in Bridgewater.

James Daley put the Stars on top 1-0, firing a wrist shot past the Brewins goalie 55 seconds into the first period. Stars winger Tommy Coyne made it 2-0 Stars with a breakaway goal mid-way through the period. Solid position play by defensemen Liam Rose, RJ Neuls, Nick Craig and Jonathan Gardner kept the Brewins scoreless in the first.

Eighteen seconds into the second period, the Brewins scored to narrow the Stars lead to 2-1. The Stars answered the goal when Gardner rushed the length of the ice and fired a wrist shot into the left-hand corner of the net making it 3-1 Stars. Two minutes later the Brewins answered making it 3-2 Stars. Stars goaltender Max Hemingway made several outstanding saves, including a spectacular glove save which dazzled the crowd.

Stars forwards Michael McPartlin, Tristan Wiggin, Ryan Melia and Seamus Feeney worked their corners and pressured the Brewins goalie throughout the third period. Stars center, Andrew Tautkus scored the first of his two goals widening the Stars lead to 4-2. The Brewins quickly answered, making it 4-3 Stars.

Andrew Tautkus struck again, making it 5-3 Stars. The score remained this way until the final minutes of the period, when Daley scored his second goal of the game extending the lead to 6-3. Stars left wing, Matt Tautkus put the game away with a wrap-around goal making the final score 7-3 Stars.

With the win, the Stars improved their record to 14-2-2 for the season.

Squirt C-2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team had a tremendous offensive win over Braintree last week, 8-1.

Goals were scored by Nate Morse (two), Mick Barry, Brendon Queenan, Coleman Hernon, Jake Kuppens, Jake Timcoe, and Chris Bjorkman.

Also worth mentioning was the excellent passing and assist by Colin Bell to Bjorkman for a late game goal. Winger Ethan Maher was outstanding in moving the puck up the boards several times throughout the game.

The defensemen were no "slackers" as the ever-present Jake Denton, on more than one occasion, stopped breakaways and cleared the zone. Also helping in the defensive effort were Adam Jackson and Tim Cavanaro. The defense was backed up by the consistent goaltending of Alec Hurd. Hurd, who was not tested often, came up big on a few shots early in the game.

Squirt C1

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-1 team got back on the winning track with a great win Sunday over a very tough Hanover 2 team.

The Stars jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the first period with goals from Andrew Tautkus and Tucker Welch. Max Montgomery got the assist on the first goal and Jack Condon picked up the assist on the second. But Hanover was not quitting, and they came storming back early in the second period with two quick goals and the game was tied. Welch then scored his second on a nice top corner shot, that had the whole bench buzzing, Jason Tolman picked up the assist.

Andrew Tautkus put the Stars up 4-2 with his second goal off a Condon feed. The Stars defensive parings of Robbie Bertone, Jason Tolman, Max Hemmingway and Brian Craig played outstanding defense all game. They had some nice breakout plays and really covered the front of their own net.

Netminder Michael Soucey continues to play outstanding for the C-1 team, coming up huge with some great saves in the second half of the game.

Hanover showed why they are one of the top teams coming up with their third goal half way through the second period. But the Stars forwards of Mark Mcgoldrick and Adam Haskell were relentless on the forecheck, creating several turnovers in the offensive end that ultimately produced results.

Tucker completed the hat-trick when he finished off a nice pass from Bertone. Matt Tautkus made it 6-3 when he buried a pass from brother Andrew and it appeared the Stars were in good shape to start the third period. Hanover would not go quietly though, as they picked up two quick ones early in the third and all of a sudden it was 6-5.

Sam Asnault, Haskell and McGoldrick continued their great forechecking work, constantly pressing the Hanover defense into mistakes.

Then, finally, with approximately two minutes left, Welch found himself alone in front of the net after a nice pass from McGoldrick and Condon. He buried the shot in the top right corner to make it 7-5. Montgomery and the Tautkus brothers made sure it stayed that way with unrelenting forechecking over the last minute and a half, not allowing Hanover out of their end (great hustle!).

Welch received the game puck for an outstanding offensive game.

Squirt A

Chris Carpenter scored a hat trick, Mike Carbone and Jonathan Spitz added two goals each, and Jake Durkin earned four assists as the Squirt A Coastal Stars skated, passed, and shot their way to a 9-1 decision over the South Shore Eagles.

Twenty seconds into the game, Durkin's shot from the left side was saved, but Spitz fired the rebound under the pads. Carpenter notched his first with 4:50 left in the first.

Later on, Kevin McDougall kept the puck in the zone to Spitz, who found Carpenter on the left. Carpenter carried in and fired to an opening on the left side. Carbone upped the lead to three with 2:50 left.

Trevor Salmon fed Neil Conway in the front slot. Instead of shooting, Conway fed Carbone at the right post, and Carbone slammed it home.

Twenty seconds later, Patrick Burchill stole the puck and passed to John Ryan on the right side. Ryan let loose from inside the right circle to the back of the net. Jake Durkin's persistent forechecking paid dividends with 1:20 left. He gained the puck on the left board and found Spitz in front. Spitz' backhander made it 5-0.

The Eagles scored their lone goal on a pretty break early in the second, but a minute later, Carpenter won the face-off in the right circle, skated in front of the net, and went 5-hole to reestablish the cushion. The game turned chippy, and both teams were called for a series of penalties, most of them matching.

The Stars changed their lineup, as defensive stalwart EJ Culhane switched to forward and Carpenter moved to defense. Culhane was denied on a couple of bursts from right wing. With 2:10 left in a shortened third period, Carbone wound through traffic from the right corner and scored from the right circle for the game's final tally.

Connor Maher had a relatively quiet day in net, as the Stars kept the play in the Eagles' end with tight forechecking and strong play at the point by the defense.

But for some great stops by the Eagles' goaltending, the score would have been more lopsided, as the Stars consistently beat the Eagles to the puck and alertly passed to the open man for shots on net.

Mite B

This team mirrors the World Champion Patriots: Hard work, disciplined, unselfish and unflappable describes a team of undersized and underappreciated players.

This team is firing on all cylinders going into the final stretch of the regular season. Team leader Patrick Graham kick-started the most current scoring fest. At 14:09 of the first period, Graham won the face off in the offensive end and fed the puck to Jeffrey Powers. Powers then returned the favor and sent his signature back-hand pass to Graham, blasting a one timer past the out-stretched glove of the Milton goalie.

A late arrival of Tucker Ambrose cost his Dad $5 in "kangaroo court" late fees, but THIS money was well spent. Ambrose made up for the brief delay by scoring the next 4 goals in a row. That's not a typo folks, that's four, count them, FOUR...1,2,3,4, goals. For you hockey purists, that's a natural hat trick with the cherry on top.

While Tucker took a breather on the bench, Brendan Evitts and Kal Maier scored two magical goals on assists from Robert Reidy and Sam Rice, making the score 7-0. Once back on the ice, Ambrose struck again with his fifth goal, playing at an old recorder speed of 78 rpm while the Milton defense was just barely at 33. Ambrose was assisted on the nickel goal by Curtis Golden.

The exclamation point was the ninth goal scored by Joey Redfearn. Redfearn blasted a wrist shot from the right slot that found the back of the net in a hurry. Aiden Beresford got the assist.

Declan Leahy, James Hussey, Jack Evitts, Matt Doyle and Bryan Bowman all played outstanding two-way hockey to help preserve goalie Michael Lund's 9-0 shutout. Lund has a G.A.A. of 1.26 for the season.

No NFL, no NHL, no baseball – Come watch the Coastal Stars Mite B, you won't be disappointed!

Society's Art Deco party sparkles in stately setting

By Nancy Garrison
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Guests arriving at the Cohasset Historical Society's Art Deco fundraiser Saturday evening (Feb. 12) were greeted by the Society's two Presidents, Cathy O'Malley and Paula Morse against a backdrop of silver draperies, black velvet swags and sparking fringes. The stately interior of the neo-Greek Revival building, formerly the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, had been transformed into a sleek night space of black-covered tables and artful up-lighting that emphasized the high ceilings, intricate moldings and cornices of this beloved landmark.

The event's Co-chairs, Eleanor Bleakie, Nancy Garrison and Mary Hartshorne, envisioned the evening not only as a fundraiser, but as an opportunity to highlight the beautiful building as a welcoming space to be accessed and used by the community.

On this evening, the central desk in the rotunda, where once we returned library books, became a bar from which the top-hatted bartender dispensed cheer instead of reading material. The former reading room was transformed into a café with dance floor, cocktail tables and a three-piece jazz combo playing hits from the '20s and '30s, as well as more recent dance music. The large room on the left displayed a suit of gentleman's evening attire, complete with top hat, and nine beautifully preserved evening dresses, some the property of the late Mrs. William C. Cox. All of these vintage beauties belong to the Society's costume collection.

The Society's mission is to preserve the history of Cohasset through acquisitions, exhibitions, research, events and programs on local and regional history. The Society operates three museums, each of which houses significant collections of paintings, archives of history and genealogy, gowns and textiles of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and maritime artifacts that reflect Cohasset's seafaring history. These collections, which define and celebrate our traditions as a town, deserve our generous support.

Guests who came to this fundraiser had been advised that "Art Deco attire will be admired, but not required". Fashions were eclectic, alluring and amusing. Some women chose to follow the black, white and silver mode of the décor, and at least one gentleman arrived in white tie and tails. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers would have felt right at home!

The Society thanks all those who attended and contributed to this benefit party, and all who have supported The Societyís mission so generously through the years. The Cohasset Historical Society is our treasure, open to all to enjoy and benefit from. Now more than ever we need your enthusiasm and support. Please come in and see us!

Linda Pratt, Patricia Murphy, Annette Sawchuk and Jane Carr sample the smoked salmon which was among other delicious items on the menu.

Ron and Lena Goldberg dance to the music of the Ed Sorrentino Jazz Trio at the Cohasset Historical Society event.

Jane and Vcevy Strekalovsky, Edythe Ford and Polly Logan enjoy the elegant evening at the Pratt Building, which is now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society.

WORSHIP NOTES

Water purification for village in Haiti

The Middle School Youth Group at St. Stephen's Episcopal church is working to raise enough money to provide a water purification system for a village in Haiti. Last spring, the youth saw a video shared by teens involved in Caribbean U-Turn, a Mattapan- based program that seeks to help troubled Haitian youth in the Boston area. The video documented the devastating conditions in which the majority of Haitian people live. Often, walls in housing are formed from deteriorating mattresses and fresh, clean water is unavailable. In a December 2003 article in the South Florida Sun-Sentinel, Haiti was listed at the forefront of a global water crisis. According to recent studies by the United Nations, Haiti is ranked among the worst in the world for water supply and quality. Internationally, 4 million children die every year from water-borne diseases such as cholera and diarrhea, one child every 8 seconds. As you are reading this article, children including Haitian children are dying because of inadequate clean water supply.

St. Stephen's Middle School group is determined to help combat this problem. Our goal is to raise $10,000 in order to purchase and send a water purification system to a village in Haiti. Working with Water Missions International who partners with the Episcopal Diocese in Haiti and Partners in Health, it is the group's intent to send a system next fall.

One of our major fundraisers will be held on Sunday March 13, at Country Club Lanes in Hingham. The group will participate in a Bowlathon. Teams of four will bowl to obtain the highest possible average score. Sponsors are asked to make pledges per point. Each member is hoping to collect a minimum of $100 in pledges. If you are interested in helping the group reach their goal of $10,000, send your check made payable to St. Stephen's Haiti Water Project c/o St. Stephen's Episcopal Church 16 Highland Ave. Cohasset, MA. 02025.

OBITUARIES

Dr. Robert T. Sceery

Robert T. Sceery, M.D., 84, of Cohasset, a pediatrician in the town for more than 50 years, died on Feb. 18 at the Massachusetts General Hospital of congestive heart failure.

Raised in West Hartford, Conn., he attended Loomis Academy followed by Harvard College where he was a member of the swim team. Immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor, he enlisted in the US Navy and became a navigator and officer. His LST (Landing Ship Tank) was among the first to land on Utah Beach in Normandy on D-Day, June 6, 1944. Later he participated in the invasion of southern France and the assault on Okinawa.

After his discharge, he attended Yale Medical School and then completed a residency in pediatrics at the Massachusetts General Hospital where he also served as Chief Resident. In 1953, at the end of his training, he moved to Cohasset and established his medical practice.

Dr. Sceery treated countless children and then their children and grandchildren. As his patients aged, many kept coming to him for their medical care. His practice, though always focused on pediatrics, expanded to include many adults and even senior citizens. For several years, his office was located in his home where he saw patients while raising his own growing family. A quiet, but extremely confident man, he was the pediatrician to his own children and grandchildren. He continued to make house calls long after that practice largely disappeared. Though he rarely would discuss it, he always cared for his patients without regard to their ability to pay; when HMO's and health insurance companies became more involved with patient care, he focused his attention on his patient's medical needs and concerned himself little with insurance reimbursement.

In addition, he served on the Cohasset Board of Health and for more than 40 years was the town's school physician. Though he "formally" retired a few years ago, he continued to see occasional patients in his home. He was named Cohasset's Citizen of the year in 1995. He was a Clinical Instructor in Pediatrics at the MGH and, up to the time of his death, attended weekly Pediatric Grand Rounds there as his health permitted.

Although medicine was the focus of his life, he was a devotee of the Boston Symphony, Museum of Fine Arts and theater, which he regularly attended with his fellow physicians and their wives. He enjoyed swimming in the ocean near his beachfront home, sailing with friends along the New England coastline, and attending Harvard football games.

A beloved man, he was truly a "country doctor" in the Norman Rockwell sense.

Dr. Sceery leaves his wife of 55 years, Phoebe (Malmfeldt) Sceery; his children Beth and her husband Dr. Mark Rockoff of Hingham; Lucy and her husband Simon Clode of Shropshire, England; Katie and her husband Mark Trumper of Edmonds, Wash.; Michael and his wife Helene of Cohasset; Amy and her husband Neil Crane of Woodbridge, Conn.; Mara and her husband Greg Morris of Winnetka, Ill.; 17 grandchildren; and a brother Richard of East Greenwich, R.I.

Interment will be private. A memorial service will be held at Saint Anthony Parish in Cohasset on Friday, Feb. 25 at noon followed by a reception for relatives, friends and patients.

Less means more for 'Producers' star

Bob Amaral and Andy Taylor in THE PRODUCERS, the new MEL BROOKS musical, National Touring Company.

New Bedford native returns home in Mel Brooks' musical

While amassing an impressive array of Broadway, national tour, regional theater and television credits, Bob Amaral has gone on many casting calls. These days, however, casting agents are seeing a lot less of the New Bedford native and it is not just because he's busy touring in the smash hit musical, "The Producers" — which returns to Boston's Colonial Theatre this week. Before landing the coveted role of the down-on-his luck theatrical producer Max Bialystock, originated to Tony winning acclaim by Nathan Lane in Mel Brooks' musical version of his 1968 film of the same name, the 5-foot, 10-inch, 306-pound Amaral underwent gastric bypass surgery. He has since trimmed 120 pounds from his once rotund frame.

Bob Amaral

"I worked a lot when I was big, but I played mostly character parts, the big guy. All the years when I was heavy, my agent and my friends in the business would tell me not to lose too much weight, because it might change the roles I could get," explained Amaral, 56, last week by telephone from Chicago. "It was an excuse that I used for a long time. Finally, the reality TV craze all but shut down opportunities for people like me in episodic television. I finally decided it was time to do something to lose the weight, because I wanted a chance at new roles. I had the procedure done in October 2002 and within nine months I had lost 100 pounds."

And gained a new career as the lead in the national tour of the show which won the most Tony Awards in Broadway history. "I'm not sure I could have done this show at my previous weight. These days, however, I have plenty of energy and I feel great. I have lost 10 more pounds just since I've been playing Max. I call this show a marathon, because it is a two-hour-and-45-minute cardio workout."

For audiences and performers alike. "It's exhilarating just hearing the audience response. You hear them screaming with laughter, they are having such a good time. Mel Brooks is just telling you to laugh, laugh at the show, laugh at yourself, just laugh. It's funny on the surface and when you dig deeper, it's even funnier. Brooks, his co-writer Thomas Meehan, and Susan Stroman, the director and choreographer, are geniuses. I love every minute of this show" says Amaral. "I just wish I could sit in the audience and watch 'Springtime for Hitler' every night."

"The Producers, the new Mel Brooks musical" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through March 6. For tickets and information call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

LISTEN TO YOUR HEART

Take care of your heart and it may help preserve your hearing as you get older. That is the advice of researchers who found a connection between cardiovascular disease and reduced functioning of the inner ear in older adults. This link was most pronounced in women who had suffered heart attacks. Women with a self-reported history of cardiovascular disease were 54% more likely to have impaired cochlear function than heart-healthy women, while those with heart attack histories were 80% more likely to have problems with cochlear function. The cochlea is the spiral-shaped organ in the inner ear that contains hair cells so crucial for hearing. While more study is needed, it always helps to preserve the health of your heart.

Whatever the state of their health, their age, occupation, or recreational pursuits, our primary goal at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER is to help as many people as possible improve and protect their hearing. If you have a hearing impairment, we will help you find the best solution in order to open yourself to a higher quality of life. If you are concerned about protecting your hearing, we'll be glad to give you advice as to how. Call us at 781-337-1144, 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, to arrange for a free hearing evaluation by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. While the study mentioned above also included men, researchers are at a loss to explain why cochlear problems were so much more common in women with heart attack histories.

Vermont's Mount Snow celebrates 50th anniversary

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
BOSTON HERALD STAFF WRITER

WEST DOVER, Vt. æ For trivia lovers: Mount Snow, which this season is marking its 50th anniversary as one of the Northeast's most popular ski destinations, was not named for the white, fluffy stuff that blankets its slopes. The southern Vermont ski area got its moniker from the name of the farmer æ who just happened to be Snow æ who sold his southern Green Mountains property to resort founder Walt Schoenknecht back in the early 1950s. Schoenknecht, a former Marine who returned from World War II with a big dream to build a big ski mountain in New England, knew a lucky name when he heard it. A half-century later Mount Snow remains one of the most familiar mountain resorts in the Northeast.

What began as a modest cluster of trails and a couple of lifts now features four mountain areas: Mount Snow proper, the legendarily steep North Face, Carinthia slopes and Sunbrook. In addition, the neighboring Haystack ski area, which became part of the Mount Snow complex in the 1990s, now is open weekends and holidays. All told, the Mount Snow complex includes more than 700 acres of skiing on 145 trails. There are multiple terrain parks, and a 400-foot-long, 18-foot-high halfpipe for snowboarders and freeskiers, and even a tubing park at the base. And what rural recreation center would be without its own waffle house? Mount Snow's got one. All that skiable terrain requires plenty of ways to get to it: From an uphill transportation system that began with rope tows and T-bars, Mount Snow now boasts 23 lifts, including a quartet of four-passenger chairlifts, 10 triple chairs and four doubles. All told, the lifts can carry almost 39,000 skiers and snowboarders per hour.

Mount Snow spokesman Mike Murphy said the golden-anniversary season has been designed to give visitors a state-of-the-industry ski experience while also highlighting the resort's history. This season, the resort has been holding an array of on-mountain activities, from races and torchlight parades to parties and slide shows on local lore. Inside the main base lodge, more than 100 vintage black-and-white photographs trace the history of the mountain and the people who've worked there. "The response has been pretty fantastic," Murphy said. "So many people have donated memorabilia." The Vermont State Department of Tourism has deemed the Mount Snow 50th anniversary as one of the top 10 attractions in the state. "People in the area have even put signs on their lawns," Murphy said. "There's a real common interest in what we're doing."

Indeed, the valley community of the Deerfield River (the same river flows southward from the Green Mountains all the way to Deerfield, Mass.) has grown along with the resort; the interdependency remains strong. West Dover and Wilmington thrive in large part because of the ski area. More than 30 years ago, Kenneth Cummings emigrated north from New York City's Greenwich Village, purchased a modest rooming house at the intersection of routes 9 and 100 in Wilmington and turned it into a restaurant.

Poncho's Wreck has become one of the best-known dining and apres-ski spots in New England ski country. The restaurant/bar, on two floors, is festooned with signs, antiques, curios and oddities from floor to ceiling. The menu covers as much ground as the decor: seafood, steaks and burgers, Mexican. When the lifts close, Poncho's and other bars at the base area and along Route 100, Vermont's premier ski road, fill up with the thirsty. By dinnertime, they've been replaced by the hungry. In turn, the dining crowd is followed by the partiers and nightcrawlers who keep ski towns going half the night æ and all winter. "We get both ends of the spectrum," said Diane Cummings, who has carried on with Poncho's restaurant since her husband's death more than a decade ago. "A lot of families, people with kids, who want lots of food. Then later on, with the live entertainment, the tide turns." If anything, her husband's legacy and that of Mount Snow are one and the same, Cummings said. "We've had an illustrious history here, and the ski area has been a big part of it," she said. "It's been very good to us. And in all the years, through all the changes at the ski area, I'd say Poncho's is about 99 percent the same." Another trivia fact: The name of the place was supposed to be Poncho's Shipwreck, not just Wreck. "But when Ken went to buy the sign, he didn't have enough money for all the letters," Cummings recalled with a chuckle.

From Mount Snow's summit, one can gaze northward to a lovely view of secluded Somerset Reservoir, while the southward panorama takes in the entire valley of the Deerfield and the massive Harriman Reservoir created by the river. This is one pretty place. Development at the resort's base area means there's now a 200-room Grand Summit Hotel (the signature accommodation of the American Skiing Co., the resort consortium of which Mount Snow is a member) to go along with the 100-room Snow Lake Lodge, a traditional accommodation that dates back to the area's early years. All told the valley now is home to about 10,000 beds, and more than 50 lodging options, from motels to rustic-yet-elegant B&Bs. No matter how the resort evolves, there's a feeling within the community that it will retain the same flavor that has infused it over 50 years. "Mount Snow?," Diane Cummings said. "I think it's going to be there forever." For more on Mount Snow, go to www.mountsnow. com, or call 800-889-4411.

Pizza's popularity continues to rise

Cohasset has five establishments

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Ask people what they think of Cohasset and among the first things to come to mind are the town's rocky ledge and spectacular ocean vistas – not tomato sauce and pepperoni.

But the truth is, Cohasset could be on its way to becoming the pizza capital of the area, if not the entire South Shore.

With five establishments whose main specialty is pizza, the town has roughly one pizzeria per 560 households, or one per 1,600 residents.

To put that in perspective, neighboring Scituate and Hingham – both of which have triple the population of Cohasset – each have four pizzerias.

The newest pizza places to come to town are Pizza Zone, which opened in the former Atlantic Bagel site off Rte. 3A five weeks ago, and Good Fella's on Ripley Road, across from the post office, which opened about eight months ago. They join long-time establishments Cohasset Pizza in Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza off Rte. 3A; Victoria's in Tedeschi Plaza; and Papa Gino's

'Working group' Cook Estate meetings spark policy review

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of a new committee formed to investigate all development options for the Cook Estate may have violated the Open Meeting Law, as it has met twice since being appointed, but has never posted a meeting date or time for the public's information.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris, who is on the committee, said it was her understanding she was part of a "working group," and not a sub-committee, and therefore, meetings are not required to be posted or open to the public. The committee was appointed at the board's Feb. 22 meeting, and met once at the end of that week, and a second time Tuesday afternoon (March 1).

Town Manager is a team player

Griffin settles into new role

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Framed by windows showcasing picturesque Cohasset Common, Town Manager Bill Griffin sits at his desk and leans back in his chair, elbows propped up on the armrests and fingers loosely clasped. A New England Patriots coffee mug sits on the edge of his desk.

Although he has been on the job just a month, Griffin is settling into his new role. With 25-plus years of experience in municipal government, he has been able to hit the ground running. Quiet moments are far and few between. The nearly empty, powder blue walls in his office are an indication his schedule does not leave time for decorating.

"I'm very pleased to be here," said Griffin, adding when he heard there was a position open in Cohasset, he was immediately interested. He said Cohasset is a beautiful town with many resources, not the least of which is the "brainpower" of its residents. "Things have gone very well," he said.

Griffin, 51, comes to Cohasset via Bourne, where he was the Town Administrator. He had previously served in the top administrative posts in Dedham and Plymouth. In Dedham and Bourne, he was the first Town Administrator. In Plymouth, he was the first Town Manager after serving as that town's Executive Secretary.

State to ante up funds to help protect watershed

Grant will go toward land purchase

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to protect the town's drinking water supply, developable land surrounding Lily Pond, the Aaron River Reservoir and their tributaries, will soon be designated as protected open space, thanks to the Water Department and a grant it will receive from the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Through the state's Drinking Water Supply Protection grant program, Cohasset will receive a grant that will help the Water Department in its quest to purchase 11 parcels of land, totaling 67 acres, which would give it control over the future of the town's watershed. The grant will be awarded during a ceremony to be held March 11 at noon in Marshfield Town Hall. EOEA Sec. Ellen Roy Herzfelder, a Cohasset resident, will be on hand to present the award.

"The Water Department has had a program over the last few years to acquire any and all open land in the watershed around Lily Pond," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt, who has been heading up much of the land acquisition efforts. Lily Pond, which also draws water from the Aaron River Reservoir, provides 90 percent of Cohasset residents with drinking water.

"Last year at Town Meeting we got the authority to purchase close to 100 acres of land to be paid for from our water revenue. During the year, we have purchased 20 acres and have received donations of an additional 20 acres, and we are in active negotiations for other parcels," said Pratt.

In general, all of the parcels the

Babysitting service at Town Meeting

A number of high school students participating in Jack Buckley's community service class could be offering babysitting services during the April 2 Town Meeting. Buckley hopes Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh will approve the request to use the facilities as the students are planning to use the all-purpose room in the high school.

Buckley said by getting the word out about the program, his students hope to be able to gather a list of parents who would be interested in utilizing the service.

He said the students need to figure out how many children they will be able to accommodate and establish protocols for medical emergencies. The school nurse will help with the training, Buckley said.

There will be a sign-up sheet posted on the Town Hall bulletin board, and notices will be sent home with Osgood and Deer Hill students. For more information, please contact the students at:

World Series trophy

It has been confirmed that the Red Sox World Series trophy will be in Cohasset March 13 from 2-4 p.m. at Cohasset Middle High School. The trophy will be on display in the gymnasium.

Officially known as the Commissioner's Trophy, it was first presented to the World Series winner in 1967, when the Cardinals beat the Red Sox in seven games. The trophy features flags with each of the 30 teams and the World Series champion is allowed to keep it as a new one is made each year.

The Red Sox's Commissioner's Trophy was designed by Tiffany & Co. and carries a $15,000 price tag. It weighs about 30 pounds and is made from sterling silver. The trophy is 2-1/2 feet high and 36 inches around the base.

The trophy keeps a tight schedule as it is traveling to many communities, and visitors are encouraged to arrive early.

Override – yes, but how much remains a question

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although the school department has not presented a final budget figure — a Prop. 2-1/2 override is almost a certainty, officials say. Preliminary discussions indicate the town could be asked to support a tax increase of between $350,000 and $600,000 over the 2-1/2 limit.

Currently, a $250,000 figure has been incorporated in the budget as a potential circuit breaker offset. That assumes the state will reimburse Cohasset for 70 percent of its out-of-district special education costs. But the state has not reported what it will award various districts.

"If we use the $250,000, we're betting," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh.

The state adopted a "circuit-breaker" formula in June 2003, to help fund out-of-district special education costs for cities and towns. The previous system, called "50/50," had the town and state splitting the tuition cost paid for private residential special education placements.

Under the circuit breaker system, the state refunds up to 75 percent over a base amount of $32,000 for out-of-district costs. Walsh said the $32,000 is charged to the school, similar to a deductible. The $250,000 figure assumes 70 percent reimbursement, which Walsh said the state is indicating it will be able to provide.

Therefore, if the full amount of circuit breaker funding does come in, voters will most likely be asked to support a $350,000 override. However, there is no guarantee the town will be notified of the amount it will receive prior to the April 2 Town Meeting when a final budget figure needs to be presented.

Currently, the schools are presenting a budget which has is $600,000 more than what the town says it can afford due in large part to an increase in special education tuition costs. Roughly $200,000 in cuts have been made since the budget was first presented. However, if the state doesn't grant the town $250,000 in circuit breaker money, the school department will have a $600,000 problem on its hands.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters said without a check in hand, circuit breaker funding is speculation.

"You've got to face the facts, you're asking for a $600,000 override," he said during a joint meeting of the Advisory Committee and School Committee Wednesday.

However, School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said it is important to note it is not the School Committee which asks for an override, it is the town. "We present a budget we think the town will be able to support," he said. The Board of Selectmen can only decide whether to put an override question on the ballot.

Shea added while there has been talk of potentially paring back the fire department or other town services to help provide funding for other programs — he doesn't think any budget can be pared down this year enough to make up $600,000.

Walsh said there has been a misconception in town that overrides have become necessary due to out-of-control spending and bad budgeting practices, but she said that is not the case. She said with the amount of money the schools need to spend from year to year, in a perfect world she would have an additional $700,000 every year in order to keep the district moving forward.

With all the increases the department sees on a yearly basis, "The system is set up for $700,000," she said, adding an increase of 2.5 percent hasn't been enough. In addition, with teachers not taking any salary increases this year, she said the schools would need more like $800,000 or $850,000 next year to help make up the difference.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town has had perpetual overrides partially because the town has such a small commercial base. He said other towns have been passing overrides, they have just been on a much larger scale and not as often. He pointed out the town of Plymouth just passed a $2.6 million override, and Reading has a $4.6 million override on the table, while Cohasset has been taking its overrides in smaller doses.

"This town can't produce the annual revenue it needs," Griffin said.

However, Advisory Committee member James Gilman said he has been doing a lot of research comparing Cohasset with other towns, and he was surprised to find out Cohasset brings in more revenue than Duxbury and a number of other towns. However, Advisory Member Vivien Bobo pointed out Duxbury also has a senior housing project which is helping boost the bottom line.

Waters said putting everything aside, he said Cohasset does have the ninth highest tax rate in the state and "you have a town that is starting to push back." He said many residents have shown they are unhappy with the continual overrides and he said many may be unwilling to support another this year.

The public will need a firm number to vote on at the April 2 Town Meeting, and with the Warrant going to the printer March 11, the School Committee is running out of planning time. At the time the Mariner went to press, the Committee had been scheduled to take a final vote on its budget Thursday night (March 3). The School Committee is slated to come before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday March 8 and the Advisory committee again Thursday March 10.

Plans for Plymouth Rock 'like' viewing area progress

Part of roundtable would stay unearthed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For roughly six weeks, Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan have been serving as the town's liaisons to the Greenbush project. In that short amount of time, the two have been making progress on their "to-do" list and two major issues which have been causing strife may be reaching resolutions.

Plans to keep a portion of the granite railroad turntable foundation permanently unearthed in the municipal parking lot are progressing. During excavation of the parking lot, the former South Shore Railroad roundhouse turntable was exposed, and the town floated the possibility of keeping part of it open.

The South Shore Railroad used to come down from Boston, stopping in Cohasset's bustling downtown area, and it was there where the turntable actually turned trains around to head back north. Later the line was extended to Scituate. The MBTA is currently in the process of reconstructing the 17-mile Greenbush line, which when complete will restore train service from Scituate to South Station.

Gruber and Brennan have been meeting with members of the Village Revitalization Task Force as well as the Historical Commission to discuss what the site could look like when complete, if the turntable remains exposed. Gruber said the Commission would like to see an in-depth permanent historical site erected, possibly with signage to explain its significance.

"Most people are amazed. People had no idea it was buried under there," said Gruber, adding the site would be akin to that of Plymouth Rock, with a fenced off area for viewing. He added the Historical Commission has agreed to make sure it is kept clean inside the fenced off areas, and the fence will have a gate to ensure there is easy access.

"Most people are amazed. People had no idea it was buried under there."

— Tom Gruber, Greenbush liaison

Gruber, who is also First Vice President of the Cohasset Historical Society, said the South Shore Railroad was pivotal in making Cohasset what it is today.

"Before the train, we were a sea-faring community," said Gruber, adding the activity of the town was centered around the harbor. However, when the train was originally built, there was a steady increase in houses built to give railroad workers a place to call home.

Gruber said the train provided the way for local farmers to ship their goods, and milk was able to be sent from Cohasset up to Children's Hospital. From Boston, Cohasset was able to receive hay for the cows and ice to keep the milk cold.

"It played a very key role in our history, and the Historical Commission would like to see an in-depth permanent site," Gruber said.

In addition to keeping the turntable exposed, Gruber said there has been talk about delineating the covered portion of the turntable, roundhouse, and water tower with some kind of smooth, flat rock to give residents a feel for the size of the structure which once stood there. [Similar to the templates on Government Island.]

Gruber said they will send a letter to the Massachusetts Historical Commission as well as Army Corps of Engineers to see if it is possible to include the changes under Section 106. Under Section 106, which is a federal law designed to protect a town's historical assets, all mitigation decisions are made by the Massachusetts Historical Commission, not the MBTA.

In addition, there is currently a "bungalow" which will be used to hold the electronics for the gates which will be used at the Pleasant Street crossing, located next to the turntable. Gruber said the town has been told the bungalow cannot be moved, but as a compromise, the town may ask for an aesthetic upgrade, and potentially put the plaques on it, rather than on boulders as initially thought. The issue will also be included in the letter to the MHC.

Brennan has also drafted new plans for the intersection of Pleasant Street and Ripley Road, which has been an area the town has been looking to update in terms of safety. With the new design, an island would be added to help direct traffic and slow down drivers who are making a right-hand turn from Ripley Road onto Pleasant Street.

Cohasset Greenbush Special Assistants Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan will continue to provide the public with updates on a regular basis. Both men can be reached at their office in Town Hall at (781) 383-3094.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Town Census forms due

The Town Census for 2005 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2005. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2004 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's Office at 781-383-4100.

in Cohasset Plaza.

Despite the low-carbohydrate diet craze, the pizza business continues to boom.

"When you hear the word pizza, you've gotta have some," says Wilkens Jeanty, general manager of Papa Gino's, which has been in Cohasset Plaza for upwards of six years. Before that, the restaurant was in the old Cushing Plaza, now Shaw's Plaza.

Jeanty says the competition has not hurt Papa Gino's where customer favorites are still cheese or pepperoni although the range of specialty pizzas offered are also popular.

"We try new things all the time," he says. "But the bottom line is pizza is easy and when the kids want it – the parents have got to get it."

Brothers, Joe and Pat Armstrong, who are of Italian and Irish extraction, tapped into their Italian roots to create Good Fella's, which they named after their favorite movie.

Their most popular pizza is the Taranto, featuring marinated grilled chicken with broccoli and tomato with a roasted garlic béchamel sauce.

Joe Armstrong, who is a former executive chef at a restaurant in Hingham, said the business strives to giving residents something extra.

"People in Cohasset are used to eating good food," he says. "We want to bring the restaurant to their home. We wanted something above good."

Joe Armstrong says using top-of-the-line products, including the best cheese, fresh vegetables, and homemade tomato sauce are keys to a great pizza.

Debbie Ryan, owner of Cohasset Pizza, has operated her restaurant in the same location for 30 years. Cohasset pizza has a loyal following; and although, the customers have made her adapt to diets, such as the low-carb variety, with salads and wraps – Ryan doesn't fool with what works.

"The same person makes the dough and our sauce is always made the same way," she says. "If a customer picks up a pizza today or next week, it will be the same."

Ryan says Cohasset Pizza is a standby to many in town. "College kids stop here," she says. "And I've been here so long that some of my first customers are now bringing in their grandchildren."

Peter Drake, a Marshfield resident, was looking for another restaurant location closer to home when he found the old Atlantic Bagel site off Rte. 3A. He's been in the pizza business for 25 years and owns a restaurant in Wellesley, among several others.

"Pizza has always been a family food among people," Drake says. "Children love pizza and I haven't met too many adults who don't like it."

He says Pizza Zone's sauce has a nice, sweet taste to it and the pizzeria's crispy dough make a great combination. He says people shouldn't have to give up pizza even if they are dieting.

"You can eat anything you want in moderation," he says. "A balanced diet is the healthiest way to go."

Victoria's has been a staple in town for 16 years, but has been under new ownership for two years.

Elcio "Junior" Santos, a manager at the Pizza Zone which just opened on Rte. 3A, prepares a half-cheese, half-pepperoni pizza.

Joe Nesrall, manager, says Victoria's location with plenty of parking is ideal. He says Victoria's most popular pizzas are pepperoni and onion.

He says pizza remains a family favorite because it's so convenient. "People love pizza because it's good and cheap, and there are no dishes to clean.

"If you have friends over to the house to watch the game, pizza is easy and fast."

Nesrall says no one can top Victoria's dough and special sauce.

When it comes to pizza, he says, "it's all about the sauce and all about the dough."

What makes a great pizza?

Members of the Cohasset Mariner's Readers Advisory Network share their thoughts about what makes a great pizza.

"I order pizza from my car on the way home to Cohasset from Boston when I know I don't have anything at home to make dinner with. A small pizza and a Merlot then becomes a treat to help me relax after a full day of work. Add on mushrooms, a small salad, extra cheese with sausage and a great jazz CD and I'm restored again to enjoy my home for the evening."

— Phil Smith

"To paraphrase the Duchess of Windsor, 'pizza can never be too thin or too crisp!'"

— Nancy Garrison

"A pizza is to be judged only on how close it approximates the taste, smell, atmosphere, etc. of a New York pizza. And only an unadulterated cheese pizza should be the measuring stick. It is very difficult to explain how a New York pizza is different, but nothing up here truly matches it."

— Tom Callahan

"Crust, content and cost – and who you eat it with!"

— Murray Campbell

"A great pizza has soft, chewable crust, not a soggy bottom crust, crumbled sausage, not chunks and Pepperoni slices more than wafer thick! Oh yes, a price that fits my allowance!"

— Matthew Brooks, age 11

"To me a great pizza is a thin, crispy, garlic hinted crust, a generous blend of cheeses and lots of chunky flavorful tomatoes that delivers love at first bite."

— Lee Jenkins

"The key is the dough, I like a crisp thin slice, preferably with some good veggies, low on the oil, but some good cheese and homemade sauce."

— Fred Koed

"The beauty of pizza is that it's all in the eye (or the taste buds) of the beholder of the pie; but, for what it's worth, a hearty crust with a hint of olive oil, fresh veggies, and homemade tomato sauce."

— Jack Buckley

"I prefer a thin crisp crust with fresh ingredients but most of all I love a Cheers-like atmosphere...where everybody knows your name, and they're always glad you came."

— Linda Keller

"Since it is the end of February and another 10 inches of snow is headed our way.... we would say 'pizza on the beach' is the best pizza! (we can dream can't we)."

— The Calhouns

"When someone else goes and gets it!"

—Eric Oddleifson

"For me what makes a good pizza is fresh sauce. I am partial to the thin-crust margarita style. Granted, this is something of a rarity in Cohasset."

— Nathaniel Palmer

"Soft crust, too much olive oil, fresh toppings, and rich tomato sauce...yum!"

— Allison Moskow

"We like ours with lots of anchovies! This usually means more slices for us since anchovies tend to keep out the faint of heart."

— Molly and Wig Pierson

"Pizza to me is a thin crust and crispy. More sauce than cheese and 2 or 3 different types of cheese. I also like my pizza cooked to where there are brown spots on the top (not burnt) and the pieces should be cut all the way through. I recall when I owned a bar room in Wareham that is the way I made them.

"Just a side note When some one ordered a pizza with anchovies, I would dump the whole can on to get rid of the anchovies. I didn't like them lying around."

— Merle Brown

"Thin chewy crust, natural ingredients, great aroma, and options that include artichokes."

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

"Pizza should be a real Italian dish, lots of fresh ingredients, (vegetables, seafood if you're on the water) and light, just a hint of olive oil(you don't want to mop off the grease!)"

— Ronnie McMorris

"The aroma of a great pizza smells like an Italian kitchen redolent of garlic, tomato, and fresh herbs. The crust is crispy thin with pockets of chewy dough in the edge, and no matter what the topping is, there's a lot of it!"

— Karen Quigley

"Fresh ingredients, thin crust, and quality cheeses. Please...no greasy oil on top or uncooked crust."

— Sue Turgiss

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

A little background on pizza

The following is from the Web site: Pizza-Pedia.com

- Pizza is consumed all over the world, though travelers are often amazed by how different cultures have adapted pizza to their own preferences.
- Gennaro Lombardi, an Italian immigrant, opened the first US pizzeria in 1895 in New York City.
- Italian and Green peasants ate earlier forms of pizza for several centuries before it became a hit among aristocracy. In 1889, Rafaele Esposito, a Neapolitan, prepared pizza for King Umberto I and Queen Margherita, who apparently loved it.
- The world's first true pizzeria may have been Antica Pizzeria Port'Alba, which opened in 1830 and is still in business in Naples.
- Before pizzerias became popular, street vendors walked around Naples with small tin stoves on their heads, calling out to customers. This street-vending method made pizza ever more popular.
- Spaniards who had been to Mexico and Peru introduced the tomato to Italy in the 16th century.
- The original mozzarella cheese was made from the milk of the Indian water buffalo in the 7th century. It was introduced to Italy in the 16th century.

South Shore Art Center exhibit taps country roots

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

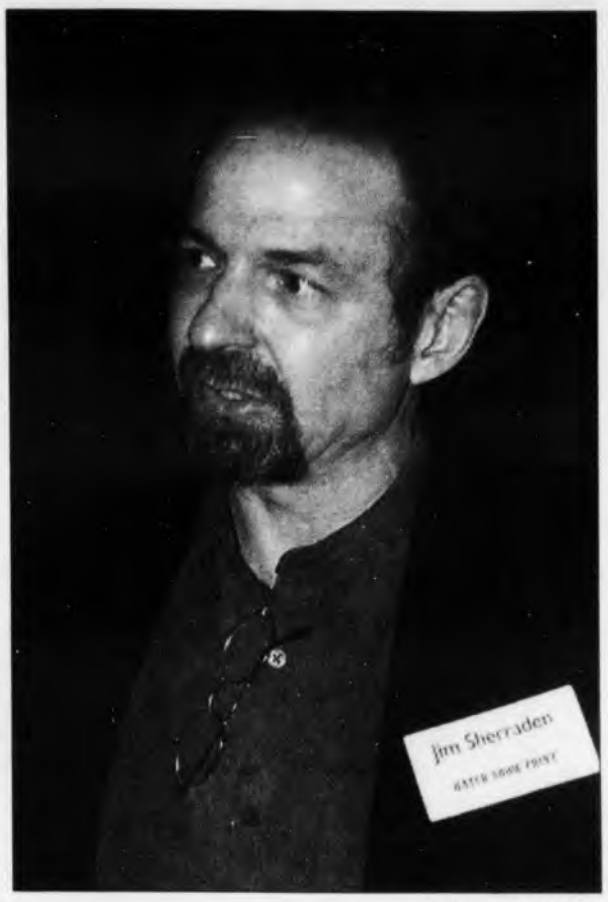
The famous Hatch Show Print shop of Nashville could be called The House That Country Music Built. But that title could also well be the other way around. Hatch Show Print is the classic look that has defined much of the carny-style poster advertising end of the country music industry for most of the last century.

If you've ever seen and noted, in books or real-life form, any of those bold, eye-catching promo posters displaying a concert date by stars and legends of country music through the eras — from Hall of Famers Hank Williams, Bill Monroe and Johnny Cash to present-day stars Garth Brooks, Wynonna Judd and Shania Twain — chances are it was the creation of the 125-year-old Hatch Show Print, one of the oldest working letterpress print shops in the United States

But the Music City company has always been about much more than country music. Hatch was originally in fact the major source of posters used to promote turn-of-the-(last)-century vaudeville, circus and minstrel shows across the country. Some of the vintage, mid-century work also promoted carnivals, dancing girls, magicians, wrestlers, freak shows and gas stations, even politics. In the more recent modern era, poster commissions have featured rock stars such as Sting, Pearl Jam, Bruce Springsteen, the Beastie Boys and Coldplay and advertised for companies like Nike, Taylor Guitars, Jack Daniels, Pizza Hut and Oxford University Press.

"In today's technology, Hatch's woodblocks are the antithesis of the digital age."
— Jim Sherraden, Hatch Show Prints

Hatch Show Print has roots deep in country music as evidenced by the posters of Johnny Cash and Patsy Cline.



Some of this colorful history comes (back) to life in Hatch Show Print, the new exhibit at the South Shore Art Center through April 10. The showcase of letterpress show posters and monoprints, all produced in the tradition of using images and typefaces carved from wood and printed on paper by presses cranked by hand, is sure to fascinate varieties of music lovers, Americana buffs, graphic arts collectors and designers alike.

"In over 125 years, the Hatch Show Print company has never changed its technology. Even in the 50s, when most other print companies changed to the offset technique, Hatch held faithfully to the letterpress tradition," said printmaker and curator/manager of Hatch Show Prints, Jim Sherraden, who made the trip from Nashville to the South Shore Art Center to appear for two evenings of a gallery talk and then a meet-and-greet for patrons at the show's opening event last week

"In today's technology, Hatch's woodblocks are the antithesis of the digital age," Sherraden said.

Sherraden's original monoprints offer the more creative side of his company, and dominate the Art Center exhibit. A native of Kansas, the printmaker has been with the Hatch company since 1984, and despite now presiding as curator/manager over a lucrative enterprise handling over 600 commissions a year, speaks in humble, unassuming terms of his historical role and place in what is a genuine American institution. He believes that role to be part of something bigger than himself.

Two of the artist's monoprints — striking mirror-image views of the carnivalesque "Big Woman" — are what Sherraden calls "the best examples of my interest in tribute to the great American poster shot." Some of the best of the total original work fittingly pays interpretive tribute to the luminaries of country music and the genre's stylistic cousin, early rock and roll.

"Hank - Fame & Pain" contrasts two outline facial images of country music king Hank Williams Sr., one looking up and other down, to represent both the triumph and tragedy of his life, which ended with his death from alcoholism at age 29. "Triple Elvis" pictures Elvis Presley, in three images of one of the classic young, wild Elvis shots, over a holy cross backdrop while the grafted-in words "Ascending/Descending" suggest that Elvis could have either been Earth's gift to Heaven or vice versa

Also included in the show are restrikes of vintage era promo posters, images of Roy Rogers, Peco Gasoline ("More Power, More Pep"), the 1933 B-movie Island of Lost Souls and others. Plus, prints of classic concert promo window card posters, featuring Johnny Cash, Patsy Cline, B.B. King and more, which are on sale to patrons for only $10. All items in the show are in fact for sale.

"I personally feel a link to the heritage of Hatch Show Print, and feel very comfortable working with this archive," Sherraden said. "I believe I have a God-given talent or responsibility to carry on the Hatch tradition and create stories with artwork."

'Working group' Cook Estate meetings spark policy review discussion this week

However, Selectman Fred Koed who is not a member, but was invited to attend the second meeting in the absence of Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, said he did not agree with McMorris. He recommended the Board take another look at its policies to help clear up any misunderstandings regarding what must be posted as required by the Open Meeting Law.

Koed said shortly before he left his house for the meeting, he received a phone call from a concerned resident who informed him the meeting he was about to attend had not been posted.

"I was very uncomfortable it hadn't been posted," he said, adding "It gravely concerned me."

Koed said because the meeting was intended to serve as an interview session for an attorney who could potentially serve as special counsel to the town on the Cook Estate matter, the attorney present was asked to give his opinion on whether it was legal for the committee to meet.

Koed said in the attorney's opinion, if the committee was a "working committee," the meeting would not necessarily have to be posted as it would for a sub-committee.

However, Selectman Rob Spofford said with the interest the topic has generated, the board would be better off to post the meeting even if it is not required.

The town has teamed up with the Northland Residential development company to build 95 units of senior housing on the Cook Estate off Sohier Street. But soils on the site cannot support an on-site wastewater disposal system as planned, so the town has been looking for alternate means of disposal ever since. Sewer capacity from both the town's wastewater treatment plant and the Hull plant have both been aired as possible solutions.

The town has been able to secure an extension on signing the purchase and sale for the property until April 30, 2005 to give it time to come up with a suitable wastewater solution for the Cook Estate site. To date, no progress has been made on the issue, which is why the committee was formed Feb. 22. The committee was charged with finding alternate solutions to enable the 95 units to move forward, as well as potential solutions which would require downsizing of the project.

Those appointed to the committee include Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee, Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Ronnie McMorris, Senior Housing Committee member Margy Charles, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, Town Manager Bill Griffin, and Town Counsel.

Spofford asked McMorris to give the board an update on the meeting, and she indicated the committee had spoken with an attorney about serving as special counsel. However, Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said this was the first he had heard of hiring special counsel and he didn't understand why one was needed and asked what it will cost the town.

Griffin said appointing special counsel is only an option the town is exploring and nothing has been set in stone.

McMorris said the committee is working to find ways the project can be built as planned, and will look other options, such as downsizing, if it cannot. She said it has been great to have the Sewer Commission involved in the process as it has really helped get a handle on the way the community should address all its wastewater concerns.

Koed said as long as the committee investigates all options including 60 units — for which it has been said an on-site wastewater disposal system would work — he will be happy.

McMorris asked Koed if he had heard about another working group which has put together a "particular project they would like to see instead of what's proposed."

Koed said he had not, but indicated he thinks the board owes it to the townspeople to inform them of all information pertaining to what will and will not work on the site.

McMorris then asked Koed if he hadn't heard anything about another proposal where a group was looking to partner with the South Shore Art Center, to which Koed replied he has heard rumors, but nothing about any specific project.

"Last week I spoke to a senior who had her home on the market," said McMorris, adding there are many Cohasset residents who are in their 70s or 80s and are currently on the wait list for the Cook Estate project and if it doesn't go through, they will be forced to move to other towns. "They are looking to their leaders," she said, adding she would hope saving the project as designed would be the town's first priority.

Spofford said he hopes there are parallel paths the committee is working on as it "tries to salvage (the project) in some form or fashion," by reporting back on all fronts.

In an interview Wednesday, Koed said now that he has had 24-hours to think about it, he intends to recommend to the Board of Selectmen at its March 8 meeting that the motion to appoint the committee be changed to assure the committee is recognized as a sub-committee of the Board of Selectmen, and therefore required to be posted to allow members of the public to attend. "We need to get the maximum amount of input from the townspeople," he said.

Open Meeting Law Guidelines

The Open Meeting Law does not make any distinctions between sub-committee meetings and working group meetings. However, according to Town Manager Bill Griffin, he said in his experience, a sub-committee is a committee formed from an existing board with an appointed chairman and clerk, while a working group works together on an issue on a more informal basis. He said in his experience, he has been the one to appoint working groups, which clearly means it has not been appointed by any governmental board. If a committee serves as an extension of a board, it is subject to the Open Meeting Law.

However, in this case, the committee was appointed by the Board of Selectmen and two of its members are represented, which could constitute a sub-committee.

According to the Open Meeting Law Guidelines, "A meeting of a governmental body sub-committee, which is itself a governmental body, is subject to the Law if a quorum of the subcommittee is present, even if that quorum is not sufficient to constitute a quorum of the parent governmental body."

The Open Meeting Law Guidelines offer the example of a school committee with nine members appointing three, three-member subcommittees to screen applicants for the position of superintendent, then coming back to make recommendations to the full committee. "When two or more members of any of these subcommittees meet together to discuss or deliberate on the matter assigned to it, this is a meeting covered by the Law even though less than a quorum of the full school committee is present," it states.

Griffin said while there has been some confusion, "It sounds like these meetings will be posted in the future."

Water Department would like to acquire are abutting existing town-owned land, Wompatuck State Park, or Whitney and Thayer Woods, which is owned by the Trustees of Reservations. All the parcels are in zoning districts, which according to the town's Master Plan, makes them "potentially developable." In addition, their topography and soil characteristics indicate they could support development, which the Water Department says will lead to more nutrient loading as well as storm-water runoff, which pollutes the water supply.

"The Water Department has had a program over the last few years to acquire any and all open land in the watershed around Lily Pond."

— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

The purchase price for the parcels totals $908,600, which includes fees for appraisal costs, title searches, attorney fees, recording fees, environmental site assessments and surveys totals.

Pratt explained the department is being awarded $434,300, which is a match grant that will pay for half the total cost. Therefore, the Water Department will need to come up with roughly $550,000 to meet its share. "We expect to ask Town Meeting for that money this year," he said. Pratt added the money which has been awarded by the state, "basically saves the department $434,000, which we were going to spend of our own funds over the next few years."

With the grant comes some conditions, including its requirement that the land be retained as open space, which the community can use for appropriate outdoor/recreational use. The parcels will be legally protected open space with a level of protection "in perpetuity," and managed by the Trustees of Reservations, which has teamed up with the Water Department in its efforts.

In fact, the Trustees of Reservations has committed to contribute $50,000 to the town toward parcel acquisition. It has also pledged to raise $50,000 of endowment to allow Trustees of Reservations staff to assist the town in managing the land. The Trustees will either hold or co-hold the permanent conservation restriction in the designated areas.

"When we complete these land purchases we will have control over all the remaining open land in the Cohasset portion of our watershed. Much of our watershed is in Scituate and Norwell as well as Wompatuck State Park," said Pratt. Moving forward, he said the department has plans "to work with other nonprofit conservation groups in these towns to acquire land to protect our water shed that is not in Cohasset."

returned to his hometown of Swansea, Mass., where he heard of an opening at Town Hall.

Griffin said Swansea had just lost its part-time Executive Secretary and was looking to hire someone to work in an expanded full-time Executive Secretary role. "There I was," said Griffin, adding at 23 years old, he was enthusiastic and fresh out of college and the opportunity just fell into his lap. He had grown up in the town and knew its ins and outs, but was also well known due to his participation in high school sports.

"It was a matter of timing," Griffin said, adding if the position hadn't been open, he may have pursued career opportunities in either federal or state offices as many of his friends had done. However, "a lot of things in life happen when you don't expect it," he said.

Griffin joked while growing up if anyone had asked him what he thought his career would be, his answer would not have been one in municipal government. "I always thought I'd be a professional baseball player," he said with a laugh.

In high school, he played on both the basketball and baseball teams and was recruited by Providence College to play on its baseball team. "I played all four years as their pitcher," he said. In addition, Griffin played for two years on the Cape Cod Baseball League, a summer league for college players.

While Griffin no longer plays baseball, he is an avid golfer. "I belong to the Plymouth Country Club," he said, adding it his favorite course, perhaps because it's the view he sees every day out the windows of the house he shares with wife Robin, a registered nurse, and their two children, Patrick, 22 who is a senior at UMass Amherst, and Molly,17, a junior at Plymouth North High School.

Griffin said he also enjoys keeping up with sports on television. "I follow sports very much," he said, adding this year has been a great year for New England sports fans. He said watching the Red Sox win the World Series was a special experience for him, and it made him realize how much sports can bring friends and families together.

Shortly after the Red Sox championship game was over, Griffin said his son called him from college. "He said he was thinking of Grandpa," Griffin recalled, adding his father, who had passed away, would have loved to see the team victorious. "I told him, 'You know what, I was too,'" he said.

With the World Series win still fresh in everyone's minds, Griffin said watching the New England Patriots win the Super Bowl was also exciting. He said he sees the Patriots as role models, showing what it means to work as a team with everyone stepping up to pick up the slack. That kind of team spirit is what he envisions for the town of Cohasset.

Griffin came on board Jan. 31. His arrival ended a period of transition for the town. Director of Finance Michael Buckley had been serving as Acting Town Manager until a permanent replacement could be found for former Town Manager Mark Haddad. Haddad, who held the post for seven years and was Cohasset's first Town Manager, resigned last May. Griffin was the unanimous selection of the Board of Selectmen, which gave him high marks during the screening process.

Griffin said he hopes to be able to "inspire a sense of teamwork," not only in Town Hall, but in the community. He said on his end, he wants residents to know he is always available.

"I have an open-door policy," he said. In addition, "I want our staff to be problem solvers," Griffin said. "I don't pretend to have all the answers." He promises to put in the time to help residents with any issues they have.

"At times I'm going to give an answer people don't want to hear," Griffin said. However, in his experience, Griffin said he has found people are usually willing to accept an answer they don't necessarily want if they feel they have been treated fairly.

Pointing to the "Code of Ethics," framed and mounted on his office wall, Griffin said, "I adhere to that."

OPINION

1-4-3 (I love you)

Ahoy there!

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we appreciate our readership and relish the fact we've become a tradition in the vast majority of households in town.

However, it's always bothered us that everyone isn't a subscriber. To that end, we're mailing the Cohasset Mariner to every household in town this week in the hope that we'll convince those who don't read the paper to give us a try.

We're also using the opportunity to try some new features and revisit a popular one that appeared weekly in your hometown paper through most of the 1990s.

Our redesigned flag debuts this week that includes a color rendering of historic Minot Ledge Lighthouse as a symbol of Cohasset heritage.

The lighthouse, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was rebuilt in granite in 1858-59 on outer Minot's ledge after the original lighthouse toppled in a gale. It was lit in 1860 and about 30 years later, the U.S. Lighthouse Service assigned it the distinctive 1-4-3 pattern so it could be easily recognized. Over the years the familiar flashing light has come to mean "I Love You."

The top of the lighthouse was replaced in 1987 and the granite blocks were recycled to construct the Replica which adorns Government Island where the lightkeepers once lived.

Our long-time subscribers may recall "Picture This," a weekly feature highlighting a member of the community. Many of our readers have told us they miss "Picture This" and that it was the first thing they looked for each week. We heard you! Picture This is back!

This week, we've also asked for commentary from members of our Readers Advisory Network in our pizza story. The network is an effort to involve our readers in the paper and is open to anyone who wants to participate and has access to email. You can email me at mford@cnc.com to sign up.

Cohasset is a great town and we pledge to continue to provide the coverage it deserves. Every week we publish all the news we can scout up in the Mariner and that wouldn't be possible without a lot teamwork that includes staff reporter Samantha Brown; sports editor Mark Goodman; staff photographers Robin Chan and Bert Lane; cartoonist Jim Hamilton; Around Town columnist Jennifer Piepenbrink; correspondents, freelance photographers, columnists and other contributors. We're also grateful to tech support, our typesetters, and paginators.

But the most important part of our team is you, our readers. You provide us with the tidbits of information that compile Around Town, Happenings, social and club news. Many of our news tips come for you.

In short, you are the reason we're here. You're the reason we're still publishing after 27 years.

Let us know what you think.

We love what we do and consider it a privilege to keep you informed and be part of the continuing Mariner tradition.

— Mary Ford
mford@cnc.com

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Executives in Session' is the best show on TV

TO THE EDITOR:

As winter persists and Ghost sits forlornly idle up on Route 3A, and the Bruins have agreed not to serve, there is only one TV timeslot I try very hard not to miss — Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m., our Selectmen at work. Might I suggest going to two nights this time of year and bagging it during the summertime when I am sure viewer ship dwindles drastically.

Each Tuesday the first thing I long for is to have Rocco Laugelle saunter through the door five minutes late because the previous business at the Legion was just as important to him. The best part of Rocky's reign is that he would tell it like it is unconcerned about any ramifications. Imagine being such a wonderfully quirky character that half a town lovingly imitates you. Rocco, however will not be present.

The culture of this board is about to change, however one ingredient necessary to make for good TV, is that all members must be present for meetings. If everyone is not in attendance, it quickly becomes a Three Stooges episode featuring Curly Joe instead of Curly, or a Beach Boys concert with Brian Wilson at home (lying in bed). Last evening, for example Ralph who tirelessly lobbies for openness and honesty, and is clearly representative of the board's culture change was unable to attend. Lo and behold by 8:15 p.m., without warning, executive session had reared its ugly head.

Hopefully without being too wordy for that has been recently criticized, and rightly so for Heavens sake, I would like to update the non-viewers in town, of which I know there are not many, of the goings on of the last oh month or so. Allow me to first caution that if you take up with this program, The Apprentice and Desperate Housewives will be out the window. The last month's bone of contention has been in a word "sewer." One would have to be totally out of the loop to not know of the four factions trying to win the race to the sewer.

Awhile ago in comes Mr. Calhoun, the developer of the Hayes property. The Hayses are lifelong friends of mine, I played golf in their yard, swam in their pool, the oldest in town, and attended their unequaled barn parties, but all things must pass. Enter Calhoun his ducks in a row, sans a wastewater plan. Gong, quickly dismissed by the powers that be, clearly in fear that an approval will jeopardize their own, in a couple of cases, aspirations of an affordable (half a million) housing legacy. At this point, they should show highlights from next week. The idea was broached by Mark Haddad, but after we rewarded him with a $50,000 golden parachute for all his good deeds on behalf of the town, the idea was abandoned. Sorry, enough of that!

Fast forward and reenter Mr. Calhoun having just ponied up a million bucks to make his project air tight, sewer tight as well. Curses, gonged again, but this time with the knowledge that no board had any grounds to deny him and ready to call a spade a spade. Whew! This is where the previews would be handy. Stay tuned for — The ambush! One more episode to close out this segment; I don't want Peter Wood falling asleep while reading this. There is more however, much more.

Week four: The two selectmen who have endorsed the Cook project through thick and thin, through sense and nonsense decide to put Fred on the spot as to where he stands on the project. Fred does not mince words but he is a smart guy who was not born yesterday. After what they, (some of they) have put Mr. Calhoun through, now line Fred up in their sights as he tries to explain to them that a $5 million municipal project with no wastewater solutions might run into some trouble. If we happen to fall out from under the good and protective graces of the Cooks, could we not be back at Town Meeting looking for another big number to get out from under some ruthless developer? At that Fred is sniped by one of them being called "unbelievable" while the other one decides to pull out all stops and repeats what has been discussed in one of these executive sessions they so covet. =

People have asked me in passing why I don't run. The answer is because at that particular point in time, I would be jumping over the desk screaming at the camera that it was once again time to go into executive session so that I could do my best rendition of Moe on the Stooges complete with eye gouges, head knocking, you name it! Anyway, congratulations Fred for standing your ground and remaining a gentleman — you are a better man than I. Anyway, stay tuned we have Donald Trump's show beat by a mile.

Amazed at lack of candidates

TO THE EDITOR:

I am amazed and appalled to read that for the upcoming election there are only three candidates for two seats for Selectman and three for School Committee — two for a one-year term and one for a full term.

In view of all the "rhetoric" oral and written about the present boards, I would have expected that many would jump at the chance.

Afraid of the work, the criticism, etc.? "It would be better to light a candle than curse the darkness."

No work along wetlands until after May 1

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER AND MARK BRENNAN

It now looks like no activity will take place along the rail line until after May 1. We last reported to you that tree flagging was to begin during February and that clearing would soon follow. However, construction is forbidden along wetlands from March 1 to May 1 due to the small critters that emerge from the wetlands during this season. With Cohasset's abundance of wetland, the MBTA has chosen to do their flagging and cutting after the critters have "done their thing."

Remember, that when flagging does start, the trees that will be flagged with red and black ribbons will not be cleared. Only the trees between the flagged trees will be removed. So, do not be alarmed if trees on your property are flagged, those trees will not be removed.

Remember, that when flagging does start, the trees that will be flagged with red and black ribbons will not be cleared.

Parking Lot – Ripley Road Crossing

As a part of Cohasset's mitigation agreement, the MBTA has agreed to work with the Town to redesign and reconstruct the town parking lot. You may have read about the work we are doing with the MBTA on the design of the town parking lot in other newspapers. Some of our work was described in a manner that might be considered a bit sensational. For the record, the Town of Cohasset is working diligently and cooperatively with the MBTA to create the best possible design for this area.

This area is very difficult because it is affected by not only the Greenbush project, but also the Village Revitalization project. We have been meeting regularly with the Revitalization Committee as well as the MBTA. It is important that any designs in this geographic area blend together smoothly to meet the needs of the Revitalization Project, which includes the town parking function, and the Greenbush rail line. It is our goal to maintain the best possible relationship with the MBTA, while at the same time addressing the priority needs of the Town of Cohasset.

COMMENTARY

RICK SWANBORG

This is in response to last week's story, "The Clock is ticking on the Cook Estate"

First of all, the town should not be in the development business. Risking taxpayer money on residential development deals was never recommended in the Cohasset Master Plan, and was not a leading practice used by other towns (after we searched across the state for affordable housing best practices). The Town leaders should actively use zoning (like the senior housing article), tax, and regulatory incentives to support lower cost housing. Development projects are risky, and should be left to professionals who can manage that risk.

However, we are stuck with the Cook Estate deal that was sold to the town as a risk free, senior affordable housing project. We were told at the town meeting that this would not cost the town any money, and that there was adequate capacity for an on-site septic system. Both are proving to be wrong. It is time we face the fact that we made a mistake, and get accurate data to make a more informed decision.

So here are some questions to help all of us understand what the options are:

It is time we face the fact that we made a mistake, and get accurate data to make a more informed decision.

How much have we spent on the Cook Estate so far, and where is the money coming from? There is speculation is that the town has spent around $200,000 in paying for sewage treatment test/options, legal, consulting, engineering, and architecture contractors.

What are the total costs so far, including future bills we should be expecting?

What are the costs and liabilities if we pull out of Cook Estate, or reconfigure the RFP? Will we owe anything to Northland (including the deposit)?

How do we pay for the costs we have accrued? Is the property still worth $4.5 million, now that we know that the land cannot support a large septic system? Can we negotiate this price down?

Why can't Northland replicate the Cedarmere's system for recycling wastewater?

What exactly is needed by our senior citizens, given the 107 units of senior housing that is being built at Cedarmere?

I fully support revisiting the RFP for the Cook Estate. It makes more sense to consider a smaller development, with more focus on mid-range and affordable housing for those seniors that cannot afford market rate units and don't qualify for affordable housing. Those residents with some equity, but not a lot of savings might otherwise get squeezed out. A smaller, more creative plan could also provide more public access, open space, as well as on-site septic.

Let's not throw good taxpayer money after bad until we get all of the facts. I believe that it is time for a fresh look on how we can minimize the problems with Cook, and use this as a "lesson learned" that the Town should not be in the development business.

Rick Swanborg is former chairman of the Cohasset Master Plan.

HEALTH NOTES

On-site septic system management plan explained

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

At the next Town Meeting, the Board of Health expects to request funding for a new Comprehensive On-Site Wastewater Management Plan to the voters. Unlike previous plans, the new plan will be voluntary, it should meet the requirements of the DEP, and it is expected to pay for itself.

The plan is designed to ignore all individual wastewater systems which are operating in a satisfactory manner and which represent no health risk to neighbors or the environment, and, under certain circumstances, it gives credits for land which may be used to absorb wastewater (so called perkable land).

Important elements of the plan:

- It is voluntary, anyone can sign up.
- There is an annual fee for joining the plan which is intended to cover routine maintenance, repair and upgrading if that becomes necessary. This fee is planned to be approximately $1,000.
- Aside from routine maintenance, any upgrading or system replacement required will be paid for 50 percent by the homeowner and 50 percent by the Town.
- Routine maintenance of the system will be carried out by the Town or a Town selected subcontractor. There will be no other charges for maintenance.
- Provisions relating to the DEP Title 5 regulations upon the sale of property will continue to be in effect, that is, the septic system in every property being transferred will be required to have a valid Title 5 approved septic system as is now the case. The cost of this inspection is included in the annual maintenance fee.

Requirements for joining the Plan:

Unlike previous plans, the new plan will be voluntary, it should meet the requirements of the DEP, and it is expected to pay for itself.

- That the Board of Health be permitted to inspect the applicant's system to assure that it is not a public health threat and that there are no illegal uses or misuse. This is not a Title 5 inspection and, therefore does not trigger a mandate to meet Title 5 requirements. The inspection is similar to an insurance physical. It determines that the system is presently satisfactory for its current use; that is it is adequate for the present occupant of the premises and represents no health threat to the occupants, the abutters or the Town.
- The property owner is required to permit access to his property for the purposes of septic system maintenance, inspection, repair or upgrading if necessary. A recorded easement is required.
- In the event that an inspection or other event reveals a failed system requiring upgrade, the homeowner shall be responsible for paying 50 percent of the cost of the upgrade to Title 5 standards. The Town will pay for the other 50 percent. If needed, the Town will seek a low interest loan for the owner's share of the cost.
- There is a six month open enrollment starting when the plan is funded. Anyone joining the plan will pay the annual maintenance fee at time of joining. Any repairs/upgrades required will be paid for on a 50-50 basis. Those joining after the open enrollment period and whose systems are in failure must pay an additional annual maintenance fee to join. There are other provisions in the text of the Regulation which relate to credits for the use by one landowner of the permeable land of another for disposal of septic effluent, so called Septicredits, but this provision does not bear on the aforementioned part of the plan.

How is the Town to pay for this initiative without additional funds from taxation?

Essentially the annual user fee is expected, over time, to pay for not only maintenance, but the cost of any necessary repairs and upgrades.

If the town approves the warrant article, we will have a fair septic program which we all can afford. It will be the Town that has to worry about condition of septic systems, not the individual homeowner. If our estimates are conservative, the plan will be self sustaining. If they're optimistic and we'll know in two years, we'll be back to ask you what to do about it.

Stephen N. Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Gary Vanderweil

Gary Vanderweil running for selectman

Raimond G. Vanderweil Jr., better known as "Gary", is running for selectman in the April 9 election.

Gary, who served as a sewer commissioner for nearly 20 years, says "Cohasset means a lot to me. I identify with the town, and all I want to do is preserve its features so future generations can enjoy it the way we in this and previous generations have done."

If elected selectman, Gary pledges to "...work within a framework of strategic goals to preserve the character of the town, restore economic diversity with affordable housing and affordable taxes and to preserve our natural and man-made environment."

To this end, Gary currently serves as president of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, an organization dedicated to the stewardship, preservation and study of open space and the natural heritage of Cohasset and adjacent towns.

During his long tenure on the sewer commission, including a four-year stint as chairman, Gary was instrumental in developing the North Cohasset, Lilly Pond and expanded central sewer districts.

He also led the citizens' group that spearheaded the reconstruction and expansion of the town's public tennis courts, Milliken-Bancroft Field and the Chatterton Athletic Complex at the middle-high school.

His interest in the athletic fields was a natural outgrowth of Gary's days as a student athlete. As a member of the Cohasset High School class of 1958, he played for legendary Coach "Evie Dorr" on the undefeated 1957 football team.

Gary moved to Cohasset as a youth. After graduating from Cohasset High School, he majored in Engineering and Applied Physics at Harvard and earned a Master's Degree in Mechanical Engineering from MIT.

He worked in the aerospace industry before joining his father's Boston engineering firm, which he has headed since 1970.

In that same year, Gary married Anne Stuart Hinshaw. Their three children attended Cohasset schools. Two are Cohasset High School grads. The third graduated from Milton Academy.

Anyone wishing to become involved in Gary's campaign can call Wig Pierson, chairman of the Committee to Elect Gary Vanderweil Selectman, at 781-383-6940 or wigmore@webtv.net

Leonora C. Jenkins

Lee Jenkins to run for School Committee

Leonora C. Jenkins is pleased to announce her candidacy for the one-year term on the School Committee.

"I am motivated to run at this time due to the lack of accountability in the way that the school conducts its business as witnessed in my years in Cohasset.

"Our children spend actually a brief moment of their lives in our schools and yet it is where the foundation of their learning and social skills are formed. For this reason we must be always vigilant with the budget and expenses to ensure a quality experience.

"Over the last several years the industry standards of the school have brought us highly paid administrators with Ph.D.'s. Now we have discovered that in our state of the art schools our finances and management have been in disarray.

"Much as educators won't admit it, public education is a big business and needs to be viewed using real numbers, otherwise our students will be short changed.

"I will bring a fresh perspective to the schools, have an open and transparent budget networked with the town and look for positive ways to work with the town side on items such as purchasing, equipment leases, motor pool maintenance and trimming expenses in health care. The schools must remember that they are not an island but an integral part of the community on all levels, especially financial. Savings in these areas will positively impact classroom quality."

Leonora Jenkins brings a wealth of experience and knowledge. She and her husband, Leland have been town residents for 27 years raising and educating their two daughters, Jessica and Rebecca, n the Cohasset schools. During that time 'Lee' volunteered extensively particularly in math, computer, art and music programs.

Throughout the years Lee has served on the Cultural Exchange Committee and the Council on Aging and was a member of the Community Center on the Board of Directors and the Program Committee. She was also a Brownie Leader, Youth Symphony Coordinator, Sunday School teacher, host mother for 23 foreign students and teachers, METCO Host mother and currently is a member of the Community Garden Club. Lee co-founded the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers which has been looking to achieve fiscal responsibility and accountability in all town finances.

Jenkins has a B.A. from Rosemont College and has worked in the public as well as the private sectors. Lee is a local small business owner and realizes the importance of common sense and sound business practices in making a budget work.

The romance of Chuck and Camilla

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I have to confess I don't know what to get Chuck and Camilla for their wedding next month.

My usual gift to the bride is a copy of "The Joy of Cooking" but I'm not sure that Camilla can cook.

The cookbook has proven to be a popular wedding present, except in one case where the bride took it to mean I was critical of her lasagna and hasn't invited me back to the table since. I didn't mean it, Lisa.

But I digress . . .

The wedding of Chuck and Camilla, which is scheduled for April 8 before a JP at the Windsor Town Hall, is going to be an exclusive affair . . . er, event, which means that I haven't gotten my invitation yet.

Maybe it's because George and his terrorist-hunters still have a backlog of envelopes from England to steam open in their continuing search for weapons of mass destruction.

It's not that I'm upset about not being invited to the most important matrimonial event since JLo and Ben .

It's not that I'm upset about not being invited to the most important matrimonial event since JLo and Ben . . . What's that? . . . Whaddya mean they didn't? . . . Okay, since Britney Spears and whatsisname.

I am reliably informed that Chuck's mother, Liz, didn't get an invite, either, and neither did his brothers, Andy and Eddie, and his sister, Annie. Now, there's a dysfunctional family.

However, Liz and the kids will be at the reception after the wedding at Windsor Castle because Liz herself is throwing it. I didn't get an invitation to that, either. But I don't mind. The beer will probably be warm and there'll be anchovies in the hors d'oeuvres.

The romance between Chuck and Camilla has been an unusual one ever since they first met 35 years ago on the Windsor Great Park polo field.

"My great-great grandmother was your great-great grandfather's mistress, so how about it?" said Camilla, breaking the conversational ice.

"Duh," said Chuck.

Now, in my circles, a normal man hearing that would have had a room at the No Tell Motel in a minute and 27 seconds. Chuck was 21 at the time but obviously suffering through a difficult puberty.

Camilla went on to wed a cavalry officer named Andy and Chuck married a sweet young thing named Diana and it looked like the Chuck and Camilla Show was over before it started.

Sixteen years after they first met at the polo grounds, however, Chuck and Camilla met again and this time Chuck knew what to do, although there is evidence that his romantic line with the ladies had not improved that much.

In a cell phone conversation leaked to the public, Chuck was caught telling Camilla, "I'll just live inside your trousers or something."

In spite of it, Camilla remained by his side and pretty soon they were getting mail at the same address.

And, now, with Andy and Diana out of the way, Chuck is about to make an honest woman out of her.

Kinda gets you in the old Mickey Mouse, doesn't it?

Valentines Fund Dance support is appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The volunteers of the Valentines Fund and I would like to thank all the people who supported, attended and donated items and services to the Third Annual Valentines Fund Dance.

At least 225 attendees had a blast and together contributed a total of more than $15,000 to the Bread & Jams homeless shelter in Harvard Square.

In agreement with a recent request that letters-to-the-editor be short, I will beg understanding from merchants, friends and musicians, ranging from Atlantica to Wear and Tear, from Pembroke to Harvard Square — we and the folks at Bread & Jams thank you all as one.

A little help from a lot of people again provided a February miracle for the shelter. They are in awe of this town's compassion and I am happy to pass on their thanks.

School costs are not rising disproportionately

TO THE EDITOR:

The letter-to-the-editor last week from Joseph McElroy (More on merit pay for teachers) contained a number of comments about school finances which are evident of the sort of misleading arguments made by those who are highly critical of our schools.

Mr. McElroy wrote, "Cohasset should leverage its small school district with a high achieving student body to contain costs." That is a wonderful-sounding statement, but what in the world is that supposed to mean? I don't recall Mr. McElroy doing anything to put that general theory into practice while he was a member of the School Committee. But if now he has some specific ideas on cost containment for Cohasset schools without sacrificing quality, then this is the time for him to step forward and elaborate.

He drew an analogy to the New England Patriots, citing their 24th lowest payroll in the NFL out of 32 teams, to suggest, I suppose, that the Cohasset schools likewise can remain high-achieving (Mr. McElroy stated in his letter that Cohasset students achieve in the top 5 percent in the state), but can do so at a lower relative cost than other school districts. This facile analogy (which our governor recently used) is an insult to the intelligence of every student, parent, and teacher in Massachusetts. For Mr. McElroy and our governor to compare the economics of operating an NFL football team to the finances of public education is absurd on its face.

But unlike Mr. McElroy's letter, let's look at some facts about Cohasset's school spending. According to the State Dept. of Education web site, the latest figures available for per pupil spending in each district show that in FY 2003, Cohasset taxpayers expended $7409 per regular education pupil. Compared to the 208 K-12 school districts listed on the DOE chart, this ranked Cohasset in 38th place in spending per pupil. Thus, we are in the top 5 percent of achievement, but only in the top 18 percent of spending, a ratio of performance-to-spending not quite as cost-effective as the Patriots' record, but nowhere near as indicative of overspending by our schools as Mr. McElroy's letter suggests.

Mr. McElroy also made this statement: "It also is true that 20 years ago Cohasset real estate taxes were in the mid-range of Massachusetts communities, whereas we now are in the top 3 percent largely driven by disproportionate increases in school operating costs." (My emphasis.) Mr. McElroy did not provide any statistical information to back up this statement, so I went to the Town Clerk's office to look at the Town Report for 1985. The total town budget figure appropriated for FY 1985 was $8,432,365. The school budget for that year was $4,086,649, about 48 percent of the total town budget. But for FY 2005, the total town operating budget was $29,378,494, of which the school budget was $12,003,038, about 40 percent of the total town budget. Thus, if you compare the figures from 1985 and 2005, the school budget has increased by a factor of 2.93, whereas the other town budget line items have increased by a factor of about 4.0 over the past 20 years. In other words, the rest of the town budget has outpaced the school budget by a growth rate of 36 percent from 1985-2005.

Thus, contrary to Mr. McElroy's assertion that school costs are rising disproportionately to the rest of the town budget, just the opposite is true: School costs in Cohasset have risen at a slower rate than the town budget as a whole.

Further, putting aside ancient history from a generation ago, the 2004 Town Meeting warrant shows that school budget costs are rising at a slower rate than the rest of the town budget even in the present era of increasing school enrollment and increased costs for special education and MCAS requirements. The budget figures on page 13 of the warrant show that for the four year period from FY 2002 to FY 2005, the school budget increased by just over 20 percent (from $9,999,725 to $12,003,038), while the rest of the town budget line items increased by more than 22percent (from $14,162,725 to $17,375,456).

The problems facing the Cohasset school system are both serious and worthy of serious discussion on both sides of the fiscal equation debate. However, points-of-view which engage in misstatements of fact, teacher-bashing, and grandiose schemes with no basis in reality are counterproductive to the task at hand of maintaining a quality school system for our children.

Teachers' pay and the Patriots

TO THE EDITOR:

This morning (Thursday) as I read the Globe's sports page, I was reminded of Mr. McElroy's letter to the editor about merit pay. Mr. McElroy would like Mariner readers to believe that local teacher salaries and contractual agreements are analogous in some way to the New England Patriots' champion status earned over the years with a low payroll ranking (relative to other NFL teams).

The Globe reports that Joe Andruzzi, who "made $1.2 million last season and repeatedly said he preferred to remain with New England, signed a four-year, $9 million contract with the Browns." Outstanding players such as Andruzzi are lured away by greener pastures, despite having 1.2 million reasons to stay with a champion organization.

Should Cohasset ever implement merit pay for teachers along the lines suggested by Mr. McElroy, and should other school districts then follow suit in order to retain their own "franchise teachers" might an outstanding teacher follow the lead of professional athletes, thereby driving up the town's payroll even further? Or, would it just exacerbate the inequity in quality teaching he seeks to eliminate?

Some sort of free agency in teaching... I'd love to see it. I won't ever command the big bucks in such a dream world, but I'll jump on that train any day.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

This week's question was posed to candidates for selectman and the school committee:

Prop. 2-1/2 overrides have become annual events and are often driven by school budget needs. What, if anything can be done to reverse this trend?

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

Across Massachusetts the local tax burden has increased causing many communities to feel squeezed trying to maintain level town services. This is a statewide problem. This is why I support the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) in its quest to fairly address these concerns at the state legislative level.

For instance one such strategy is to accelerate the five-year schedule to phase out the current Lottery fund diversion into state coffers (away from towns such as Cohasset). Another proposal is to close the property tax loophole which exempt telephone poles, wires and telecommunications machinery. This legislation would restore $2.8 billion in valuation across Massachusetts, resulting in an additional $100 million of local tax levy flowing into the local coffers.

Shifting the burden of unfunded state mandates away from cities and towns back to the state is another possible source of revenue. For instance, I believe that the state should cover a larger portion of special education costs. The current formula mandates that towns such as Cohasset must pay up to four times the amount specified in the "mean educational per pupil cost of the locality' and then costs are divided based on a fixed percentage. My concern is that all parents become embroiled in school politics just trying to do the best for their children, all while trying to keep class sizes lower. Therefore, the best way to balance fairness and social responsibility when paying for these costs, in my opinion, is for the state to take more responsibility in this area.

Meanwhile insurance cost and health care costs in particular continues to rise. To partially address these particular concerns, Cohasset is currently considering not funding one position in each of the following departments: Police, Fire and Highway and eliminating all capital expenditures for one year.

SELECTMAN/ Debbie Shadd

Nobody likes overrides. Yet the need to preserve services is real. Continued excellence in education is critical to Cohasset's future.

During my six years on the Advisory Committee, I worked to identify best practices for delivery and budgeting of municipal and school services. We have the opportunity for a fresh start with a new town manager, school superintendent and police chief. I look forward to working with all town officials to achieve more accuracy and openness in the budgeting process.

Cohasset is not unique in facing school and other budget issues. Since 2002, net state aid is down 44 percent. The school population is up 16 percent and we have new school buildings to maintain. State-mandated special education costs for FY06 are 68 percent higher than for FY05. This expense plus teacher salaries account for over 80 percent of the proposed FY06 school budget. I believe the schools' salary line item could be managed more effectively with multi-year forecasts of changes due to retirements and step and level changes in the teachers' contract. We should continually explore, in all budgets, opportunities for savings and more efficient delivery of services, including group purchasing, bringing contracted services in-house, and appropriate fees for services. Better communication and coordination between decision-making bodies could help reduce our substantial legal bills.

Better management of expenses is important. Controlled growth is also part of the solution. It will increase our tax base and revenue. Development within the context of our zoning by-laws will bring in revenue and reduce the burden on residential taxpayers, while still protecting the character of the town.

Finally, this is one town. A "schools versus town" mentality in budget discussions is not productive. Everyone needs to work together to meet the significant financial challenges Cohasset faces. I am committed to that effort.

SELECTMAN/ Gary Vanderweil

Proposition 2-1/2 was designed to give municipal voters a say in their taxation. Any time town and school officials recommend budgets that result in an increase of the tax levy that exceeds 2-1/2 percent, we the voters have the opportunity to approve or disapprove the increase.

Up to now, we have approved the town and school officials' recommendations for increased budgets, and have voted in favor of the necessary overrides. In other words, we the townspeople, at least the majority of us, have agreed to accept the higher level of taxes that resulted from the overrides.

But the system will work in the other direction too. If the voters wish to reverse the trend of overrides, all we have to do is to start disapproving them. In this case, the town and school officials will seek and find the means to live within the 2-1/2 percent tax levy increase.

This week's question was posed to candidates for selectman and the school committee:

Prop. 2-1/2 overrides have become annual events and are often driven by school budget needs. What, if anything can be done to reverse this trend?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Lee Jenkins

Cohasset has become one of the top 10 in the state for property taxes for single payer homes. According to articles written by school committee members and data in the school budget we are not #1 in teacher salaries but we are higher than surrounding towns in per pupil expenditures.

We need to take a good hard look at the budget to find out where our education dollars are going. Unfortunately we have no expense totals, comparisons or details to understand where we may have problems.

SPED is always a variable and until this year we have dealt with any increases at the fall STM. Now, with inadequate explanation, we are told that there is an increase of $518K for '06 .

The school committee hasn't taken into account all of the education expenses when considering their budget. Items such as employee benefits, maintenance (paid on the town side) and debt service for school renovations have an impact on everything we spend.

In order to keep spending at a manageable level, we all have to work together. It is time to have an open and transparent budget, networked with the town. We need to work as a team in the areas of: purchasing, equipment leases, motor pool maintenance and trim expenses in health care to realize significant savings without impacting classroom quality.

With our new facilities manager the selectmen have promised our utilities will be working more efficiently thus realizing yearly savings. Our school union contracts and administrative raises need to be negotiated within Prop 2-1/2 guidelines considering the full ramifications of the salary increases and benefits on the total town budget.

To stay within 2-1/2 we cannot be afraid to reach for creative, commonsense initiatives. Thinking out of the box can bring us fiscal responsibility if we're willing.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Pam Wilson

The short answer to this question is that we need to take a hard look at the budget and all of the expenses associated with it. We must make sure that it is comprehensive enough, and provides enough operational funding for the coming year.

My belief is that a strong school system is one of the pillars of our town. As a parent of Cohasset students, I am greatly concerned about the future of our schools. Prop 2 !/2 overrides are worrisome to all of us, as residents. Naturally, we need to take a hard look at the budget and set a clear list of priorities. However, It is important that we don't dwell on the past, but look to the future to set us in the right direction. As a town we are playing catch up from a number of very important expenditures that we have had to make in the recent past. Our schools are completed, and we must now set our sights on maintaining our strong reputation as on of the better schools in Massachusetts. It is important for us to be fiscally responsible, however, not at the expense of our students and the quality of their education.

My role as a member of the school committee will be to take an active position in developing communication between residents of our community, teachers and the committee. It is important to ensure that we are focusing our energy and resources in the most critical areas. People are often quick to criticize the important efforts of our volunteers on committees. Communication of ideas and support, in an encouraging manner by town residents, will greatly enhance the committee's effectiveness. We are clearly experiencing a difficult time within our community. Creativity and objective involvement is needed by all of our residents, to help us get through our financial difficulties. Rather than criticizing, let's try as a community, to come up with some positive solutions to strengthen our schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 3-year/Alfred Slanetz

First, the FY05 school budget represents only 40 percent of the $30 million Town Budget. This is down from 54 percent of the Town Budget in 1980. Spending decisions in all of the Town Departments affect the override and the current allocation to the School Department may be too low.

Second, State and Federal Governments mandate programs but fail to adequately fund them. From FY02 to FY06 Out of District Tuition for Special Education (a State mandate) has doubled to $1,300,000 and net state aide has decreased by 44 percent. One Out of District child's education can cost up to $186,000/year.

Third, 70 percent of the School Budget is governed by the teacher union contract. Over the last 3 years, this contract guaranteed salary increases of $360,000 (3.8 percent) per year. These salary increases and the $540,000 expense increase relating to the new school buildings resulted in multiple cuts in teachers and educational programs as the number of students increased by 208 (16 percent). While we can be more cost effective in non-instructional areas of the Budget, these areas will save us about 1 percent. We need the cooperation of the teacher's union in the current negotiations to hold salary increases for the next three years in exchange for additional teachers.

Fourth, additional non-property tax sources of revenue need to be developed including fundraising, grant writing and payment for services. We need to work with the Cohasset Education Foundation to see how we can increase this source of revenue.

By working together over the next three years, we can improve the schools and realign the budget with educational value. To catch up there may be overrides for the next three years. However, we will strive to get greater value for our tax dollars. After that, providing we have solved the structural Budget issues, Cohasset can avoid annual overrides.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For the school committee candidates: Tuition-based, full-day kindergarten has been floated as a way to raise revenue for the schools. Share with us your thoughts on charging tuition for a public school program such as this.

For the selectman candidates: Will incorporating a schedule to sewer Little Harbor into a potential Third Amended Final Judgement help or hurt the town? And do you believe that decision should be made by the Board of Selectmen or Town Meeting?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Shane Dorian tries to get the upper hand against his opponent during Saturday's All-State Wrestling Tournament. Dorian finished second overall in the 140lb weight class.

Kehoe, Dorian head to New Englands

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For two Cohasset wrestlers, one more weekend of action remains.

Senior Joe Kehoe and junior Shane Dorian both continued their marvelous seasons last weekend at Salem by each finishing second in the All-State tournament.

As a result, both qualified for the New England competition at North Andover this weekend.

"This was a great showing for us," said head coach Torin Sweeney. "To have two kids finish second here and make New Englands, that's quite an accomplishment."

"This was a great showing for us. To have two kids finish second here and make New Englands, that's quite an accomplishment."

Head coach Torin Sweeney

To make the All-State finals in the 160-pound weight class, Kehoe scored two convincing victories, including a 10-5 win over Div. 1 state champ Joe Murphy in the semifinals.

The Div. 3 state champ ran into a buzzsaw in the finals, however, in Franklin's C.J. Colace. Colace came into the match 44-0 on the year, with an incredible 44 pins. He made it 45 with 30 seconds to go in the first period, but the second-place finish was good enough for Kehoe to earn a spot at New Englands.

Dorian's tournament was quite similar: two good wins in the first two rounds, including one over an All-State finalist from last year. He was pinned, however, by Central Catholic's Bob Murray in the second period of the final match.

David McKenna, Matt Casey, Matt Baroudi and Jonathan Littauer all also competed at All-States. McKenna, a Div. 3 state champ, won one match. Casey and Baroudi both wrestled through injuries, and likely would have placed had they been healthy.

Impressive season ends with first-round loss to Cathedral

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The season may have ended Wednesday night, but the Cohasset girls basketball team has a lot to be proud of.

A 60-38 loss to Cathedral in the first round of the Div. 4 South sectional ended the Skippers' season at 12-9, but given the talent lost from last year and injuries this year, making the tournament was an impressive accomplishment.

"Making the tournament was a goal of ours, but I wasn't sure we could do it [before the season started]," said head coach John Levangie Thursday morning. "And I don't think we expected to make it at 12-8. It was a great year."

Against a team that Levangie called the quickest they had faced all season, Cohasset got down early. A 15-point deficit with six minutes to go in the first half proved too much to overcome.

"The kids definitely worked hard, as they have every single game this year," Levangie said. "We probably could have made more of our shots early, but it was Cathedral's quickness that beat us more than anything. They're a good team, and you have to give them credit."

Seniors Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney ended their high school basketball careers with solid games. Anderson scored a team-high 18, while Whitney chipped in with eight. Levangie said the duo's senior leadership was on full display throughout the game.

Mia Lieb-Lappen also did a good job on the boards, while freshman Meg Anderson played well defensively. Anderson has had to step into the starting point guard role for the last several games after junior Chelsea Grossman was injured, and Levangie said she has fared well in doing so.

"We were lucky to have Meg play the way she did these last seven games," he said. "Otherwise, we would have had huge troubles."

The coach said the team's attitude was upbeat after the season-ending loss, as the girls knew they did well to make it as far as they did.

"Cathedral was simply the better team," Levangie said. "Our kids overachieved all year; at some point, it had to end. But they played with such heart. For a young team with only two seniors to do this, it was impressive."

Boys hoops build for the future

All 11 players returning to next year's squad

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

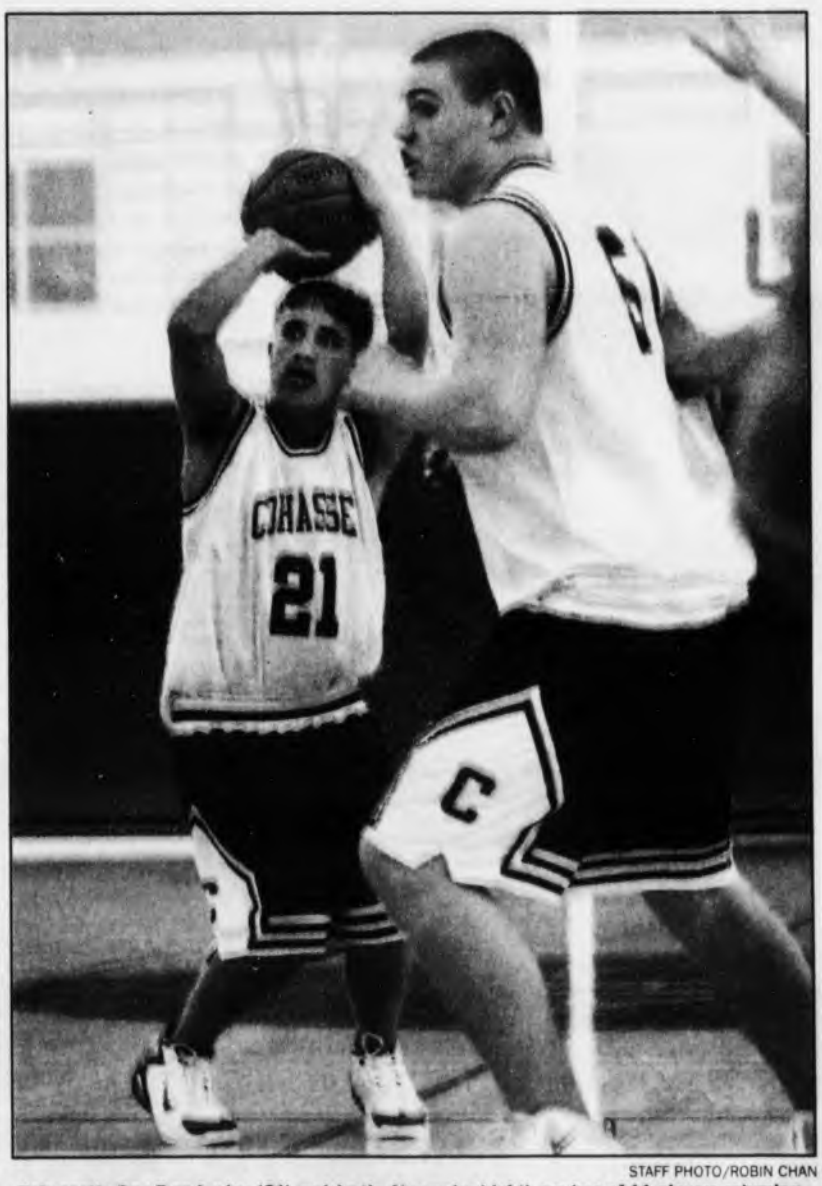
For the Cohasset boys basketball program, the 2005-06 season starts now.

The team went through its proverbial growing pains this season, finishing with a 5-15 overall record. The Skippers did win, however, three of its last four.

Head coach Dorian Bryant hopes the season-ending momentum serves as a springboard to an off-season that involves a lot of basketball. The coach and his staff are designing clinics to work on skills and fundamentals, and hope to have their players involved in various spring and summer leagues.

"I think off-season work is the key for us," Bryant said Wednesday. "I don't want Cohasset hoops to be a three-month program. We have to be playing - and playing together - year-round if we want to get to the level we want to be at."

The coach says his teams has, for the most part, been receptive to what the staff is asking of them.



"We told them there has to be a commitment to the game if they want to compete with the other South Shore League teams," Bryant said. "I think they really learned that this year. I think they said to themselves, 'If we pick up a ball and work at it, hey, we could be pretty good.'"

Bryant said the difference in his team from the start of the season and the end has been "night and day," particularly in the four principles of the game that the coach stresses most: defense/rebounding, turnovers, free throws, and intensity.

There are some reasons to be optimistic for the future. One is Trevor Brady, who served as the team's captain in his junior year this season. He was the team's leading scorer at 13 points per game, and developed leadership skills as the season wore on.

"Trevor did better than I expected [as captain]," Bryant said. "He had the team working hard at the end of the year, and made sure they didn't give up, which is tough to do given some of the losses we took this year.

"I think he really took that upon himself halfway through the season. He got them to play hard and work hard at practice."

Cohasset's Dan Trendowicz (21) and Justin Alexander (right) are two of 11 players returning to what could be a much-improved boys basketball team in 2005-06.

Another athlete that has those around the program excited is sophomore center Justin Alexander. The big fella showed a lot of improvement over the course of the season, and has a soft touch around the basket. With a year under his belt, Alexander could be a double-double guy next season.

Two Nor-Coh gymnasts qualify for state individual meet

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team's top two athletes will be participating in the state individuals meet on March 6.

Seniors Nancy Durkin and Samantha Rosen both qualified to compete at the meet at Beverly High School by placing in the top 15 in the South region in their best events.

Durkin will be competing that afternoon in the all-around, while Rosen will compete in the morning in two individual events, the vault and floor exercise.

A senior from Cohasset, Durkin is also in contention for a spot in the national competition this spring in Florida. That honor goes to only the top eight senior gymnasts in the state, as teams from all states compete against one another.

The team also recently participated in the Cranberry League meet at Marshfield High School. Four girls won medals by virtue of finishing in the top-6 of their events.

Rosen finished second in the vault with a score of 8.5 for the highest finish on the team. The Norwell senior also placed sixth on bars with an 8.0. Durkin placed fifth in the all-around with a 33.15.

Norwell junior C.J. Himberg (fifth on the beam) and Cohasset junior Lisa Spirito (sixth on beam) rounded out Nor-Coh's top finishers on the day.

Also during the league meet, Durkin, Rosen, Spirito and Norwell junior Erin Kelly were named league All-Stars.

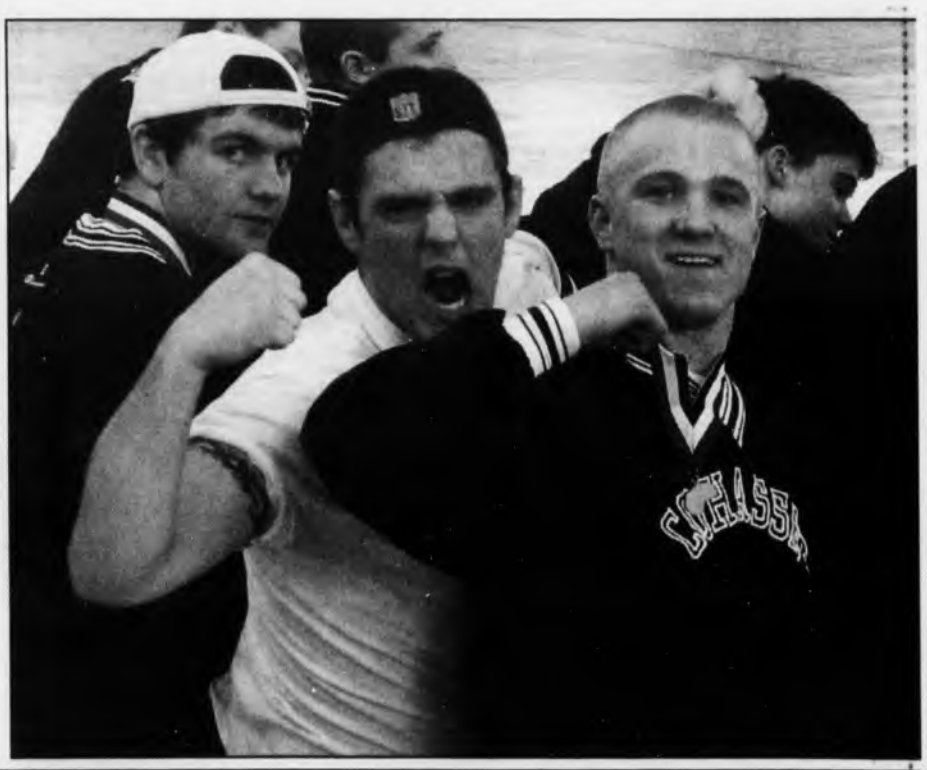
Cohasset High School took time out on Wednesday afternoon to honor the 17 student-athletes of the Div. 3 state wrestling champions.

The kids wore their team jackets and championship medals while head coach Torin Sweeney addressed the crowd. The MIAA trophy was also on hand.



And there was much rejoicing.

Students, teachers and parents were on hand for the assembly on Wednesday honoring the state champs.

"Patrick has a real special chance to do some nice things here at Cohasset," Bryant said.

McCarthy and classmate Mike Bilodeau will be playing AAU for the Coastal Pops, where they will receive continued tutelage from Bryant.

And as for the first-year coach, he said he found himself to be "a little more patient than I thought I was going to be."

"As a coaching staff, we had to be patient," Bryant said. "But we saw a lot of positive things for the future. I think the future is bright for us."

Coghlan-Cusack Marathon Golf Classic

In its decade of existence, the Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic has become a staple on the local scene, kicking off the golfing season each spring with a celebrity-studded gala two days after the Boston Marathon.

The event has raised over $270,000 for Our Lady's Hospital for Sick Children, and its organizers are looking forward to the biggest and best edition yet on April 20.

The 10th annual installment of the ECNC Classic is scheduled for South Shore Country Club in Hingham that day, with a noontime shotgun start followed by an awards banquet. This year's tournament will be dedicated to the late Jim Hannan, a charter member of the ECNC committee, who passed away earlier this month.

Over the years, celebrities from both sides of the Atlantic have participated in the ECNC tournament - Eamonn Coghlan and Neil Cusack themselves; entertainers Finbar Furey and Niall Toibin; former Red Sox pitchers Bill Lee and Luis Tiant and manager Joe Morgan; present and former Patriots like Adam Vinatieri, Babe Parilli, Larry Eisenhauer, and Gino Cappelletti; boxers Gerry Cooney, Micky Ward and Dana Rosenblatt; former Celtics Jo Jo White and Ernie DiGregorio; ex-Bruins Ken Hodge, Johnny McKenzie, Rick Middleton and Johnny Bucyk; and a host of New England Revolution players and coaches from Frank Stapleton to Taylor Twellman, along with radio and television personalities Steve Burton and John Dennis.

Speakers and entertainers at the post-tournament dinner have included former heavyweight champion George Foreman, Delores Keane, and John McDermott.

The Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic — named for the former world mile record-holder and the only Irish winner of the Boston Marathon (in 1974) - is sponsored by Foxwoods Resort Casino, Honey Dew Donuts, United Liquors, the New England Revolution, Magner's Irish Cider, New Balance Athletic Shoes, Galway Irish Crystal, Kerr Printing, and Tuohy Sports and Entertainment, in association with the Aisling Gallery of Hingham.

Although a sold-out field is anticipated again this year, a few spots (at $150 per player or $600 per team) remain available. For information contact the ECNC Classic c/o Aisling Gallery, 229 Lincoln Street, Hingham MA 02043, e-mail ECNCClassic@aol.com or telephone (781) 773-1097.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 19, 2005.

Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 12, 2005, from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon, in the lower lobby of the High School gymnasium.

In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 19, 2005. Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio at (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail.

Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 19, 2005 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced.

Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 as of July 31, 2005.

A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65. Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about player eligibility. In addition, please note that the CYBSA will be offering a Junior League program this year for Softball and Baseball players who are 13 and 14 years of age. Information about the Junior League program, and registration for the Junior League program, will be published in the near future.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program. Questions regarding either player or coach registration may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)-383-1897.

This clinic is open to any parent that is interested in coaching or wants to gain a basic understanding of proper techniques in hitting, fielding, basic strategy and practice organization. Please note, anyone planning to be a head coach, at any level, is required to attend this session.

Girls' softball takes center stage at SSBC

Veteran SSBC instructor Frank Niles, Jr. will conduct a pre-season softball Hitters' Workshop for girls, as well as Barry "No Hit" Needham's final Pitching Clinic of the season, are on deck in March at the South Shore Baseball Club (SSBC) in Hingham.

The Hitters' Workshop will be held back-to-back weekends, Saturday and Sunday, March 12-13 and 19-20. This productive program was designed to improve all aspects of a hitting. It is open to girls 10 and older who will be grouped according to age and ability.

Each player will pass through a series of hitting stations, each with a slightly different focus, in order to help improve and prepare them for the upcoming 2005 season. A variety of live pitching, soft toss, tee work, short toss, bunting and machine work will provide plenty of "swings" for every participant.

"This is a great opportunity for girls to further develop their softball skills and get a head start on the spring season," SSBC president/director Frank Niles, Jr. said. "SSBC girls are receiving the same opportunities for off-season training that boys have received here for many years."

The one-hour, five-week clinics will be held Sunday mornings, either at 10 am or 11 am, for five consecutive weeks, Mar. 20-April 24. Pitchers must be at least 10 years of age and provide their own catchers. COASTAL STARS

Mite C1

The Mite C-1 team chalked up another win against a undefeated Braintree team on a early Sunday morning.

The Stars defeated Braintree 6-1 with a stellar performance by goalie Davis Cronin. He was unstoppable against a tough Braintree offense.

Jake Moore chalked up his first hat trick of the season. Helping him out was Ben Swim and Daniel Cronin. Sean Feeney and Tyler Mckinnon were both standouts on defense.

Cam Mastrangelo and Chris Bertone both moved the puck and kept the pressure down in the Braintree zone.

Liam Manning and Jack Conlon both added points to the score board. Hugh Healey, pulling double duty and no shift changes, was great on both offense and defense.

The Stars were short on men that day but pulled out all the stops for a well earned victory.

Chalk up another win for the Mite C-1 team. The burner has been turned up for this team as they post a 6-1 victory over the Sea Hawks.

Mckinnon was in goal and was once again the "brick wall." The defense of Feeney and Davis Cronin was outstanding. Moore along with wingers Daniel Cronin and Derek Sloan kept the action going.

Keeping the torch going was Joe Proctor who had his first goal of the season. He had some help from Mastrangelo and Joe Deyeso. Bertone was great in defense along with Tommy Prendergast and Manning, who had a goal.

The burner was kept lit by Healey with five assists, Conlon with a goal and to top it off, Jack Shaw with a hat trick! Way to go boys!

Stars Mite B

Do you believe in miracles?

Tournament hockey in February is no different than college basketball in March- it's Madness! Facing the Seahawks in the opening match turned into a thriller. An uncharacteristic start by the STARS had them coming out flat and giving up three quick goals. Coach Rice, a handsome but alive Herby Brooks, called a strategic time out and took the crowd out of the game.

This tactic had an immediate dividend, when Ben Rice won the ensuing face off in the offensive zone and passed to Michael Lund. Lund wristed a rocket top shelf. The Seahawks answered the call and scored on the next shift, regaining a 3 goal lead. At the end of the first period, the STARS faced one of their biggest deficits of the season, trailing 4-1.

The irony of this game was the fact it was being played on the 25th anniversary of the 1980 Olympic game, USA vs. Russia, and it resembled it in intensity. In the 2nd period, Ben Rice received a text book pass from Curtis Golden and Rice fired a slap shot to the back of the Seahawk's net, making the score 4-2. Halfway through the period, James Hussey sent a laser pass to Jeff Powers who then buried a shot 5 hole! At the end of two, it was a tight 4-3 game.

At 13:09 of the 3rd frame, Aiden Beresford sent a saucer like pass to Joey Redfearn , Redfearn shuffled a lead pass to Matt Doyle. Doyle hoisted his signature wrist shot to the roof of the net, 4-4! With the score tied, the STARS put the weight of this contest on the broad and defensive shoulders of Declan Leahy and James Hussey. This tandem, combined with outstanding goaltending by Kal "Jim Craig" Meir , the STARS fought off countless Seahawk attacks.

With excellent hustle and two way hockey from rookies Liam McHugh and Kyle Bowman, the STARS turned on the offensive power, only to be denied by exceptional Seahawks goaltending. With 2:10 to play, the Seahawks took the lead, 5-4, and sent an ominous dark cloud over the STARS fans' hopes.

Never to give up and with 1:12 to play, Sam Rice split two Seahawk defenders and fed a lead pass to the lightning streak known as Robert Reidy. Reidy shifted from right to left and sent a picturesque pass to Tucker Ambrose. Ambrose netted the tying goal 5-5,…….. and the crowd went wild!

This game went into overtime, not once, not twice, but count them, THREE times; first 5 on 5, then 4 on 4, then 3 on 3. In the 3rd OT, with Captain Patrick Graham calling out offensive plays, the remaining STARS players formed a triangle. Graham, Matt Doyle and Bryan Bowman set up shop in the offensive zone.

With the fans on the edge of their seats, all eyes were on what would be the final play of the game: Doyle to Graham, Graham to Bowman, and then a classic Bowman wrist shot right off the face of the Seahawks goalie's mask. As time stood still, fans and players alike watched the puck bounce over the goalie's head and into the net. 6-5 STARS!!

Twenty-five years later, we still believe in Miracles.

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 came back from a three goal deficit to tie Hingham 6 to 6 on Sunday at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. The Stars got off to a sluggish start giving up two early goals in the first period. Derek Benson cut the deficit to 1 with a goal off of a rebound from a Kyle Bowman shot.

After giving up two more goals in the period, the Stars found themselves down 4 to 1 heading into the second period. Jo Jo Carbone started the come back when he took a Derek Benson feed for the Stars second goal.

After giving up a breakaway goal, the Stars dug down deep and started to put on the offensive pressure. Brian Mathews took a feed from Tucker Antico and raced down the ice only to be denied by a great save.

However, this play set the tone for the rest of the period. On the next shift Derek Benson scored on a breakaway after taking a feed from Mats Nelson who assisted on the goal. Chris Phillips kept the Stars close by making some great saves as the period closed.

Kyle Bowman started the scoring in the third period after taking a feed from Seamus Ryan and scoring on a breakaway. Brian Mathews also assisted on the goal. The two teams continued to play hard throughout the period. Gunnar McKenzie, Mathew Johnson, Andrew Kuppens, and Shaelyn Tobin all stepped it up on defense while Harrison Sheldon and Jo Jo Carbone displayed some solid back checking.

Trailing 6 to 4 with just 4 minutes to play, Derek Benson scored his third goal of the game assisted on a nice pass by Kyle Bowman. Later in that same shift Jo Jo Carbone stole the puck at center ice and scored an unassisted goal to tie the game at 6.

After a Hingham penalty with just under two minutes to play, the Stars went on the power play and had several scoring chances with Kyle Bowman, Jo Jo Carbone and Derek Benson all having scoring chances only to be thwarted by some great goal tending down the stretch.

Squirt C2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team had all they could handle last week skating to a 3-3 tie with the Seahawks Squirt C-1 team. Ironically, the Seahawks and Coastal Stars are tied for best record in the Yankee Conference League.

The Seahawks got off to an early lead 1-0 in the first period. The Coastal Stars answered with a goal by Nate Morse in the second period. That was followed by a Mick Barry goal from a Jack Kuppens pass. Not to be denied, the Seahawks "threaded the needle" on Alec Hurd, the Star's goalie, to make it 2-2 with one tick left on the clock to end period two. Mick Barry was able to feed Jack Kuppens for a Star's early third period goal, making it 3-2.

The Seahawks would not let up on the defense of the Coastal Stars, Nate Morse, Nick Mulrey, Mike Hutchinson and Chris Bjorkman. Pressuring the Stars relentlessly, Hurd turned away all shots. It was because of this pressure that the Seahawks found a hole and tied the game, 3-3.

Interestingly, the Stars became motivated and peppered the Seahawks goalie with outstanding shots, countered with outstanding saves. Although the Stars' Ethan Maher, Tim Cavanaro, Brendon Queenan, Jake Timcoe continued to keep the puck in the Seahawks end, it was the Seahawks goaltending and the turning away of a flurry of last second shots by the Seahawks on Hurd that the game ended in an exciting 3-3 tie.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team skated to a 4-4 tie versus the Seahawks on Saturday, Feb. 19 at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

James Daley put the Stars on top first when he stripped a Seahawks defenseman of the puck and fired a quick wrist shot past the stunned Seahawks goalie. Stars winger Michael McPartlin made it 2-0 Stars with a breakaway goal mid-way through the period.

James Daley then scored the second of his three goals to put the Stars up 3-0. Solid position play by defensemen Tristan Wiggin, RJ Neuls, Nick Craig and Jonathan Gardner kept the Seahawks scoreless in the first.

The Seahawks got on the board in the second period narrowing the Stars lead to 3-1. Stars forwards Matt Tautkus, Seamus Feeney, Tommy Coyne, Liam Rose and Andrew Tautkus pressured the Seahawks throughout the second period, but were denied by outstanding goaltending throughout the period.

The third period spelled trouble for the Stars as the Seahawks scored back- to-back goals to tie the game at 3-3 late in the period. Stars goalie Max Hemingway was solid in net and kept the Seahawks from taking the lead. With three minutes left in the period, James Daley completed his hat trick and put the Stars up 4-3.

With one minute left in the period, the Seahawks pulled their goalie, giving them a man advantage for the face-off in the Stars zone. The Seahawks controlled the play in the Stars and scored with less than a minute left in the game making the final score 4-4.

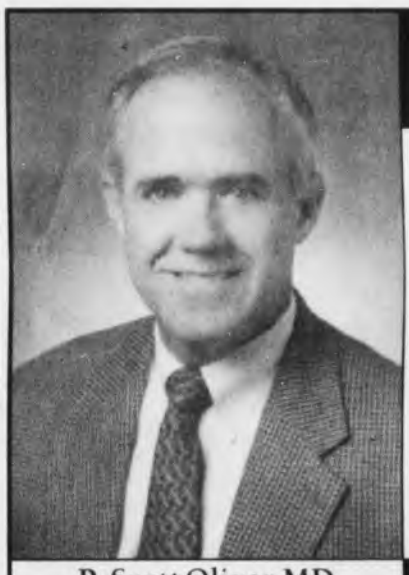
PAC workshops rescheduled

The Cohasset Parents Advisory Council (PAC) has rescheduled workshops. All meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Osgood School Library, 210 Sohier St. All South Shore parents, school faculty, paraprofessionals and any interested parties are cordially invited.

Rescheduled to Tuesday, March 15: "The Diagnosis and Management of Children with a Nonverbal Learning Disability" will be presented by Carol Leavell, Ph.D., ABBPP/CN. Nonverbal Learning Disability is a disorder of information processing that could potentially affect every aspect of a child or adult's life, from social, learning and academics, vocational and self-care situations. For this presentation, Leavell will review the major features of a child with a Nonverbal Learning Disability, including important memory and learning characteristics and etiology. She will also discuss common misconceptions of these children and provide guidelines on how best to manage these children at home and in school.

On Tuesday, April 5, "Language-Based Learning dis-ABILITIES" will be presented by Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. We welcome back Dr. Phillips with her extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention.



Much of PAC's time and resources have gone into providing these workshops for parents, educators and interested parties on the South Shore—free of charge. PAC joins its local members to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. For more information or to be added to PAC's email network for updates, forward your contact information to southshore pac@comcast.net.

Adventurous couple 'sails off the charts'

Lecture benefits maritime programs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When the winter chill sets in and Cohasset Harbor is encrusted with ice, it is no place for the sailboats which frequent its waters during the summer months. However, for sailors John Harries and Phyllis Nickel, who have become experts in exploring the high northern latitudes, floating amongst glaciers in the most remote corners of the open seas is an adventure they have come to know.

This adventurous couple will come to Cohasset Saturday, March 12 as part of an annual lecture series sponsored by the Cohasset Yacht Club. The two will present their slideshow, "Ice and White Space," at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St, beginning at 7 p.m. Their presentation will chronicle their extensive sailing journeys, navigating their 56-foot McCurdy and Rhodes aluminum cutter "Morgan's Cloud," through remote areas like the east coast of Greenland, Baffin Island, Labrador, Arctic Norway and Svalbard (Spitsbergen).

"The Cohasset Yacht Club is extremely proud to host a couple who have literally sailed 'off the charts' into the land of 'ice and white space'. John and Phyllis are experts in this form of sailing challenge and have written extensively about their adventures. Their spectacular photography and accounts about cruising in these remote areas should inspire all of us," said Mary Whitely of the Cohasset Yacht Club, who has been working to coordinate the event.

For the past six years, lectures have served as a means of fundraising for the Cohasset High School Maritime Studies Program and Summer Institute, a program which offers local students the opportunity to participate in an academic program, while taking advantage of the summer months outdoors.

"The pair continues a tradition of outstanding speakers," said Whitley, adding the Northern Latitudes will be an exciting destination for this year's lecture.

Past lecturers have included Tania Aebi, who at 18 years old was both the first woman sailor and the youngest person ever to circumnavigate the globe; Cam Lewis, who, along with four French sailors, navigated an 86-foot catamaran around the world in 79 days, setting a new speed sailing record; and Douglas and Bernadette Bernon, a husband and wife sailing team that has traveled extensively in the Western Caribbean.

Harries was born and brought up in Bermuda and began sailing as a child, racing locally and offshore before turning to cruising. Over the last 35 years, he has accrued more than 100,000 offshore miles, including ocean races to Bermuda. He won his class twice in the Newport Bermuda Race. In the last 14 years, he has skippered a series of voyages in the North Atlantic, the majority of which have been in the high latitudes.

In contrast, Harries' wife Nickel only began sailing eight years ago. Born on the Canadian prairies, she has always had a love of wild places, but had never sailed prior to meeting Harries in 1996. Since then, she has sailed roughly 30,000 offshore miles, most of which have been in the high latitudes. Coming to the sport as an adult, she says she is able to bring "a fresh perspective to high latitude cruising that helps the couple communicate what they do in an approachable way."

Haries and Nickel live on board "Morgan's Cloud," and they continue to cruise while running their business, Attainable Adventure Cruising, which provides cruise planning assistance as well as consulting on the fitting out and building of boats bound for the high latitudes. In addition, the two are freelance writers and photographers with numerous credits in Cruising World Magazine, Sail Magazine, and Yachting World Magazine, as well as stock photographers for an increasing number of clients. In 2003 they took over the Norwegian Cruising Guide from its original authors and are working on a third edition while providing web updates to the second edition.

John Harries and Phyllis Nickel will hold their presentation, "Ice and White Space," Saturday, March 12 at 7 p.m. at St. Anthony's Parish Center, located at 129 Main St. For more information or to reserve tickets, please contact Mary Whitley at (781) 383-9708. Tickets will also be available at the door and cost $15 each, with proceeds going to benefit the Cohasset High School Maritime Studies Program and Summer Institute. Students are free. The lecture is open to the public and refreshments will be served. More information on the speakers is available at their Web site www.morganscloud.org or on the Cohasset Yacht Club Web site at www.cohassetyc.org.

Call firefighter, custodian is remembered by friends

Suffers heart attack after using snow blower at CMHS

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

William R. "Bill" McArthur is being remembered for his great sense of humor, loyalty and sincerity.

He quietly went about his work whether as a custodian and the middle-high school or responding to a fire as a call firefighter.

McArthur, 56, also loved his garden, which he worked in during his spare time. His neighbors enjoyed the fresh produce McArthur would sell at a little stand in front of his Beechwood Street home.

Those who knew McArthur, who was a life-long resident, are still in shock at his loss. McArthur, a Vietnam veteran, suffered an apparent heart attack at work Tuesday morning after using the snow blower at the school.

His wife, Rebecca "Becky" Bates McArthur, is a familiar figure in town. She's a local historian who is active in the Cohasset Historical Society and the Daughters of the American Revolution. The McArthurs' two sons both graduated from Cohasset High. Scott works at Shaw's and Will is a junior in at the University of Maine at Farmington.

"This came as a real shock," Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said. "Bill had been a loyal and dependable member of the call force for 22 years. He always took advantage of training opportunities to better himself in the field of firefighting."

"There's a part of Bill in all our hearts."

— Mike Gill, CMHS Asst. Principal

CMHS Assistant Principal Michael Gill said there was no school on Tuesday due to the weather.

"Bill had been out using the snow blower," Gill recalled. "He told John Danielson, another custodian, to go in and get something.

"A little later John asked me if I'd seen Bill and I said no," Gill said. Gill put out an "all call" on the loud speaker and then he and Danielson started to look for McArthur. Danielson found him a few minutes later in the boys' bathroom near the main office. They yelled to Jane Pescatore, the school secretary, to call 9-1-1 and Gill administered CPR until the paramedics arrived.

The ambulance took McArthur to South Shore Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Gill said he had worked with McArthur for 25 years. "He'll be missed," Gill said. "There's a part of Bill in all our hearts."

Kenny Sargent, a co-worker, described McArthur as someone "who worked hard and tried hard."

Merle Brown, who went to school with McArthur's brother, Earle, agreed. "Bill was a hard worker and he was always concerned about spending enough time with his kids," Brown said. "He was a good parent who wanted the best for his children."

Alan and Linda Snowdale who live near the McArthurs describe McArthur as a quiet man who loved gardening all spring, summer and fall. They said he had a great sense of humor and was looking forward to retiring from the school department possibly next year.

"He was just a gentle soul and we always enjoyed chatting with him," Linda Snowdale said.

Ambulance still on mend following snowy accident

By mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A tractor-trailer truck hit the Cohasset ambulance which was transporting a Vee Roebuck of Beechwood Street to South Shore Hospital on a snowy Monday morning (Feb. 21) at the 90-degree turn on Cushing Street at Ward Street in Hingham.

Roebuck was being transported to the hospital after she slipped and broke her wrist running her dogs in Whitney Woods. "I went home and later Arthur (Vee's husband) called the ambulance," she said.

Roebuck said she was strapped in and all of sudden "boom!" She said a lot of police cruisers and the Hingham ambulance arrived which completed her transport to the hospital. She was uninjured in the mishap. "But I was worried about one of the paramedics, he had a jolt," she said.

Paramedics praised

A Cohasset paramedic strained his back in the incident and was transported to the hospital via Fallon ambulance. He was back at work Wednesday (Feb. 23), Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

Lincoln said although the accident was low-impact, the Cohasset ambulance was damaged and is still at the body shop awaiting repairs. He said he has not received an official appraisal yet on the damage that involved several compartment doors on the vehicle.

In the interim, Cohasset is using the ambulance the town owns jointly with Norwell and Scituate. That ambulance is stored at the Norwell Center Fire Station when not needed for situations like this.

Lincoln explained the Cohasset ambulance was making the turn on Cushing Street and the truck was heading in the opposite direction and was crossing over to Ward Street when the collision occurred.

"The road was icy and he couldn't stop," Lincoln said.

Hingham Police Capt. Taylor Mills said the driver of the truck was being cited for an equipment violation.

Roebuck had praise for all the public safety people involved. "They were all excellent, very professional and very concerned for my safety," she said.

Alleged car thief takes off

A male described as being in his early 20s ran away on foot after crashing the car he was driving on Elm Street in the village Thursday night (Feb. 24).

Police Chief James Hussey said a call came into dispatch at 8:46 p.m. reporting the car, a Mercury Marquis, was operating erratically from Scituate to Cohasset along South Main Street.

He said Sgt. Shellee Peters observed the vehicle, which had its rear lights out, go by her. She followed it along Main Street into the village but the car failed to stop. The driver then attempted to make a right turn onto Elm Street and went across the street onto the sidewalk near the historical society museum, Hussey said.

"The white male escaped through the rear and up the back of the buildings on Elm Street," he said. Police called for a K-9 unit from Weymouth, which was not available. The Plymouth County Sheriff's K-9 unit did respond to the scene but could not pick up the scent.

The car the suspect was driving was stolen from Scituate, Hussey said. The suspect is still at large.

Anyone with information can call the Cohasset police at 781-383-1055 or Scituate police at 781-545-1212.

'What do we want? And what will we do to realize it?'

FAITH REFLECTIONS

REV. DR. JAN CARLSSON-BULL

What do you want? Make a list. Step back. Revise it. A gallon of milk, two pounds of salmon, orange juice, olive oil. Is this what you want today? Or is it a new wing on your house, a new finish on your boat, a new SUV, a new something that psyche-savvy marketers tell us is completely essential for a full life?

What do you want this week? Is it perhaps for a good outcome of that colonoscopy that you finally scheduled, a remission of the cancer for which you've been receiving chemotherapy, a few more months of connection with your husband ailing from Alzheimer's? Or is it simply to get away from it all, whatever the all is that you need to escape? A weekend in Bermuda perhaps, or a mid-winter sojourn to Paris, or a long leisurely sail in the Caribbean.

What do you really want? Is it for your child to come safely home from Iraq? Is it for the corporation to which you were devoted for so many years to assure you that your pension is intact? Is it for the government to assure you that your children's Social Security won't be at the mercy of Wall Street?

Is it for the knowledge that the child from Darfur, who stared back at you from the front pages of the Globe, is still alive? Is it for news that the husband of your Afghani friend has at last been released from Guantanamo Bay? Is it for the promise that the homeless woman, in whose chilled chafed hand you dropped a dollar bill last week, will find shelter and more?

How is it that the mundane flows so quickly into the global? What do we want? Well of course, you might say, of course I need groceries. Of course I want my health. Of course I want those I love to live long healthy lives. Of course I want a few extras. Of course I want everyone to be fed. Of course I want world peace.

What do we want? From the mundane to the global, our response is framed by our faith. In what exactly do we have faith? What compels our devotion? What are the gods we worship — and they are usually plural however monotheistic we deem our particular brand of faith. What drives us? In what do we find purpose? If we have the good fortune of reflecting on a long life, what do we want so see in that rear-view mirror? Who do we want to have been?

How generous? How faithful? How loving? How ready to share power and let go of privilege — to share power, individual or international, that only backfires when hoarded, to relinquish privilege, individual or institutional, that only accrues at another's expense?

What do we want? And what will we do to realize it? It is the bottom line behavior of whatever faith we claim. It is the undercurrent of our reason for being, which connects us intimately with every creature with whom we share this planet on which we all reside as transient guests.

Repair and revitalize damaged trees and shrubs

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

During our extremely brief winter thaw, warm temperatures and patches of bare earth beckoned me into the garden. It became evident that our constant barrage of winter storms had taken a major toll on my woody plantings throughout the landscape. The weight of the melting snow has bent, split, broken, and squashed many well-established shrubs. Although some of these are likely to recover once the warmer weather finally arrives, others may require major pruning to repair nature's damage.

A late winter survey of your property's trees and shrubs should be performed annually. Mid-February to mid-April is the preferred time of year to prune many of these dormant deciduous plants since it is considerably easier to view their architecture and to observe damaged, diseased, or crossed branches before they leaf out. This year's winter storms have injured a wide range of woody plants leaving jagged cuts that may collect water potentially leading to disease. Partially broken tree limbs may eventually cause the protective bark of the trunk to be stripped beneath the tear creating a serious hazard to the plant. Damaged or diseased stems and limbs should be pruned as soon as they are noticed to prevent further injury and the spread of infections. Should you observe crossed branches, remove at least one of the branches as the constant rubbing of one branch against another is an open invitation for disease to penetrate the damaged bark.

The delicate and elegant Japanese thread-leaf maples were especially hard hit by the January blizzard. These umbrella-shaped trees with their network of cascading branches were pulverized by wind and snow and many of the primary branches have been left dangling by a thread of bark. Others were even more severely damaged with entire trunks split by the heavy snowfalls. Although many of the most seriously injured limbs or trees may not be salvaged, I have had some success using duct tape to reposition and repair partially broken trunks and limbs on dogwoods, hawthorns and maples, the bandaging done on warmer, dry days to minimize the dampness in the wounds. Larger limbs were further reinforced by soft rope or wide, flat, vinyl-coated wire to help secure the branches or trunks in place to facilitate healing. Especially long limbs were pruned back to lighten the load. Remarkably, some of the branches have recovered over time. It may well be worth contacting a local arborist for a consultation if you have valuable specimens that have been critically damaged. Small specimens might best be protected in future years with wooden sandwich board type structures to prevent the accumulation of snow on their dense canopies.

To ensure precise pruning, purchase and use proper tools. Quality tools make the job easier, last longer, and produce cleaner cuts facilitating the healing process. Bypass pruners and loppers tend to be preferred by nurserymen, their scissors-like action enabling cleaner, closer cuts. High quality pruners, like the Swiss-made Felco, are worth the additional cost for their durability, precision, and the fact that they have replaceable blades. Avoid anvil-style pruners that have one sharp blade with an opposing flat blunt edge as these may crush stems and produce uneven cuts. Inexpensive pruners also tend to produce ragged cuts because they are easily bent out of shape. Hand pruners are preferred for twigs and smaller branches up to half an inch across. Long-handled lopping shears are useful for cutting larger branches up to 2 inches thick.

Curved-blade pruning saws are usually designed to cut only on the pull-stroke and are ideal for larger branches and great for tight places. Bow saws cut on both the push and pull strokes but require more room to maneuver. Both of these types of saws are available in models with replaceable blades.

When pruning entire branches from the trunk of a tree, cuts should be made just beyond the ridge (above the branch) and the collar (a swollen area below the point of the branch's attachment to the trunk). Sawing a branch too closely to the trunk may disrupt the healing process or may stimulate growth around the site of the wound producing new, unwanted sprouts. It is not necessary to apply paint to the wound as this application may actually interfere with the plant's natural healing ability. To shorten a damaged branch, always prune back to a side branch or bud. Cut the stem at an angle and cut away from an outward facing bud to encourage growth away from the interior spaces of your shrub or tree unless you are striving to fill a gap that may have been produced by storm damage.

The acquisition of a good reference book on pruning will greatly assist all homeowners with helpful diagrams that illustrate pruning techniques. Look for guides that provide recommendations on the appropriate timing of pruning specific varieties of trees and shrubs. Regular pruning will improve the overall appearance of nearly all woody plants.

Classical is on tap at Norwell's Mt. Blue

The cello is an amazing instrument. Made of wood with strings of metal, played with horse hair and fingers, its sound ranges from the lowest tones of the voice through high notes usually associated with the violin. It can be plucked or bowed, played loud or like a whisper, made to sing, to moan, or even to scream.

David Russell, principal cellist of the Hingham Symphony Orchestra.

On March 6 at 7 p.m., in the pub at Norwell's Mt. Blue restaurant, David Russell, principal cellist of the Hingham Symphony Orchestra, takes us deep into the music of the cello. Russell is a young but seasoned performer, who plays contemporary works as well as Bach. He presents a program of solo cello music that includes three diverse pieces: a rock-inspired piece by Eric Moe, a quieter work by Judith Weir that uses transcriptions of Lomax brothers recordings of Southern prison songs from the African-American folk tradition, and, of course, a Bach solo cello suite.

Throughout, he sprinkles stories that bring us behind the music: the life of a professional musician, the idiosyncrasies of the cello, what it's like to play in the pit orchestra for the Lion King. Personable HSO Music Director Jin Kim serves as emcee. Informal, unique, fun - On Tap lets the music flow.

Tickets at $15 adults, $10 youth through age 18, are available in advance at Marsh's Liquors, Rte. 53 Norwell, Hingham Public Library, Noble's and La Petite Maison, Hingham Square, Buttonwood Books, Cohasset, or Front Street Book Shop in Scituate. Or call 781-740-5694 to order by phone.

Ben Gazzara

'Noboby Don't Like Yogi,' even in Red Sox Nation

Gazzara brings one man show about Yankees great to town

Red Sox Nation can relax. Yogi Berra may be a New York Yankees legend, but "Nobody Don't Like Yogi" — the play about his life opening next week at Boston's Wilbur Theatre after a successful off-Broadway run — covers more than just the time Berra spent in the dreaded pinstripes.

"The piece deals with Berra's relationship with George Steinbrenner, of course, but it is also about Yogi's relationship with his family and the deep love he feels for his wife, his children and his grandchildren," explained Ben Gazzara, who portrays the baseball legend, recently from his Manhattan home. "It's a personal portrait and it's funny, of course, but also very touching. It doesn't rely on 'Yogisms' like 'You can observe a lot by watching,' or 'Ninety percent of the game is half mental,' to fill the evening, although there are plenty of them in the script. It is really a play about the human condition."

Written by Thomas Lysaght and directed by Paul Linke, "Nobody Doesn't Like Yogi" celebrates its namesake's humor, loyalty and wisdom as the most quotable athlete of our time reflects on his life and extraordinary career. Gazzara, who originated the role of Brick in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" on Broadway 50 years ago this month and has been a high-profile working actor ever since, plays Berra in 1999 on the occasion of the Hall of Famer's return to Yankee stadium after a 14-year self-imposed exile. Team owner George Steinbrenner had famously fired Berra as manager in 1985, opening wounds that never fully healed.

Gazzara, 74, also had his own healing to do. A 1999 battle with mouth cancer had left the actor uncertain about a return to the stage. "I thought I would never do a one-man show again," says the Emmy Award-winning Gazzara, whose autobiography "In the Moment: My Life as an Actor" was published last fall. "The radiation treatments I had for the cancer really cooked my saliva glands. The lack of saliva makes me dry up. I can't drink water - it just remains in my mouth, because I can't swallow fast enough. It has gotten better over time, but my voice is not the same. Interestingly, I think the sound I have now is better for Yogi than my old voice."

Gazzara may sound more like Berra these days, but audiences almost didn't get to hear him give voice to the onetime Yankees catcher. The actor was in Sweden, filming "Dogville" with Nicole Kidman, when his wife, Elke, called from New York to discuss a certain piece of mail. 'She said someone sent this script and it's so funny and touching that you have to do this. I told her I didn't want to do the play," Gazzara recalls." 'You'll do this play or I'll divorce you. Don't be afraid, just get a vocal coach,' she told me. My wife is always right and she was right this time, too."

Since first performing the show in 2003, Gazzara has seen first-hand that its appeal goes well beyond sports fans. "People who know nothing at all about baseball respond to this play. The piece makes people laugh, thanks to Yogi's unique relationship with the English language, but when I see them crying it means the most."

"Nobody Don't Like Yogi" will be at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont Street, Boston, March 8-13. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787, or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

SUDDEN HEARING LOSS

Sudden hearing loss is more common than most people seem to believe. It affects about one in every five thousand Americans annually. The cause is unknown, but many believe that the culprit is a non-specific virus or a vascular condition. In addition, aging and prolonged exposure to loud noise are common causes. The hearing loss is usually profound, but it returns partially or completely in about two-thirds of cases. The good news is that it does not often affect the ability to interpret speech, which is usually in the low- to mid-pitch frequency range. However, missing the high-frequency information does interfere with word understanding. Those affected are strongly urged to have their hearing tested.

One key element in addressing any hearing impairment includes complete hearing testing by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist to determine the type and degree of an individual's particular loss. This is also the only way FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER can help establish the most appropriate approach to addressing a particular impairment. State-of-the-art products, sophisticated testing equipment, and compassionate, personalized attention await you at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth. Call us soon for a free hearing evaluation at 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Hearing instruments can effectively help those with noise-induced hearing loss to make the most of their residual hearing.

A view of Mirror Lake from the Mirror Lake Inn at Lake Placid, N.Y.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. - Having spent the bulk of my winters skiing the tree-lined slopes of New England, I figured it was time I checked out upstate New York's legendary Whiteface æ site of the 1980 Winter Olympics. With nearly 2 feet of fresh powder having fallen the night before, 28 degrees on the mercury and the sun shining, my first day on the "Face" was about as good as it gets. Locals told me it was rare to have such perfect conditions, but on this day, from the peak, you could see clear across Lake Champlain to Vermont. So cloudless was it that New Hampshire's Mount Washington was visible in the distance. I nearly had first tracks on Skyward, a steep lift-line run dotted with decent bumps under mounds of fluffy powder. Ditto on Approach, an equally steep but narrower swath that cuts across the face of the Adirondack Mountains. There was little to complain about until later in the day when much of the powder was either skied off or wind-blown, in some spots revealing bulletproof ice underneath. And despite the snow dump, many trails were still closed, including the double black diamond off-piste area known as The Slides. The biggest buzz kill, though, was that because they had little snow and warm weather before our trip, the gladed areas were unskiable. Still, with 75 trails on 220 acres and a vertical drop of 4,600 feet æ the highest in the East æ there was plenty of challenging terrain to explore.

Shortly after lunch, my legs were burnt. I spent the end of the day checking out the stunning views of the Adirondacks from the Summit Quad and noting the historical markers that tell visitors which trails Olympic greats such as Phil Mahre and Austrian Leonhard Stock raced in 1980. Because Whiteface is a state-run facility nestled in a protected wildlife reserve, there is virtually no development, except for the ski area itself. The downside is no slopeside accommodations. Fortunately the four-star Mirror Lake Inn Resort and Spa, where my significant other and I stayed, is just a 15-minute drive from the mountain. A swim with my 5-year-old daughter, Danielle, in the inn's indoor pool and a relaxing dip in the 12-person hot tub was the perfect way to cap the day. At night, we rented skates for three for just $9 and ice-skated at the Olympic oval where speedskater Eric Heiden won his five golds in 1980. There's also free ice skating on Mirror Lake for guests of the inn.

The following day, Danielle enrolled in the full-day ski and play program at the Kid's Kampus at Whiteface ($110/with rentals). She loved the "magic carpet" conveyor belt to the top of the bunny slope and, with the help of the friendly, energetic instructors, was riding the chairlift by the end of the day. My girlfriend and I spent some time watching Danielle before exploring the mountain on our own. We had lunch at Boule's Bistro in the mid-mountain lodge, which was reasonable, as far as ski-lodge fare goes. A fresh turkey wrap with vegetables was $7.95 while chowder was $3.50. Many back-pack-toting locals opted instead to brown bag, with some breaking out their own wine and cheese.

You can't visit Lake Placid without feeling nostalgic about the glorious 1980 Games, so touring the former Olympics facilities was a must. With the impressive ski jumps looming nearby, the original torch was lit on the second day of our February visit in honor of the 25th anniversary of the Games. My daughter enjoyed watching a youth hockey tournament being played on the ice where Jim Craig, Mike Eruzione and the other "Miracle on Ice" heroes achieved sports immortality by defeating the vaunted Russian squad. A $25 pass available at www.orda.org gets you into all the Olympic facilities. You also can ride the bobsleds with a professional driver for $40 or go it alone on a luge rocket ride for $30. For the less adventurous there is a toboggan chute downtown that sends riders shooting across frozen Mirror Lake ($5 for adults, $3 children, $5 toboggan rental).

For dinner, Jimmy's 21 offers excellent Italian fare in a lakeside setting, while Northern Exposure is an Outback-like family restaurant. Both are nestled in the heart of the charming downtown. Though the normally five-hour drive from Boston to Lake Placid is longer than the ride to most major New England resorts, it's worth the effort. The rustic, small-town feel was only heightened by the fresh snow that continued to fall throughout most of our stay, making it a wintry trip to remember. As longtime local and Olympic organizer Sandy Caligiore put it: "It's the kind of place you don't ever want to leave."

Override vote a sure thing

Dollar figure is not nailed down

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee has voted and will ask Town Meeting to approve $12,869,447 as its bottom line fiscal year 2006 budget, which will require passing at least a $600,000 override.

This spring voters will have to go to the polls more than once, as the override question will be on the ballot during a special election, at a date to be determined. It won't be on the April 9 election ballot.

The override question may have three components, depending on how Town Meeting votes other budget items, including funding to sewer the Little Harbor area of town as well as an on-site Wastewater Management Plan for the town, which could both require overrides of their own.

The Board of Selectmen has not formally voted to include a school override question on the ballot, but it has asked the school department to provide what its budget solution would be, should the override fail.

To give the topic more time for discussion, selectmen thought it prudent to postpone the override vote, rather than include it on the regular election ballot, scheduled for April 9. Town Manager Bill Griffin said holding a special election could cost the town between $3,000 and $5,000. He said if the town does opt for a $600,000 school override, he would also like to see an additional $40,000 added to the override figure, which would cover money cut from the school's maintenance budget.

What does a $600,000 override look like?

- For the owner of a $670,000 home, it will add 30 cents to the tax rate, or roughly $201.
- If the schools must pick up the cost alone and it doesn't pass, it could equal cutting roughly 13 teachers.
- It is equal to the cost for a new ladder truck for the fire department which would last more than 20 years.
- It could pay for the entire Cohasset Elder Affairs budget for roughly five years.

It could buy one replacement cruiser for the police department each year for the next 10 years.

With an estimated $800,000 gap between what the school department says it needs and what the town says it can afford to give the schools, the School Committee was forced to make some tough decisions.

There had been a proposed increase of 8.1 percent, or roughly $981,000 for the school budget at the outset of budget season. With out-of-district special education tuition increases totaling roughly $518,000 — or 4.3 percent of the department's total budget — which must be covered, the School Committee was required

Cook group won't budge

Options aren't on the table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although members of a Cook Estate working group have only convened twice, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer —a member of the committee — said he is concerned with the direction the conversation is moving in.

After attending the first meeting, Dormitzer said he felt he was the only member on the committee who was totally in support of looking at all viable options for the Sohier Street site, including the possibility of downsizing the project. He said he received very negative feedback for every idea which wasn't looking at keeping the project at 95-units.

"It's terribly frustrating," he said.

Dormitzer said he has been told if the project is brought down to 60 units, the property could support an on-site wastewater system, which would put to rest all the problems with securing a sewer connection and ensure some senior housing is built on the site.

Dormitzer said at the meeting, he offered to do the legwork to

Relay team leader walks for her Dad

By Mary Jane Hanron

Inspiration abounds in stories of families touched by cancer. No matter how widespread, every person touched by this disease has a message to share with the world about despair, fear, pain, uncertainty, hope and ultimately love. No account of the life altering aspects of this disease can be more powerful than that of Emily Grebenstein, a junior at Hingham High School and captain of a highly motivated and triumphant team at the 2004 Relay For Life in Cohasset.

The death of her father from cancer is an experience Emily recounts with remarkable maturity and insight. Suffering from a brain tumor and pancreatic cancer, John Grebenstein fought a valiant battle against the disease with the support of family and friends. Among

G. Fredrick Guzasky of St. Stephen's Church is no ordinary organist.

St. Stephen's organist is a real classic

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A cool guy with a great sense of humor, who plays the church organ — no way, you say? Better think again. Although, no one could describe G. Fredrick Guzasky as an ordinary organist, or St. Stephen's organ with its 3,108 pipes as typical, either.

But the two have made the perfect match, teaming up for the past 10 years to create music that reaches into your soul. "It takes your breath away," says Fran Burnham of Atlantic Avenue, who is a member of St. Stephen's.

Guzasky is unapologetic about not having kept up with the times. Case in point, he proudly holds a music book, "Original Compositions for the Organ," in the photo on the homepage of his Web site.

And Guzasky talks about renowned, classical composers, such as Mozart and Bach, as if they are right in the room. He bemoans that "easy listening dribble," which masquerades as music, has filtered its way into automobiles, homes and yes, even churches.

In fact, it was because Guzasky wasn't up-to-date enough that led him to St. Stephen's in the first place when the church where he worked previously wanted to go with more "user-friendly" music, for want of a better term.

"I came to St. Stephen's 10 years ago now," says Guzasky, who is music director at the Episcopal church. "It's a good environment in which to play classical music and do good choral music."

As he reads text from an old hymnal, Guzasky explains church music has moved away from being God-centered to the more folk-like, person-centered variety. "It's more modern, more subjective, more easy-listening style," he says, explaining the change in focus of music was seen as a way, although misguided in his view, to drive up atten-

World Series trophy coming to town Sunday

It has been confirmed that the Red Sox World Series trophy will be in Cohasset March 13 from 2-4 p.m. at Cohasset Middle High School. The trophy will be on display in the gymnasium.

Officially known as the Commissioner's Trophy, it was first presented to the World Series winner in 1967, when the Cardinals beat the Red Sox in seven games. The trophy features flags with each of the 30 teams and the World Series champion is allowed to keep it as a new one is made each year.

The Red Sox's Commissioner's Trophy was designed by Tiffany & Co. and carries a $15,000 price tag. It weighs about 30 pounds and is made from sterling silver. The trophy is 2-1/2 feet high and 36 inches around the base.

The trophy keeps a tight schedule as it is traveling to many communities, and visitors are encouraged to arrive early.

Budget priorities could be reexamined

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The idea has been floated to reexamine the entire budget from the bottom up. By giving residents the opportunity to dictate what it sees as priority items, programs can be ranked and funding allocated accordingly, to ensure the town is receiving the services it sees as being most important.

The discussion comes on the heels of the school department announcing it will need an additional $600,000 in order to make ends meet, which will most likely come in the form of a Proposition 2-1/2 override. Proposition 2-1/2 is the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year.

Last year, the town approved a $400,000 FY05 budget override which also went to help fund the schools. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh says the amount of money the school department is being asked to work with is not adequate, which has caused discussion to shift toward other departments and whether they are being run as effectively as possible, or whether money could be freed up to potentially cover expenses the town deems as being more of a priority.

Currently, the town has presented a balanced budget for FY06 which has not filled one position from the Department of Public Works, one position on the fire department and another from the police department. The town planner position has been reduced to one day per week, one town hall clerical position has been eliminated, and equipment and capital purchases have also been put on hold.

The school has presented a budget that would allow the district to begin a new kindergarten program and a new integrated preschool program — both of which would generate revenue for the school. The budget also accounts for an increase in athletic fees to further help generate revenue. Additional revenue is a must as the school department is dealing with a drastic increase in special education costs for out of district tuition, which it must pay. Adding three new teaching positions, including one math teacher, was put on the back burner.

However, two teaching positions funded last year by private donations have been added back into the budget along with an additional kindergarten teacher. A middle school administrator position has been increased to a full time position, as has the curriculum coordinator position. There will also be a new high school English teacher and middle high school guidance counselor added to the staff.

If recent meetings of the advisory and school committees are a gauge, the maintenance budget could be the first area to be looked at in terms of efficiency. Advisory Committee member Merle Brown said in his opinion, maintenance should be completely covered by the town budget.

Brown said with new Facilities Manager Brian Adams on board, it makes sense to have all money for maintenance services "under one roof." He said if the school department needs some money for various upkeep items, it should be located in another line item which is not called maintenance to avoid confusion.

"We need to get this straightened out," he said.

Adams is responsible for all town buildings, including the schools.

Currently, the school department has reduced its $50,000 maintenance budget by $40,000, leaving $10,000 to cover any expenses it might incur throughout FY06. Walsh said Adams does need a budget to cover small items, including those mandated to be covered by the Department of Education. Walsh said keeping the $10,000 in the school budget under a different line item would be a fine solution.

Town picks up some school costs

The school department has proposed a budget of almost $13 million, which has led many to believe the schools make up roughly 40 percent of the $30 million total budget. However, the town covers a good deal of costs on behalf of the schools, and when those are factored in, the school budget increases to almost $18 million, or 60 percent of the overall budget.

In the recommended FY06 budget, the town has allocated for the schools:

- $102,514 for administration allocated per DOE guidelines in its general government line item.
- $208,028 under public works, which is 50 percent of the maintenance budget.
- $3,148,730 for debt service.
- $1,463,125 for benefits and insurance for school employees.
- $524,605 for retired teacher insurance and special educational assessment.

Police and fire cuts

In addition, it has been suggested the police and fire departments be further examined to see if they are running as efficiently as they should be, or whether there are extras that could be cut.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said Cohasset is one of the smallest towns with one of the biggest and most highly paid fire departments.

"Don't get me wrong, I like the fire department, they're great guys, and if my house is burning down I hope they come by," said Flynn, who added that in terms of budgeting, it's "police, fire, and schools. What else have you got in Cohasset?"

During an interview after the meeting, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said the police and fire departments are short-staffed already. Buckley said cutting members from the fire department will have more of an impact financially than is currently being considered.

Buckley said when cuts are made, "The last ones in are the ones you have to cut," and the most recent hires have all been paramedics. Since South Shore Hospital made the announcement it would no longer be providing ambulance service to towns on the South Shore, Cohasset has been running its own ambulance service, and has been working toward its goal of employing a full paramedic staff. Currently, there are enough paramedics on staff that Cohasset is able to provide — and bill for — Advanced Life Support transport services.

Without ALS, a heart-attack victim, for example, would have to endure a 20-minute ride to South Shore Hospital before they were treated with life-saving drugs. Paramedics are able to administer those drugs, as well as employ a heart defibrillator.

Buckley said this year, the fire department has been able to increase its ambulance fees because of the services it provides, and projected revenue for FY06 is $270,000. If paramedics are cut from the budget, "We wouldn't have enough paramedics to run ALS service," he said.

Buckley explained Cohasset would then be forced to either, "completely lose ALS or bring in a contractor to provide it," he said, which could be costly.

Without its own paramedics or a contractor, the fire department would be forced to run a Basic Life Support program, which would not only reduce the amount of care those responding to a call would be able to administer, but would decrease revenue being brought in by the ambulance service. Buckley estimated the reduction in revenue could be as much as $120,000.

"In the end, you'd end up paying more than you would save," Buckley said.

Buckley said it is important to note, when looking at the budget as a whole, there are many items that are included on the town side that are school-related costs, with one of the largest being debt service for the school construction projects. In addition, while the state pays for teacher and administrator pensions, the town pays for everyone else, Buckley said. He added the town pays for all employee benefits, including pensions, workman's compensation, health insurance, Medicare taxes, retired teachers' health insurance, and beginning with the FY06 budget, unemployment.

"We've pretty much stripped down the school budget to education costs," he said, aside from the school department's paying for utilities.

Benefits for employees of the KEDS extended-day kindergarten program are covered by fees for the program through the revolving fund, but the town pays benefits for the employees of the school lunch program. There has been talk about increasing fees for school lunches to help its chances of being fully self-supporting.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters said the town will have to make a political decision regarding how it would like to see money spent, and weigh the effects various decisions will have on both town and school services.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said his committee has presented a budget, "We think the town would be willing to support. It's the town who decides whether or not there should be an override."

Shea said overrides are not specifically designated as being "school overrides," but are town overrides, which no one but the board of selectmen can decide to place on the ballot.

During the March 8 selectmen's meeting, Shea said if the override doesn't pass, he doesn't believe all the cuts will need to necessarily take place on the school side.

"We present two budgets because that's the way we're structured to be set up, but we're all in this together," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said Buckley has presented a balanced budget that takes all necessary increases into account, but has also reduced a number of items to make it work. "I know and understand we are one town, but there are certain sacrifices that have been made and should be considered," he said.

Griffin said it is important to realize when the school department says it is "cutting" a math teacher from its budget, that position is not really being cut because it does not currently exist. It is a position the department would have liked to have seen added this year. The difference on the town side is, there will actually be one less employee on the fire department, police department and Department of Public Works this year, and the town planner is only working one day per week.

"We can't have less than one fire station, so there aren't many options. We can't have one person on the truck going to the fire," said Griffin.

FY05 school budget deficit still unclear

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A final figure has been determined and Town Meeting will vote on the fiscal year 2006 budget in less than one month. However, there is still one major uncertainty that could affect the numbers moving forward as the school department says what its fiscal year 2005 budget holds is still a mystery.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said there are five FY05 budget categories the school department has been watching very closely, which have the potential to cause a shortfall. Steps have been taken within the budget including reducing staff and increasing athletic fees, which will hopefully make up for any funds needed. Walsh said she is "cautiously optimistic" she will have the necessary funds to pay for any shortfalls which do arise.

"We have a pretty good handle on FY05," she said. FY05 ended June 30, 2004.

This October, Walsh sent a memo to Director of Finance Michael Buckley, who at that point was serving as Acting Town Manager, which said there could be a shortfall of close to $500,000 for FY05. That figure was given excluding the costs for out-of-district special education placements or potential legal settlement fees the schools could incur. The figure also assumed Town Meeting would vote to pay for two unpaid school bills — a $93,000 unpaid Keyspan gas bill which surfaced as FY04 came to a close June 30, and $65,000 in unbudgeted unemployment costs.

Walsh said areas of concern include special education tuition, transportation fees, cleaning/custodial services, tuition reimbursements for professional staff, and legal fees. While most of the items were underbudgeted, tuition reimbursements as well as column changes, totaling $125,000 had not been budgeted for at all. According to the collective bargaining agreement between the School Committee and the Cohasset Teachers' Association, in order to receive reimbursement for a class, "a teacher must apply for and receive approval for a course before April 15 of that year," to give the department time to add those figures into the budget.

In addition, the collective bargaining agreement provides some time for the school department to prepare, as it states, "All transfers from one column to another in the basic salary schedule become effective September 1 and January 31, following the date the teacher qualified for such change. To effect a salary change on January 31, teachers will notify the superintendent of their eligibility for such change by the preceding November 1."

Town Meeting voted to approve paying the $93,000 unpaid Keyspan gas bill for the schools, as well as the $65,000 in unbudgeted unemployment costs. Both costs will need to be included in the budget moving forward, and Town Meeting decided it would be best if the money was placed in Reserve Fund, which would require the Advisory Committee to dispense funds as bills come in. The School Committee will need to ask for a Reserve Fund transfer when it would like the money to be released. Since Town Meeting, the town has agreed to take on the unemployment costs for school employees beginning in FY06.

Since the fall, Walsh and the School Committee have been working to help make up the potential shortfall costs within the FY05 budget, but Walsh said it is hard to gauge what might need to be cut because there are still many unknowns at this point. She said so far, nine paraprofessional positions have been cut, two custodial positions have gone unfilled, and there has been an increase in user fees for athletics. To ease athletes into higher sports charges, the School Committee voted to increase fees to $125 per season this spring with a $25 reduction for those playing their third sport of the year. Next fall charges will be $150 per athlete per season, with a $25 discount for the third sport and a maximum charge of $600 per family.

"Action has been taken, but that number ($500,000) is still in everyone's minds. We've been given very little credit," said School Committee member Rick Flynn.

However, at the March 8 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Walsh said the FY05 budget could still be off by as much as $200,000. She said there are currently a number of pending special education cases which could add as much as $200,000 to the FY05 budget, which are currently unaccounted for. "I can't guarantee I won't come out in the red," she said. Any outstanding costs from the FY05 budget will need to be voted on at the fall Special Town Meeting.

Budget updates

The Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee have both been asking for monthly budget updates from the School Committee. At a joint meeting of the Advisory Committee and School Committee Wednesday, March 3, Walsh said her former Confidential Financial Assistant Karen Park "didn't have the capacity in our accounting package to provide monthly reports." Walsh said in order for Park to make any kind of report, she would need to plug information into a spreadsheet, which would take a very long time. Instead, Walsh said Park had been pulling out and reporting the updated figures for the five areas of concern.

Park resigned from her position Feb. 17 and Walsh said she is now working with a new consultant, Joe McDonald. McDonald served as Business Manager in the Middleborough school system at the same time Walsh served as superintendent in that district. He began helping out in Cohasset Monday, Feb. 28.

Walsh said in the short time McDonald has been on the job, he has been able to take a look at the software package the schools have been working with and was able to meet with a representative from the company, who gave him some training in how to use it. "He is now able to produce the report we've needed all along," Walsh said.

However, Walsh said she would not be able to give the Advisory Committee a copy of the generic report until after the School Committee has seen it. Walsh gave the School Committee a copy at its March 3 meeting, and it agreed to send a copy of the report to the Town Manager.

With the ability to produce reports, Advisory Committee member Bernadette Faulkner said she hoped the school department would be able to provide a solid number for voters at Town Meeting regarding what it might be asked to help fund from FY05. The town passed a $400,000 override for FY05 during the Annual Town meeting last March and subsequently at the ballot box. That override went to fund the schools.

"I don't mean to be evasive, but I'll know better in a week," Walsh said.

to take a look at cutting from the remaining 3.8 percent.

Beginning with a proposed operational budget increase figure of roughly $463,000, the School Committee began looking at areas which could be cut back, and was able to take off an additional $212,000. Proposed cuts included:

- $40,000 for maintenance
- $40,000 from supplies and materials, which it hopes the Cohasset Educational Foundation will be able to support, although there is no firm commitment.
- $30,000 from the athletic budget, which it hopes the local boosters clubs will support, and will potentially go toward funding an athletic trainer position.
- $45,000 for one math teaching position which currently does not exist but it would have liked to have seen added to the department.
- $6,000 in textbooks, which would have been used for the classes the math teacher would have taught.
- $51,000 in support staff

The idea had been floated to include a $250,000 figure in the budget as a potential Circuit Breaker offset, but the School Committee was unanimous in its decision not to go that route.

"I'm definitely not for any high-risk ante. It comes back to bite you," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy.

Including the $250,000 in the budget would have assumed the state will reimburse Cohasset for 70 percent of its out-of-district special education costs at some point in the future, and would have been a high risk option. The state has not yet reported what it will award various districts through its Circuit Breaker program.

The state adopted a "circuit-breaker" formula in June 2003, to help fund out-of-district special education costs for cities and towns. The previous system, called "50/50," had the town and state splitting the tuition cost paid for private residential special education placements.

According to the Department of Education's Web site, in 2004, legislation was enacted to change the program, which would provide funds to school districts on a prior-year reimbursement model. For example, reimbursement to districts in FY05 were based on their FY04 eligible costs, and reimbursements in FY06 will be based on their FY05 eligible costs. Cohasset has included $68,000 in its FY06 budget, which will be awarded based on the town's FY05 costs.

The DOE states the change gives two significant benefits, as it eliminates the need for school districts to file multiple claims during the course of the year as had been previously done, and it allows the department to provide districts with an accurate estimate of their expected payments much earlier in the fiscal year.

Under the circuit breaker system, the state refunds up to 75 percent over a base amount of $32,000 for out-of-district costs. Walsh said the $32,000 is charged to the school, similar to a deductible. She said because there has been an increase of a little more than $500,000 in special education out of district tuitions this year, Cohasset could receive as much as $250,000 this year, which will be included in the FY07 budget, but will not help for the current budget situation.

However, the DOE site states, in recognizing the switch to a prior year reimbursement model could create problems in districts such as Cohasset which have a sudden surge in out of district costs, the DOE has been authorized to set aside up to $3 million in funding to provide supplemental assistance to districts with significant increases in costs. School districts will be allowed to request funding from that pool later this winter. The DOE does not currently have an estimate of how many districts will be eligible.

By reducing the budget by $212,000, the school department is asking for a 6.3 percent overall budget increase. Because the department says the special education costs are mandated by the state, it said its budget increase is really 2 percent.

"Two percent, I think, is an unbelievably low number," said School Committee member Rick Flynn.

However, Walsh said currently negotiations are in process with the teacher's union, and while she said she is optimistic it will accept a zero percent salary increase this year, that will not be the case during FY07. She said if the salary increases had been included in this year's budget, the overall increase would have been more like 10 or 11 percent.

Moving forward, Walsh said she is concerned the town will get the message that passing an override will be a one-year need for some exceptional reason, and that is not the case. In fact, she said in order to continue offering the high level of education Cohasset currently does, it would require adding roughly $700,000 to the school budget each year. When salary increases become part of the equation next year, she said that figure could escalate to roughly $800,000 or even $850,000.

Tax Treasurer/Tax Collector Joe DiVito, who worked in Cohasset Town Hall for a total of 8-1/2 years, reflects on his time in municipal government as he changes career paths.

Treasurer/Collector DiVito says goodbye to Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With years of municipal government experience under his belt, Town Treasurer/Tax Collector Joe DiVito has decided it is time for a change, so he will be conducting business from atop a backhoe instead of his office at Town Hall.

DiVito said he is going to work for his father's construction company, Joseph A. DiVito Inc., and he will also continue working as a real estate agent. Friday, March 4 was DiVito's last day at Town Hall.

Returning to his father's company means DiVito has come full circle. He had never anticipated a career in municipal government. In fact, he said when he graduated from Bentley College in 1990 with a bachelor's degree in business management, it was in preparation for the job he was slated to take with his father's company.

"I had anticipated doing it the rest of my life," he said about working with his father.

DiVito started working for his father while he was still in school becoming a part of the crew during the summer months. After college graduation, DiVito said his father was working with a full-time, two-man crew. When the winter hit, jobs weren't as plentiful as had been expected and DiVito had to find other employment.

DiVito said he learned of an opening at Cohasset Town Hall, and "It seemed like the right time for a change of scenery," he said.

The opening in Cohasset was for a temporary part-time job in the Assessor's office. DiVito applied and was hired. The position gradually progressed into a full-time position, which DiVito held onto for three years. "That got me involved in municipal government," he said. From there, looking to advance in his career, he moved on to Watertown, where he served first as the Assessor, then as both Assessor and Assistant Town Manager.

However, the long hours coupled with a three-hour round-trip commute from his home in Hull caused DiVito to eventually seek employment closer to home. "I wanted to be home for dinner," he said, with his wife, Sherry and their two daughters, Jacqueline, 10 and Elizabeth, 6-1/2.

DiVito then applied for the position of Cohasset Treasurer/Tax Collector in 1999, a post he had held ever since.

During the past year, DiVito also served as the Acting Special Assistant to the Town Manager for MBTA affairs. The town had decided not to renew its contract with the Waterfield Design Group, which had provided an ombudsman for the town to handle Greenbush construction concerns. There was a period in-between where the town needed someone to step in, until a permanent assistant could be decided upon.

In addition, DiVito served on the Town Manager Selection Committee screen candidates to fill that position. The committee whittled the applicants down to three finalists, who were then interviewed by the Board of Selectmen. DiVito said during the interviewing process, he was very impressed with Bill Griffin, who was ultimately chosen to serve as Cohasset's top administrator.

"Seeing firsthand his managing style has really impressed me," said DiVito of Griffin who came on board Jan. 31, adding he regrets he will not have the chance to work with him further. He said all feedback he has received regarding Griffin has been positive, and he knows how hard a transition it must be for Griffin, who has come to Cohasset in the middle of a "budget cyclone."

DiVito said he'll also miss the familiarity of his office and the people he shares it with. "I love the town, I love everything about the job, especially the people I work with. I have a top-notch assistant and a top-notch payroll and benefits person," he said, referring to Linda Litchfield and Kathleen Mulrain. "I'm amazed at the amount of work they can get done."

DiVito said in his experience, other town halls have many more employees on staff to help with the day-to-day operations. However, he said even with the limited staff he has, they always get the job done well. "They're very productive and they know their stuff," he said.

DiVito said he is looking forward to getting back into the construction business, and said in preparation, he recently attended the Massachusetts Construction, Landscape and Municipal Expo (MASCON) at the Boston Convention & Exhibition Center. However, "I know I'll miss municipal government," he said, adding perhaps he will join a town board in Hull to stay involved.

But DiVito said he won't rule out another role in Cohasset should the opportunity present itself. "I may come back again, the third time's a charm, right?" he joked.

READY FOR SPRING

Ok, are we ready for Spring or what??? I cannot believe I am sick of snow but it is better than rain and mud, isn't it? Anyway, as we get ready to look ahead to Spring coming someday, it is important to remember to enjoy all the small things that come along with it. Flowers, birds, warmth, sunshine, warmth and so much more. Make sure to take the time each day to stop and enjoy whatever it is that makes you smile as we know how fast life can change. I cannot believe that another year has gone by in what seems like record time, I want to hang onto the hands of the clock and make it stop for just a little bit longer each day.

St. Stephen's organist is a real classic

dance.

"In the Russian Orthodox tradition, music and liturgy are one," explains Guzasky, whose grandparents were born in Russia. "In our church, everything is sung – nothing is spoken."

To understand Guzasky's passion, one only has to go as far as St. Stephen's sanctuary on a Sunday morning during worship services. The 106-year-old gothic-style church building provides the perfect home for the 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner organ. (A rank is a set of pipes representing a particular sound). But the organ – which can best be described as majestic – could not come alive the way it does without the Guzasky's superb skill honed over a lifetime focused on classical music.

"I'm not just playing – it's an act of worship," Guzasky explains. "It's giving back to God in a very special way."

But members of the public, don't have to take Guzasky's word for it. They can find out for themselves in his upcoming performance, "Organ Music Based on Gregorian Chant," at 3 p.m., March 20 (Palm Sunday) at St. Stephen's. The event is part of an ongoing concert series now it its 14th year at the church. The concert is free to all and so is the reception afterwards.

Another St. Stephen's parishioner, Ken Cook of Pond Street, points out while the concerts are well attended, the church is not filled. "With a beautiful building, peerless organ, and great programs – I can't understand why the building is not packed," Cook says.

To that end, St. Stephen's hopes by spreading the word about Guzasky, more people will become "hooked" on organ music and enjoy the concerts.

Guzasky, himself, is the best salesman for experiencing classical music, which he notes is under appreciated in this part of the world.

He explains people in Eastern Europe can be starving but they will still pay to go to a classical concert. After a concert at the Cathedral in Riga, Latvia, Guzasky recalls a woman saying the experience moved her deeply. "She said, 'I don't know what to do with the rest of my life after hearing your music.'"

Guzasky, who also gives concerts in England and Russia and is working on a trip to Poland, knows well how great music can be life altering. He became serious about music as a six-year-old growing up in the Chicago area. His father played the mandolin and saxophone and his mother played the organ and wanted to be a ballerina.

"I didn't have anything else," he says about his interest in music. "But I knew it was something I wanted to do and nothing could take the place of that." At seven, Guzasky began his musical training at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

Guzasky, who is also a teacher of classical music and a composer, says children today are over scheduled. 'My advice to children is, do a few things and do them well."

An adjunct professor at Bridgewater State College, Guzasky, who holds a Ph.D., has attended Harvard, Millikin University, Northwestern and Eastern Illinois University, completing his formal training with doctoral studies at Boston University.

In addition to writing and performing classical music, he is the author of the "Gregorian Chant Handbook," and two mystery novels. One, "Murder at Jordan Hall" has been published, the other that is a thriller involving the Boston Police Department is coming out soon.

Guzasky works all summer organizing the St. Stephen's Sunday Concert Series, reviewing CDs from world-class organists who want to perform at St. Stephen's. In addition to Guzasky's Palm Sunday concert, piano duettists Barbara and Gerhardt Suhrstedt, who are known for their program of music, art and poetry, perform April 27; and Ingrid Gutberg, president of the Guild of Latvian Organists, will play May 22.

The Very Rev. Clifford Cutler, pastor of St. Stephen's, says Guzasky has a remarkable spirituality nurtured in the Russian Orthodox Church. "It was a spirituality to which the Anglican Church turned during Elizabethan times," Cutler says. "The interplay at St. Stephen's is very rich. On occasion I attend choir practice and never fail to come away with learning something new."

Guzasky, who lives in Malden, says his commute to Cohasset is worth it. "Now I need a life preserver in addition to a seatbelt," he quips about the struggles of the Big Dig.

St. Stephen's, with its magnificent organ, is a place where Guzasky feels at home. Even with his hobby of writing novels – music is his heart and soul.

"In my experience, there is nothing to replace the spirituality of music in one's life," he says. "Dostoevsky said, 'Beauty will save the world.'

"Music is my offering to God, an expression of the composer's wishes and emotions which lead people to a place beyond words and verbal explanation."

Annual ASP festival has sweets and music

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Saturday, March 19, music lovers will be in for a real treat, as an eclectic mix of performers will be on hand for the fifth annual Appalachia Service Project Festival, to be held at Cohasset High School. From jazz to folk music to the well-known a cappella group, the Harvard Din and Tonics, there is sure to be something for everyone.

Each year since 1988 a group of teens and adults from Cohasset has taken a one week trip to some of the poorest areas of the country, volunteering their time to make badly needed home repairs. This year, ASP will take volunteers to various counties in West Virginia and Kentucky.

Festival Chairman Linda Keller said one of the highlights of the Appalachia experience is hearing local musicians on culture night, and the Cohasset ASP hopes to bring that feeling home this year.

"Every year ASP tries to share our story with the community. This year, we are making this event similar to the community gatherings in Appalachia," she said.

In addition to the Din and Tonics, of which Cohasset resident David Ingber is a member, there will be other musical performances including:

- The Brown Sisters
- CHS jazz band
- Caitlin O'Connell
- Ali Ritts and Dan Sylvia
- Janet Hoyler and Scott Taylor
- Anne Chapman and Gary Ritts
- Katie and John Campbell

Many of this year's performers have participated in ASP, some rising up through the ranks from students to adult advisor and even on to center leader.

For those volunteering, participation in the preparation for the trip throughout the year is required. In addition to a series of workshops designed to prepare the teens and adults for the rigors of the trip, the group must raise the funds needed to make the trip possible, and the annual Appalachian Festival is an event everyone looks forward to.

As has become tradition, there will be an Appalachian Marketplace during the festival where items made by artisans in the Appalachian region will be on display and can be purchased. Every year, crafts are purchased by ASP in an effort to make an economic impact on the region they will travel to.

To go along with the music, this year there will be some sweet treats available, as each volunteer who will be going on the trip has been asked to make one dessert for the festival.

"Our theme is 'Family Favorites'," said Keller. "With the great cooks in this town, our dessert buffet should be legendary," she added.

In addition to the food and music, there will be a "teacup raffle," which Keller explained is an old mountain tradition. Members of the community donate goods and services to the raffle and a teacup is placed in front of each prize. Raffle tickets are sold in strings of 5 , 10, or 15 and tickets are placed into the teacups of the prizes you want to win.

"We are trying to foster the concept of "What can I do?" and we are not asking any merchants for prizes. Individuals who believe in ASP are personally donating items and we have gotten some very exciting prize donations. There will be lots of prizes and lots of fun," said Keller.

"ASP brings out the best in this community. When we express a need, people come forward and say, 'yes.' There has to be something magic about that! I hope people who have always wondered about this Appalachia Project will come on the 19th. It is a real celebration of what is good about this community. It is going to be good entertainment, good food, and good fun," said Keller.

Admission to the festival is $10. Tickets can be purchased at All the Best Natural Foods located in James Brook Crossing on Pleasant Street.

Don't miss the upcoming ASP Festival, with a concert of local talent and featuring the Harvard Din & Tonics (with Cohasset's own David Ingber, second row, far right).

Cook options aren't on table

find out what kinds of options exist if the project is brought down in size. He said it will take many hours of research, but he would be willing to speak with engineers from Coler and Colantonio who conducted soil tests on the site, as well as Jack Dawley of Northland Residential, the town the company is working with to build on the site, to see what kind of options can be entertained. In addition, he said he would meet with Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik who witnessed soil testing to get his perspective.

However, Dormitzer said if the committee is set on pursuing nothing other than a 95-unit project, and has no intentions of using any of his research, his efforts will be futile and his time could be well-spent elsewhere. "I need to feel like I'm being backed up," he said, adding, "Clearly this board didn't support me."

The town has been able to secure an extension on signing the purchase and sale for the Cook property until April 30, 2005 to give it time to come up with a suitable wastewater solution for the Cook Estate site. To date, no progress has been made on the issue, which is why the committee was formed Feb. 22.

In addition to Dormitzer, Selectman Ronnie McMorris, Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, one member of the Senior Housing Committee, Town Manager Bill Griffin and Town Counsel are all on the committee. When appointed, the group was charged with finding alternate solutions to enable the 95 units to move forward, as well as any and all other potential solutions for allowing some kind of senior housing project to be built on the site. Town officials agree that seniors need more housing options in Cohasset.

"If we're going to fall off a cliff April 30," it is better to have gained something rather than nothing, said Dormitzer, adding if the committee refuses to look at anything but building 95 units on site, there is the possibility nothing will be accomplished. "We can't be so rigid on this, or this is going to die a natural death," said Dormitzer.

Selectman Fred Koed, who attended the second meeting of the working group in Dormitzer's place, said one alternative way to build the project would be to break it down into two phases. He said phase one could include building a 60-unit project with an on-site system on the Cook property, followed by a second phase which could look at further expansion in the future.

Koed added if a second phase can be completed, a legal agreement could be worked out with the Cook heirs to ensure if the project brings in more money, they would be "amply compensated."

One of the issues that would arise if the project is completed in two phases however, is whether it would need to go back out to bid. Koed said it is his understanding that while the project did not have to be put back out to bid when plans for an on-site wastewater system failed, Massachusetts procurement laws would require it to be sent out if it changes from 95-units in one phase, to 60 with two phases.

The Cook Estate working group was slated to meet again Thursday, March 10 in the Selectmen's meeting room.

Bobo to speak at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will present the second of its spring lecture series on Wednesday, March 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the society's headquarters, the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St.

An avid maritime scholar, Dr. Bobo is an accomplished builder of boats, both models and full-sized crafts. He meticulously researches the structure, dimensions and appointments of any boat he decides to build.

This program is open to both Cohasset Historical Society members and the public. There is no charge and refreshments will be served.

WELCOME ABOARD

Upon the recommendation of Police Chief James Hussey, right, Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed Patrick Kenney, left, to the position of Patrolman in the Cohasset Police Department. Kenney, a Milton resident, comes to Cohasset with 22 years experience working in the towns of Lincoln and Milton. Kenney's first day on the job was Monday, Feb. 21. With the recent addition of Kenney and officer Edward Bagley, the department is operating at full capacity with 19 officers on board.

Looking to be in the ballpark

Rec. commission says renovations fall under its authority

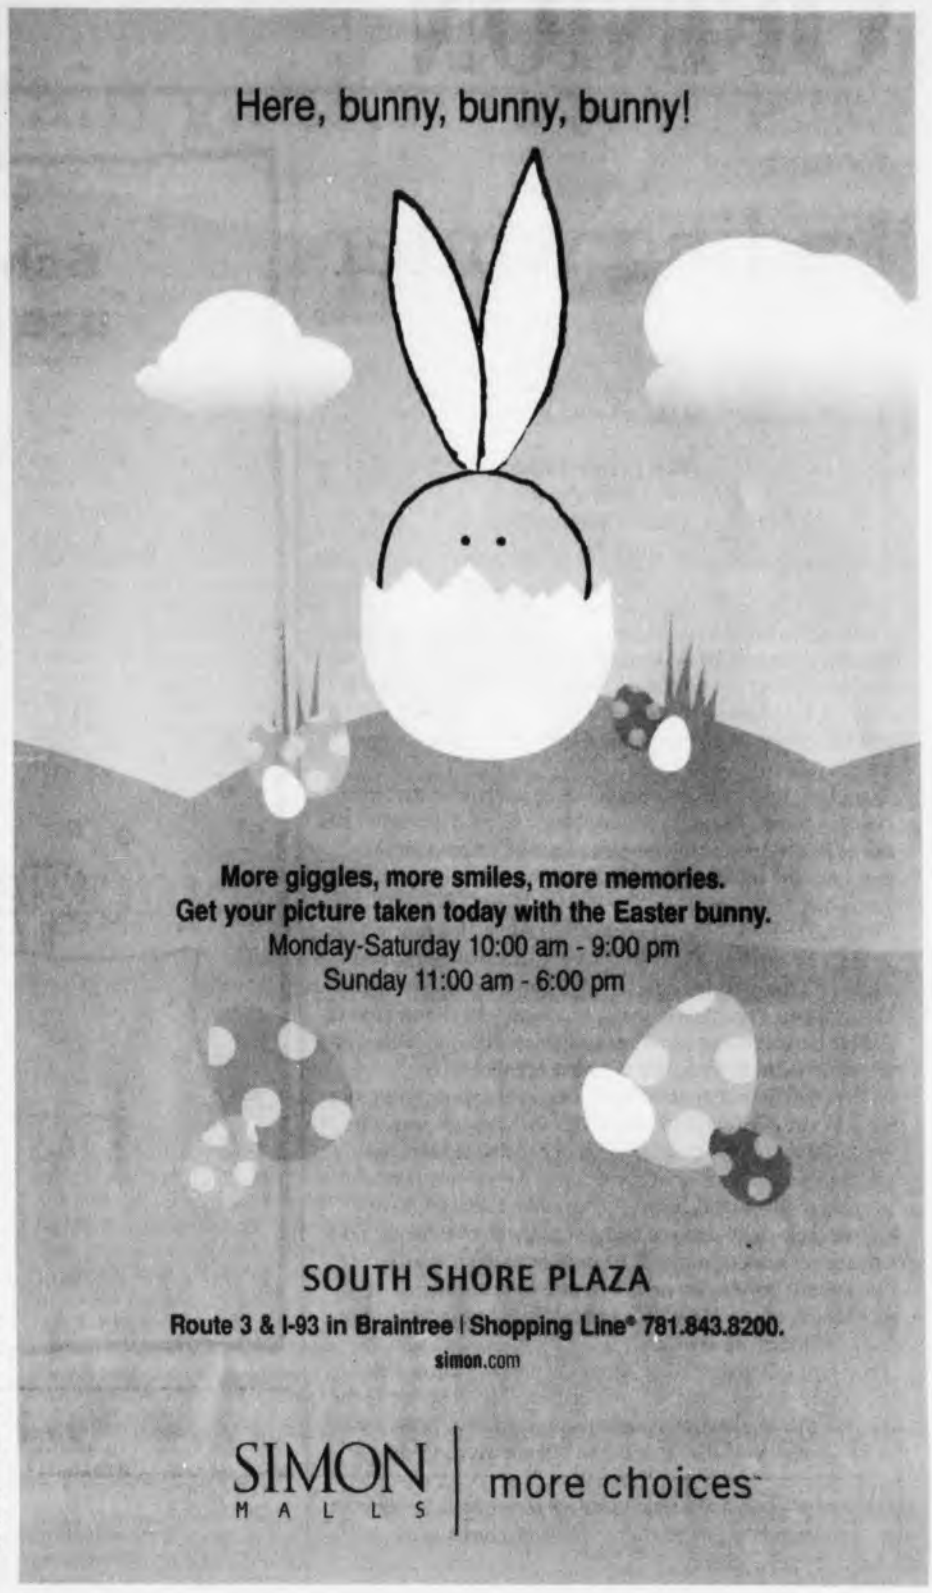
By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Improvements are going to be made to the Beechwood Ballpark, but just who will be responsible for overseeing and critiquing plans could become an issue.

Dick Barrow, 283 King St., who has served on the Recreation Commission for the past 26 years, said he is concerned the recent appointment of a committee to discuss the potential improvements to the site may be circumventing his board in an area that should be under its purview.

Barrow said when looking through the 1963 Town Report, he found an article that clearly states his board has control over all playgrounds in town. "I just happened to run across it," he said.

The article, which was number 31 that year, states, "The laying out, use and control of playgrounds in Cohasset...shall be exercised by and are hereby placed under the Recreation Committee." Therefore, Barrows believes any improvements to the Beechwood Ballpark should be made at the discretion of his board.



The Recreation Commission is represented on the Beechwood Ballpark Committee, as Lillian Curley is a member. Also on the committee are Selectman Ronnie McMorris, Advisory Committee member Merle Brown, Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt, School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy, Francis Sargent, Fred Siegal, and Lynne DeGiacomo.

During the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting, residents voted in favor of allowing the Community Preservation Committee to allocate $33,000 to hire a designer for reconstruction of the Beechwood Ballpark. In light of the vote, selectmen put the word out they were seeking residents to participate in a committee to discuss what the town would like to see improved.

Selectmen said members of the DPW, Recreation Commission and other sports-related groups would be involved as well as residents.

In addition to the bylaw, Barrows said there are other problems with the committee as it may have illegal members on it. He said the town's bylaws specify any member of the Advisory Committee "shall hold no other elective or appointed office," which he said leads him to believe Advisory Committee member Merle Brown should not be on the Beechwood Ballpark Committee.

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee is slated to meet Tuesday, March 15 at 7 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

Fading winter

The way a crow
Shook down on me
The dust of snow
From a hemlock tree

Has given my heart
A change of mood
And saved some part
Of a day I had rued.
— Robert Frost

Before you know it recent snows will have melted into memory and spring will be in the air.

As winter fades – and indeed, it will – we hope our readers took time this season to appreciate the splendor of it all. At times, Cohasset, covered in blankets of snow, has never been more beautiful.

Fur trees draped in white around town surely give the artist within us pause. The sight of youngsters rolling huge snowballs into snowmen, skating on the pond on the Common, or sledding down the middle-high school hill remind us it's possible to love winter.

With the spate of snowstorms this season, we'll admit to joining in the shopping panic at the grocery store before the first blizzard hit this past January, buying extra windshield-wiper fluid, and being so grateful we have a heavy-duty snow blower.

We've cursed the inconvenience of snow-filled sidewalks, and have suffered from an occasional bout of cabin fever.

Except for the winter of 1995-96 when the area received more than 100 inches of snow, this has been the snowiest winter in years. And according to some weather experts, the area has endured a record number of consecutive days below normal in temperature this past February. Towns, like Cohasset, have depleted their snow removal budgets and with even more snow arriving this week, spring still seems like an eternity away.

But there is hope as we head into mid-March. After all, how much longer can Old Man Winter last? Isn't he running out of steam, or should we say snow?

The much anticipated snow-drops are popping through the ground, and there seemed to be a definite whiff of spring in the air earlier this week when temperatures positively soared into the 40s — and we finally saw the sun. Somewhere the maple sugar sap is surely running. Patience and a sense of humor are called for as we endure a little more winter weather. Remember what you learned in grade school — March comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb.

Even if we're hit with yet another storm, we'll hold up. More bread and milk will be delivered to the shops, the mail will get through, and streets will be passable again.

While winter holds on, take a walk outside and look around. Try to appreciate what nature has provided: an old-fashioned snowy winter. Chat with your neighbor, lend a hand with your shovel, slow down.

Remember spring is around the corner. Then surely some hot, humid weeks will follow in summer and we'll be yearning for fall.

"Weird, isn't it? Somehow in the dead of winter when its 40 below, so cold your words just freeze in the air, you think you'll never hear a robin's song again or see a blossom on a cherry tree, when one day you wake up and bingo, light coming through the mini blinds is softened with a tick of rose and the cold morning air has lost its bite. It's spring once again, the streets are paved with mud and the hills are alive with the sound of mosquitoes." — Diane Froloy and Andrew Schneider, Northern Exposure, Mud and Blood, 1993.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No enough culinary choices

TO THE EDITOR:

Contrary to the main point of the pizza article March 4, I don't find anything amusing or celebratory about tiny Cohasset being home to five pizza spots.

First, because I've tried them all; one of the very few differences I've discerned is that some use fresh mushrooms while others use canned. The menus, prices and products are extremely similar. With due respect to the local businesspeople who own and operate them, these places are not turning out great or distinctive pizza. None is as tasty as Pizzeria Regina in the North End.

The second problem is equally obvious: We have no Mexican food, no Thai food, no Middle Eastern food, no great deli sandwiches. No sushi. For Chinese, we have KoKo Eyesore, which I've never entered because the building's exterior is so off-putting. We have no other Asian at all (until Feng Shui opens. Please, God, let that be decent.) We have no barbecue. No vegetarian fare. We don't even have a good clam shack.

In essence, for takeout we have nothing but pizza, and very average pizza at that. It's a sad state of affairs. And don't even get me started on the topic of adding another Dunkin' Donuts to town. We deserve better.

Schools must stay within budget

TO THE EDITOR:

I have lived in Cohasset since 1968. In all those years the people have always supported the spending requests of the schools, right or wrong. This past week we heard that the school system has another need for an override because they cannot live within their (our) means. Supt. Denise Walsh (Walsh) says that, "..in a perfect world she would have an additional $700,000 every year in order to keep the district moving forward."

We need sound management in the schools and in all of the Town's other departments. If department managers cannot live within their budgets they should be fired. The only reason for exceeding a budget should be due to a catastrophic happening.

With regard to the schools, no outside program should be allowed unless all costs of the program are covered, and not by the taxpayers. The full-day kindergarten, the Summer programs that "rent" school space, and any education program that is not part of the regular legally mandated programs in the schools for residents that are not totally reimbursing the Town should be dropped or cancelled.

The number $600,000 without the circuit breaker was mentioned for an override. However, this would not include salary increases. The final number will probably be much higher and this won't solve the issue. Walsh says that they must spend beyond their means each year. This is totally unacceptable.

The school committee scratches their heads because they won't make any tough decisions. All they do, according to Rick Shea, is, " ..present a budget we think the town will be able to support."

The schools have put us deeply in debt with their "improvements". Since that debt must be paid we should be looking for cost savings in the school budget. The school committee continues to transfer their costs over to the Town side of the budget. Last year the Town voted a school budget that eliminated three teachers. However, a private fund drive was held and two of the positions were filled. Private funds are being used to pay for their salaries. Who is paying for their benefits and contributing to their retirement program? Who authorized these expenditures to pay for the benefits for positions that were eliminated? How much was spent? Who is accountable for expending our monies when we didn't vote to spend it?

Are budgets being padded? On television Merle Brown, an Advisory Board member, asked why $10,000 was in a maintenance account for the schools since all maintenance was voted to be centralized for the Town? Walsh stated the schools might need something and they would want to do it themselves. Then it was suggested that the funds be moved out of the Maintenance Account and put in another account so that the school could have their own maintenance "slush" fund. This is deceiving the taxpayers and padding a budget. It is obvious that the schools do not want to be controlled and they want to spend and do whatever they want and not what the voters of the Town approve.

Where can the schools cut? After we have cleared out all of the outside non-mandated programs that do not reimburse the Town at least 100 percent of our costs we should analyze the management and administration of the schools. We have approximately 1,500 students so we don't need four principals. We should also look to eliminate wherever possible duplication of positions in the various schools. We should analyze every position and determine if that position is necessary or can some be split between the different buildings where possible. With computers we should be able to reduce our administrative costs. Do we really need a full-time business office manager at $75,000 per year? Are there other ways to meet our needs in this area? School system costs are mostly in personnel that is why we must analyze the need for each and every position.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters stated Cohasset has the ninth highest tax rate in the state. We only have approximately 2,900 taxpayers. The schools must realize that we are not a bottomless pit of money. I say enough is enough! No overrides! We must live within our means or this beautiful town will lose many life-long and long-time residents because of uncontrolled and mindless spending.

Vernal pools: nature's rain garden

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Tuesday, the Water Department proposed a program which will go far to make the town self-sustaining in terms of our water supply. The are undertaking this project like hardheaded businessmen with their eye on the bottom line. The program will ensure a gradual but continuing upgrade of the quality of Cohasset drinking water, but it offers considerably more to those, who feel, they want the small-town nature of the town preserved. One of the features of the Water Department plan is to initiate a program called "Low Impact Development." Essentially, this is a plan to do something about the increasing problem of storm-water which promises to destroy much of Cohasset's bucolic beauty. We see signs all over town of the impact on our water bodies of the addition of so much impervious surface; bigger roofs, driveways, parking lots, etc. These changes rapidly deteriorate our streams, ponds and estuaries.

Also, last Tuesday the Conservation Commission asked for additional protection to the town's vernal pools, a misunderstood element of nature's continuing battle to lessen the impact of storm-water. The two initiatives, by the Water Commission and the ConCom have the same intent: to help preserve some of those things which we love about Cohasset.

Construction on these sites is being fully coordinated with homeowners in the area and other elements of town government like the DPW.

The Water Department with its program of Low Impact Development (LID)proposes to erect about 70 bioretention cells (rain gardens to the less technical) on town property around Clay Spring Road and other sites where storm-water presents the most pressing threat to our water supply. Construction on these sites is being fully coordinated with homeowners in the area and other elements of town government like the DPW. These so-called rain gardens will reduce the flow of those casual discards of our society such as oil, dust from tires, coffee cups, dog droppings, etc., from our roads, parking lots and driveways into the ponds from which we take our water. This is part of a much larger plan by federal and state environmentalists to reduce the threat that storm-water poses to our ever growing population.

Gone are the days where the environmentalist can declare "don't touch it or go near it" The homeowner, not to mention the developer, will say "why not, it's my property," and he'd be right. Few initiatives proposed by municipalities have the positive potential that the Water Department's LID program possesses to reduce the ever more harmful effects of storm-water on our town's beauty and health.

The Water Department program emphasizes those places which pose the greatest threat to our water supply, but the plan could be made to become a part of a bigger effort to fight storm-water in the rest of town. From the milfoil in Lily Pond to the midges in Straits Pond to the dead fish in Treats Pond to the fetid swamp that used to be Mealy's Ice Pond, we finally have a pattern for the town to follow to clean up some of the damage being done by our increasing population. And it's not being done using the funds which would otherwise go to schools and improvements to our infrastructure. It's from revenue which the town is earning from one of its most precious resources: clean water. You'll be seeing more of this important program in a pamphlet now being prepared for inclusion in your water bill.

From the slammer to a $16M estate

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I watched with interest the other day as Martha Stewart returned from Oslo with a Nobel Prize . . . or was it from New York with a Pulitzer? . . . or Hollywood with an Oscar? Or was it all three?

Whatever, Martha looked mighty fetching in an ecru quilted coat and matching knit scarf as she fed sugar cubes to her horses and served cocoa to the shivering press, most members of which, I can tell you from experience, were hoping for something stronger only Martha's situation probably precludes her from dispensing adult beverages.

Just think, only five months ago Martha was an arrogant millionaire with an reputation for ruthlessness matched only by Leona Hemsley. Now she is a humble billionaire with a firm four times more valuable and a brand new TV show on which she can fire people a la Donald Trump while her admiring circle of fans cheers.

Actually, she did all this by going to the slammer in Alderson, W. Va., to live among the shoplifters and welfare queens for five months during which the only prize she won was a bracelet that went around her ankle to monitor her movements for another five months of house arrest in her 153-acre, $16 million estate in upstate New York.

If I had known those benefits could come from a five-month jail term I would have 'fessed up to the IRS that I didn't really give all that money to the Home for Little Wanderers in 1965 and I wouldn't have run out the back way when the narcs knocked at the front door at Bab's Place on St. Botolph Street that time back in 1954.

It is doubtful that any soon-to-be ex-con ever left the confines of the Federal Women's Prison in Alderson with Martha's style. She got out at 12:30 a.m., got into an SUV for the ride to the Greenbrier Airport, flew in a chartered plane to Westchester County Airport and was snug in the sack in her $16 million estate by 3 a.m.

The last federal prisoner whose release was followed this closely was Al Capone who made a beeline for his estate in Florida where he took out a rod and reel and began fishing in his swimming pool and eventually died of an ailment bestowed upon him by one of his female employees back in the Chicago days.

The people of Alderson, those who are free to come and go without ankle bracelets, that is, are sorry to see Martha go, I am told. Like the motels and restaurants in Bedford, N.H., every fourth February, they made out like bandits (yes, that's the right word) providing the necessities of life to the hordes of media stalking Martha.

The people of Katonah, N.Y., site of Martha's $16 million estate . . . (forgive me for repeating myself; I can't get over the words) . . . those people are a different breed. When you live in the next house over from Glenn Close or Chevy Chase or David Letterman and you see them regularly down at the store or the coffee shop, you tend to get that way.

"For some of us, seeing Richard Gere is more exciting," Edris Scherer, secretary of the Katonah Chamber of Commerce, told Tasha Robertson of the Globe.

Gee, an ex-con with a $16 million dollar estate!

New committees, new assignments

THE HEDLUND REPORT

SEN. ROBERT HEDLUND

The new 2005-2006 legislative session has brought some change to the committee structure on Beacon Hill. A special committee was appointed to review the Legislature's internal structure and recommend reform. The end result is that new committees have been created, some have been eliminated and others have been combined. This is the first major change in the internal structure of the Legislature in nearly four decades.

Overall, the number of Joint Committees, where both Senate and House members serve together, went from 19 to 26. However, the number of Senate committees went from nine to four and the number of House committees went from 11 to seven.

In total, I was appointed to six committees for this legislative session. I will continue to serve as the ranking minority member of the Transportation Committee, where I have served for six terms now. I will also remain on the Post Audit and Oversight Committee. In addition, I have been appointed to serve as ranking minority member on the following committees for the 2005-2006 session: Housing; Labor and Workforce Development; Public Service; and Community Development and Small Business.

I am pleased to have secured appointments to serve on committees whose issues are important to my constituents and the South Shore.

The Transportation Committee remains unchanged and my service on the Transportation committee will continue to be an important part of my legislative efforts in addressing transportation issues for my district. Those efforts include continuing to secure funding for critical road and bridge projects, improving and keeping affordable our public transportation system, and monitoring Greenbush construction and mitigation.

This is the first major change in the internal structure of the Legislature in nearly four decades.

The former Housing and Urban Development Committee has been re-focused into two new committees, the Housing Committee and the Community Development and Small Business Committee. I will serve on both committees. Affordable housing is no longer just an issue for the poor an urban community. This split will allow the Housing Committee to focus on the growing affordable housing demand facing both rural and urban areas. Affordable housing is an issue that greatly affects my district. Having been a long-time proponent of Chapter 40B reform, I am excited about the opportunity to directly address those issues with this committee assignment. In addition, I will have the opportunity to also focus on the important issues facing small businesses as a member of the Community Development and Small Business Committee.

The Commerce and Labor Committee was renamed the Labor and Workforce Development Committee and the "commerce" issues will be covered by the new committees that focus on economic development. I look forward to addressing the important labor issues facing the Commonwealth as a member of the Labor and Workforce Development Committee.

The structure of the Public Service Committee that I will now be serving on remains as it was last year. The Public Service Committee considers issues concerning the salaries, civil service and retirement of public employees, as well as collective bargaining for state employees and other public employees. This committee appointment is important to me because it will allow me to directly address the important issue facing public employees.

It is an honor for me to serve as your State Senator in the Massachusetts Legislature, which is the oldest functioning legislature in the United States. This year the General Court (that is what the State Legislature is formally called in Massachusetts) celebrates its 375th anniversary.

As of the time this column was written, thousands of bills have been filed and are waiting to be given a bill number and to be assigned to a committee. The process has been slightly delayed given the restructuring of the committees. Each bill will then have a public hearing scheduled in front of the respective committee.

If you have any questions or comments on a specific piece of legislation, please do not hesitate to contact my office at 617-722-1646.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the Plymouth and Norfolk District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Duxbury, Weymouth, Norwell, Hull and Marshfield.

Keep a look out for our local llama wrangler

ON THE WILD SIDE

JUNE FREEDMAN

Ever since our honeymoon in Ecuador and Peru many years ago, my husband Bob – the llama walker -- has had a particular fondness for this member of the camel family, genus lama, species glama, or camelidae L. glama. I have chosen not to dwell on the timing of this affinity. It is easy to understand how one can be captivated by the benign expression, large, limpid eyes and long lashes of this animal, particularly when encountered among the fascinating and other-worldly ruins of Machu Picchu.

Cars stop to have a better look, and walkers approach to ask questions and rub noses, one of the llamas' more friendly gestures.

In South America llamas are domesticated animals. Males over 3-1/2 years of age are used as pack animals, and the females are used for breeding and furs. Llamas have no hump, and they can carry up to 100 pounds each for 15 to 20 miles a day. They are very sure footed on mountain trails, but they do have a mind of their own. If the llama feels the pack is too heavy or he has worked enough, it will lie down with his front legs under him, and refuse to move.

In this country, the llama is known as the "poor man's horse." It is a hardy animal and lives on low growing shrubs, lichens and other plants. It gets much of its moisture from green plants, and it can live for weeks without water. The llamas Bob walks belong to the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham. Bob, as a volunteer at the Center, of course chose to walk Chester (chestnut colored) and Dexter ("D" for darker colored). (We are at the age when mnemonics help.)

Once Bob mastered the technique of harnessing the llamas for their walks outside their pen, they proved to be very cooperative, since they look forward to sampling the vegetation growing along the trail. In fact, they now seem to recognize his voice on approach. Bob has never experienced the well-known defense mechanism of the llama: spitting foul smelling, greenish, slimy saliva into the face of his enemy when angry or under attack. I imagine that could extinguish the most passionate love for llamas!

But being a llama walker does have other perils, namely unleashed, threatening dogs that can startle the llamas and cause them to bolt. One otherwise peaceful Sunday afternoon, Bob returned home to appear before me in the guise of a 6-foot elementary-school skate boarder, with bandage patches on both elbows and knees. A dog had startled Chester and Dexter from behind, and they took off suddenly at a fast trot, knocking down Bob and dragging him along on his belly until he let go of their ropes. He now knows when to let go — right away!

The llamas have escaped from their pen when not closed securely to wander unsupervised at other times. Fortunately, Hingham animal control is quite familiar with them and cooperative in helping them be returned to their pen.

The sight of two llamas walking together, alone or with an escort, is quite fetching for most people, and Bob has made many new acquaintances through Chester and Dexter. Cars stop to have a better look, and walkers approach to ask questions and rub noses, one of the llamas' more friendly gestures. Little children are sometimes wary of their size, but usually in time they are also won over by their benign looks and demeanor. The llamas are very photogenic, and by now their images have been taken home by many a fellow walker.

So if you should see Bob, the llama wrangler, as he prefers to be called, out for a stroll, stop and say hello. A few minutes with these pacific animals will calm your spirits and put a smile on your face.

June Freedman lives in Hingham and is a volunteer at The N. E. Wildlife Center, where she tends orphaned baby birds in season and their educational animals on call. You, too, can become a volunteer by calling the Center at 781-749-5387.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

BHRC examines the voting record of local representatives on Gov. Mitt Romney's vetoes of sections of the $22.5 billion fiscal 2005 state budget. The House last year voted on 121 of Romney's budget vetoes that reduced state spending and made other changes in the version of the budget that the governor received from the Legislature. A two-thirds vote is required to override a gubernatorial veto. The membership of the House during consideration of the overrides included 136 Democrats, 22 Republicans and one unenrolled legislator. The governor needed the support of 52 representatives to sustain a veto when all 159 representatives vote— and fewer votes if some members are absent. This difficult task involved getting the support of all 22 GOP members and convincing 30 Democrats to support him. Romney was able to do this on only one occasion when the House 77-78, sustained his veto barring the Board of Education from approving new Commonwealth Charter Schools until July 31, 2005 or until the Legislature approves a new tuition financing system for the schools. The House overrode all of the other vetoes including 21 that were unanimously overridden.

The vetoes had little support from the chamber's 136 Democratic representatives. Forty Democrats gave no support to the governor and voted to override all of his vetoes. The three Democratic representatives who supported Romney most frequently are Cory Atkins of Concord (17 times or 14.5 percent); Harriett Stanley of West Newbury (9 times or 7.6 percent) and Frank Hynes of Marshfield (7 times or 5.7 percent).

The Republican who gave Romney the most support is Daniel Webster of Pembroke. He sided with the governor 93 times or 76.8 percent. The GOP member who gave Romney the least support is Paul Frost of Auburn. He agreed with Romney only 73 times or 60.3 percent. Republican Minority Leader Bradley Jones (R-Reading) supported the governor only 89 times or 73.5 percent.

PERCENTAGE OF TIMES LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES SUPPORTED THE GOVERNOR

Here is how local representatives scored in their support of Romney on the 121 budget vetoes. The record of any representative who was absent for some of the roll calls is based on the number of roll calls on which he or she voted.

The percentage next to the representative's name represents the percentage of times that the representative supported Romney. The number in parentheses represents the actual number of times the representative supported Romney.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

TENANTS' WATER AND SEWER BILLS (H 5001)- A new law allowing landlords to install meters and bill their tenants for the amount of water and sewer services used takes effect on March 10. The law allows landlords to bill only new tenants and only if the landlords install water conservation devices for all faucets, showerheads and toilets in the unit. Tenants in public housing units are exempt from having a meter installed in their units. The measure was approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Romney in December. Supporters say the measure will preserve resources by encouraging reduced water use by many tenants who often use more water when their landlords are paying the bills. Opponents said the bill is anti-tenant and will increase rents that are already skyrocketing.

CANDIDATES FOR 2006- Three Democratic women announced their intentions to run for statewide office in 2006. Democratic Middlesex County District Attorney Martha Coakley said that she would run for attorney general if current Attorney General Thomas Reilly runs for governor. Reilly has made no secret of his intention to seek the corner office but has not yet made it official. Democrats Deborah Goldberg, former chair of the Brookline Board of Selectmen and Andrea Silbert, founder and former operator of a non-profit organization that assists women starting or growing their own businesses, signaled their intent to run for lieutenant governor.

STEM CELL RESEARCH (H 2007)- Senate President Robert Travaglini and House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi announced that they expect the House and Senate to approve and send a bill clearly legalizing stem cell research to the governor by the end of this month. Both legislative leaders contend that they have the votes to pass the bill that would strike ambiguities in current law and clearly legalize this important research. They argue that this could yield treatments or cures for many conditions including spinal cord injuries, diabetes, Lou Gehrig's Disease and Parkinson's Disease. The most controversial section of the bill allows for the creation of embryonic stem cells through the creation of new embryos for the sole purpose of research. Gov. Romney has indicated that he is opposed to this provision. Some opponents say this would open the door to human cloning but Travaglini says that the measure specifically prohibits cloning. Other opponents say the procedure is simply morally unacceptable because it requires the destruction of a human embryo. Both sides are courting and counting votes based on the possibility that the governor will veto the bill and that a two-thirds vote in each branch would be required to override the veto.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK- SELECTMAN

For the selectman candidates: Will incorporating a schedule to sewer Little Harbor into a potential Third Amended Final Judgement help or hurt the town? And do you believe that decision should be made by the Board of Selectmen or Town Meeting?

SELECTMAN/ Debbie Shadd

The Little Harbor neighborhood should be sewered. The residents of the area have been waiting for sewers since at least December 1998 when the Town and the State executed a Joint Motion for Modification of the 1997 Second Amended Final Judgment. The Town is committed to this project. Since 2002 the Town has spent nearly $500,000 to plan the project. Environmental concerns for the watershed require that the job get done. The Sewer Commission needs to finish developing construction plans, obtain firm cost estimates and present a proposal to a future Town Meeting. The Town will need to budget for the project through a bond issue as other bond obligations are retired.

The Town should not put itself at risk by agreeing to amend the Second Amended Final Judgment unless it is absolutely necessary to avoid state penalties or the Town receives significant benefits for the change. Any amendment that would include strict deadlines for the completion of the Little Harbor project would impose obligations on the Town not currently existing and give the State additional leverage in any negotiations concerning our progress to date on this project. The Town cannot afford to pay substantial fines without harming our ability to proceed with this project while still funding our entire Town operating budget. We must avoid potential fines by proceeding with this project deliberately and in good faith to bring necessary sewers to the area.

Finally, any proposed change to the Second Amended Final Judgment should be presented to a future Town Meeting for approval since Town Meeting approved the signing of the original Agreement for Judgment in 1980, the Amended Final Judgment in 1994 and the Second Amended Judgment in 1997. The Town Meeting votes committing to this project should be implemented by our Sewer Commission.

SELECTMAN/ Gary Vanderweil

The argument for not including the schedule is that it could reduce the town's flexibility to deal with uncertainties in future taxation, state funds, and town priorities. On balance, however, I think that incorporating the schedule would be an advantage to the town. I would link the schedule to the receipt of state school building reimbursements, so that if the reimbursements, necessary to make room in our debt service payments for the sewer, are postponed, we could postpone the sewer installation accordingly.

The main advantage gained by incorporating the schedule is certainty for 450 homeowners that this is a real project. Other major advantages: (1) Title V amnesty for real estate transactions prior to installing the new sewers. (2) Having a date-certain for long overdue environmental improvements to our waterways. (3) Because the project will become incorporated into a Judgement, it will receive higher priority for low interest loans, saving us money.

When on the sewer commission, I participated in creating and living with binding schedules; e.g. schedules for the Hull Intermunicipal Agreement and the North and Central Cohasset sewer systems. Based on this experience I have no qualms about this kind of a commitment. The key to living with binding agreements like this is to understand ahead of time what the issues and risks are and to deal with them in creating the binding agreement.

As to who should decide, the Selectmen or Town Meeting, I believe the Selectmen should, since they are the signatories to the Judgement. But if the Selectmen make the wrong decision (i.e., not in accordance with the sense of the townspeople), one of our great checks and balances is the Town Meeting, and I would hope that the decision would be corrected there.

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

Selectmen aren't elected to set sewer policy for the Town, the Sewer Commissioners are. Creation of new sewer districts, like Little Harbor / Atlantic Avenue, needs to be voted on by Town Meeting acting on proposals from the Sewer Commission.

I am concerned by efforts of some of my colleagues to second-guess the Sewer Commission. During past negotiations with the State, the Sewer Commissioners have managed the process. That is their elected duty.

Sewer capacity of the Town is the property of Cohasset taxpayers and ratepayers that have funded the facilities we have today. I am opposed to the idea that we should extend sewer to Avalon, Cedarmere, the Cook Estate, or any other development before all sewer needs of existing residents are met.

I applaud the Zoning Board of Appeals for ruling this week that Avalon cannot hook up to Town sewer. We must meet our obligations for affordable housing with our own solutions. Town services, particularly our Schools, would be negatively impacted if Avalon were built. We should not enable such negative impacts with public sewer.

The Little Harbor pollution problem is a problem for the entire Town — a problem that the Town legally has the responsibility to solve.

Putting a schedule for the sewering of Little Harbor / Atlantic Avenue into the Third Amended Judgment is the right thing to do. Doing so will help the Town avoid fines from the State, give amnesty to residents of the Little Harbor area from mandated Title 5 upgrades, and make the Town eligible for low-interest construction loans. Such an agreement will cement the priority of access to sewer for residents, rather than for developers.

We need to further develop a sewer master plan for the town to determine how eventually all necessary areas can be sewered.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK- SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the school committee candidates: Tuition-based, full-day kindergarten has been floated as a way to raise revenue for the schools. Share with us your thoughts on charging tuition for a public school program such as this.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Pam Wilson

For the past two years, a task force has been investigating, quite thoroughly, the feasibility of implementing a full-day kindergarten program in Cohasset. After reading their findings and meeting with the Osgood Principal, as well as a number of teachers and parents, I have come to the conclusion that a full-day, tuition-based kindergarten program is a tremendous idea. This program has been met with very favorable support and enthusiasm from parents and educators alike. The potential revenue generated from this program could be significant. The classroom size will not exceed 20 students, and there is ample classroom space. 75percent of the families who have registered their children for kindergarten as of March 1, 2005, indicated that they are interested in enrolling their child in a full-day program.

Cohasset is also committed to offering a half-day program to those parents who feel that a full–day is not appropriate for their situation.

Tuition-based kindergarten is clearly the only viable answer to Cohasset's need for a program of this sort. The town cannot afford to pay for such a program at this time, and the state is offering only a negligible amount of funding for it. Therefore, if the parents are willing to cover tuition, this is currently the only viable option for our students. Additionally, future fundraising efforts may assist in defraying these expenses.

Some findings the Cohasset task force discovered were: Children have greater academic and social success in school; there are fewer grade retentions and special education placements (potentially saving our town future expenditures); full-day kindergarten children perform better than half-day kindergartners and are better prepared for the transition to first grade; parent involvement increases; teachers prefer a full-day format that reduces transition time and provides more time to cover content in a more meaningful way; and children score higher on achievement tests.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Lee Jenkins

I'm fundamentally against public schools charging taxpayers for public education. If it's a "necessary" program, taxpayers should pay for it.

Before supporting such a program, I'd need to see its budget and curriculum plus know the educational philosophy behind it.

Is the tuition proposed ($1800/yr.) truly covering program costs? Will the classes be integrated (inclusion) and have sufficient staff? The nationwide models for these classes indicate the need for 2 teachers, 1 regular and 1 SPED plus 2 TAs. Increased personnel needed to adequately expand K and Pre-K isn't indicated in the proposed school budget.

Since our educators are looking only toward the preparation for first grade, what opportunities will be provided for the exceptional child who presents an unaddressed need in our particular community?

According to the school budget, the new full-day class sizes will be increasing from 16.6 to 20. How is that complying with our education theory?

Full-day kindergarten has successfully been implemented in low-income districts nationwide to impart necessary skills unable to be provided by parents. Test scores from those same minority communities with free lunch programs saw a marked increase in subsequent scores. Alternatively, moderate-income Midwestern school districts studies found 'no clear differential effects of kindergarten schedules' on either academic achievement or classroom social behavior.

In almost all cases, educators and parents alike opine that five-year-olds involved in full-day kindergarten programs become over-tired and stressed, missing out on learning opportunities which can be gained only through the home environment.

If this program is largely about conveniently providing childcare for working parents, the schools already provide it on a fee basis – called KEDS in Cohasset.

And so, parents and educators must ask themselves: what relevance and financial impact would this program have for Cohasset?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 3-YEAR/Alfred Slanetz

All of the stakeholders — taxpayers, teachers and parents — will have to make contributions to achieve our common goal of providing an excellent education for our children. Payments are currently made by parents for athletics, KEDS, lunches, textbooks and field trips and proposed for full-day kindergarten and preschool. While I do believe that all children should have access to anything the school offers without regard to ability to pay, payment for a share of the services by the users of a program is better than not having the program at all. The tuition for preschool and kindergarten is based on a sliding fee scale for families with limited income. Even at the full tuition, it's still a lot less costly to parents than private school. As we improve the educational program, I believe that it is fair and equitable for a portion of the cost to be paid by the beneficiaries.

That said, I am concerned that the full-day kindergarten program has not been thoroughly designed and adequately presented to the community before taxpayers and parents are asked to pay. While full-day kindergarten is educationally superior to half-day, it is a shame that we are not taking this opportunity to fully optimize the quality and richness of the program. As parents are paying for a portion of these services, the school must become more accountable and detail precisely what the program will offer and what the quality will be, so that parents can make informed choices for their children.

I will work hard over the next three years with my school committee colleagues and the Superintendent to assure that we are more thoughtful, innovative and transparent in the way that we design new programs before they are implemented. All future programs approved should also include optimal upgrades in educational value.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTIONS

For the school committee candidates: The current school committee has said the school budget process this year has been a transparent one. Do you agree? What improvements, if any, would you work toward to ensure the public is informed along the way, and is not just presented with the end result?

For the selectman candidates: The Cook Estate project has been heralded as providing badly needed housing for our senior citizens. Can the project be saved?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

Wine and dance evening benefit

All are welcome to attend an evening of wine and dance March 12, at 7 p.m. at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham. Dance to a live band and enjoy hors d'oeuvres catered by 53 South.

A wine tasting and sale will include premiere wines from Israel and around the world. The evening will also feature a silent auction and raffle, and a cash bar.

This event is a fundraiser to benefit Congregation Sha'aray Shalom. All profits from wine sales will go directly to the temple. Tickets are $30 per person, $36 at the door. Sailing lecture benefits maritime programs

Sailors John Harries and Phyllis Nickel, who have become experts in exploring the high northern latitudes, will come to Cohasset Saturday, March 12 as part of an annual lecture series sponsored by the Cohasset Yacht Club. The two will present their slideshow, "Ice and White Space," at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 129 South Main St., beginning at 7 p.m. Their presentation will chronicle their extensive sailing journeys, navigating their 56-foot McCurdy and Rhodes aluminum cutter "Morgan's Cloud," through remote areas like the east coast of Greenland, Baffin Island, Labrador, Arctic Norway and Svalbard (Spitsbergen).

For the past six years, lectures have served as a means of fundraising for the Cohasset High School Maritime Studies Program and Summer Institute, a program which offers local students the opportunity to participate in an academic program, while taking advantage of the summer months outdoors.

For more information or to reserve tickets, please contact Mary Whitley at (781) 383-9708. Tickets will also be available at the door and cost $15 each. Students are free. Girls hoops players, coaches reflect on strong season, look ahead to next year

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Head coach John Levangie set out last fall on a mission: to build and protect the confidence of his Lady Skipper players.

He succeeded hands down, walking away with a 12-9 record and an invitation to the Div. 4 state tournament. So what four decisions did Coach Levangie make to put player confidence front and center?

He picked responsible captains who could inspire their teammates. He inspired each team member to reach beyond their comfort zone of play. He rolled out a logical set of defensive and offensive play strategies. And he surrounded the practice time with a knowledgeable grouping of hand-picked assistants – Kay Long, Matt Salerno, Joe Campbell, and son Jack Levangie.

The success of this season started with the captains: seniors Nicole Whitney and Casey Anderson. From day one of the preseason to the final buzzer in Roxbury, they inspired their underclassmen.

Coach Levangie expressed enormous satisfaction with Nicole and Casey's leadership.

"They led by example," he said. "Neither captain ever missed a practice or a game. Nearly every player participated in all of the practices and games."

Said junior forward Mia Lieb-Lappen, "They encouraged us all to adopt good work ethics. Their leadership proved crucial to our success this season."

"If the girls want to compete with other teams in our league, they need to work year-round at their game. If the self-discipline and motivation are there, I think the girls will do very well."

Head coach John Levangie, on next year's team

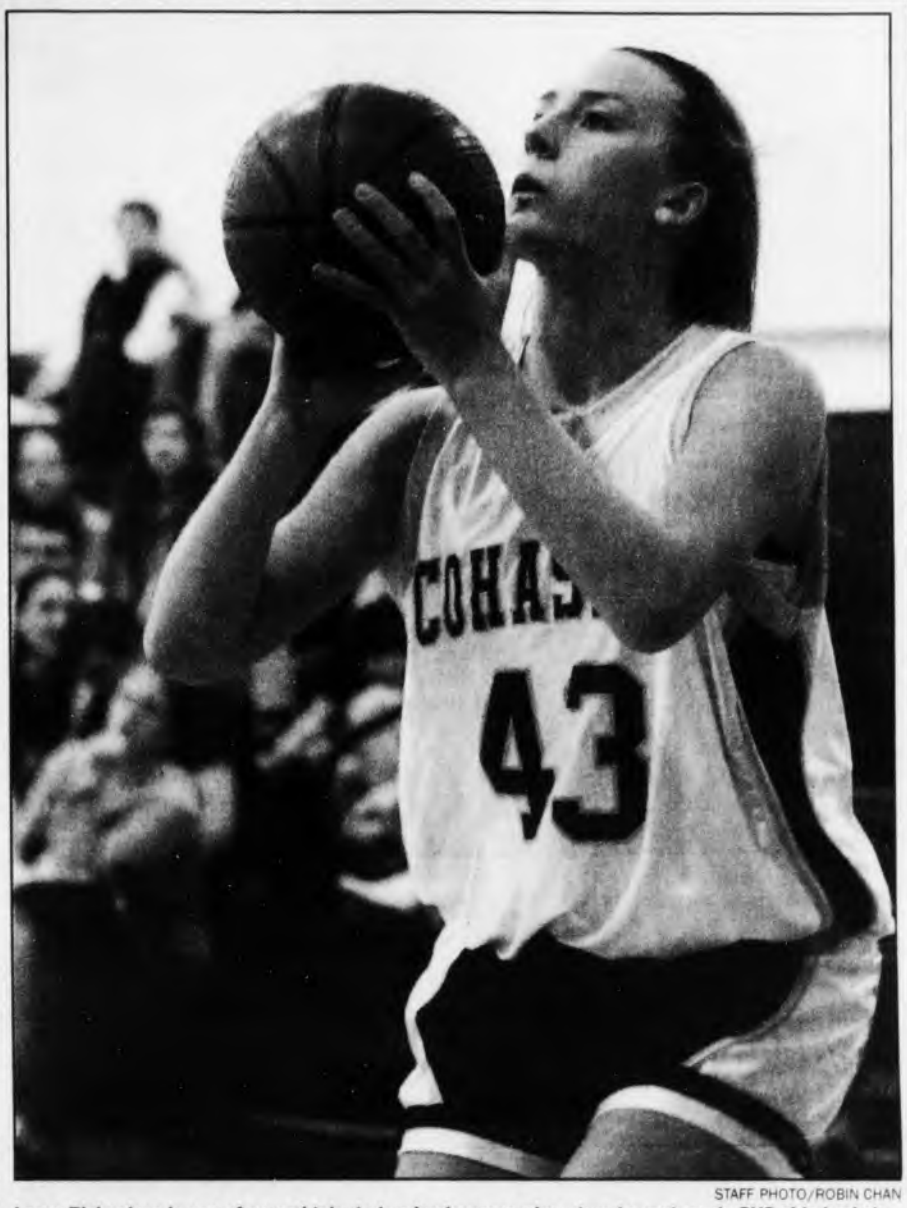
In the many interviews with the Mariner over the season, every player voiced good things about their coach, too. They found him easy to work with and his knowledge of the sport unending. Levangie will likely return next year.

Injuries plagued the team this year. When junior Chelsea Grossman and Lieb-Lappen went down, the team could have folded. Instead, Levangie used the setbacks to elevate the playing time of his reserves.

Sophomore Lacey Richardson reported for duty in a forward position. Freshmen Meg Anderson signed in as a point guard. JV player Haley Haracz received the nod from Coach Levangie to step onto the varsity team. She managed to hit a pair game-winning free throws against Hull to clinch the team's tournament berth.

As the season progressed, the confidence level of the girls rose to new heights. So, too, did their win tally.

Through the first half of the season, Casey Anderson would amass huge point totals, but her teammates scored in the single digits at best. As the point totals balanced out among many of the players, the number of victories increased.



Whitney says it was a matter of the team's confidence growing as the season progressed.

"Our confidence helped us to pump up both or defensive and offensive games," she said. "Our fast breaks were a strong point in our scoring. Also, our 1-2-2 defense seemed to work well."

After such an upbeat season, it's easy to get caught in the moment. Both the coach and his players realize, however, that the 2005-06 season starts now. They clearly face some obstacles.

One remains outside shooting. The team never clicked in this key part of the game. Levangie knew that high scoring games spelled trouble for Cohasset, so

Cohasset hockey eyes return to postseason in 2006

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

As hard as they played and as much adversity as they fought through this season, the Cohasset hockey team's plight can be summed up in one fact.

They did not score enough goals.

The Skippers' 9-11 record, and consequent missing out of postseason play, can largely be attributed to the fact that, too often, good scoring chances were squandered.

The situation was at its most glaring in the last game of the year against Norwell. Needing a win to get into the Div. 3 South sectional, Cohasset out-shot their opponent, but the Clippers took better advantage of their chances to come away with a 3-2 win.

Cohasset head coach Ben Virga also pointed to this fact: his team went 8-0 against opponents that did not qualify for postseason play, and 1-11 against those that did.

"Bill Parcells used to say, 'You are what you are,'" Virga said Wednesday. "And if you're 1-11 against tournament teams, you might not be a tournament team yourself."

Cohasset had many significant injuries and other personnel issues to deal with all season long, not to mention the snow postponements that left eight games to be played in 12 days. The team's final three games were played in four days, and the team was pretty gassed by the time it had to play Norwell on Feb. 21.

Taking all that into consideration, it is pretty remarkable that the Skippers even got into the situation where it had a chance to play one game for a tournament berth. And let us not forget, they started out 4-8.

The Skippers were playing their best hockey in the last two weeks of the season, and part of that is due to several younger players showing improvement after logging major minutes on the ice.

"I think we've laid a pretty good foundation for the future," Virga said.

The coach is excited about what he currently envisions as his first line for 2005-06. Brian Straughn, who scored a team-high 13 goals while playing on the first line this season, figures to be joined by Austen Lanzillotti and Mark Bouchard. Lanzillotti

March Madness: Sixers win at buzzer, open playoffs tonight

An often-expressed cliche heard in the world of sports is, "It's a game of inches."

The Cohasset Sixth Grade Girls Travel Basketball team also learned that it can be a game of seconds (1.1 ticks of the clock to be precise) as Carli Haggerty sank a turnaround jumper at the buzzer to give the Sixers a wild 14-13 win at Rockland Saturday evening.

The stage for Haggerty's heroics were set thusly: After grabbing an 8-7 lead at the half, Sixer Lindsay Davis scored the first hoop soon after the intermission to make it 10-7. But the Cohasset girls then fell into an offensive funk, going scoreless for almost the entire rest of the half, as Rockland eventually moved out to a 13-10 advantage.

The Sixers picked up their defensive intensity in the waning minutes in a desperate effort to get back into the game, but despite their best efforts, a comeback did not appear to be in the cards for the Blue & White, who were unable to manage any semblance of an offensive attack.

But with 45 seconds showing on the clock, Emma Quigley, who had checked back into the game only a few seconds earlier, grabbed a loose ball on the right wing, dribbled inside the three point arc, and pulled up for a 13-foot jumper which swished cleanly through the net to make it a 13-12 affair.

The teams traded six possessions in fast-and-furious fashion over the next 43.9 seconds, but with 1.1 seconds showing on the clock, it was Rockland's ball to be inbounded from just inside its own half-court line. With Cohasset applying frenetic pressure, the Rockland girl inexplicably made a long heave toward her own hoop. The ball sailed out-of-bounds, without being touched, giving Cohasset one last chance for a miracle with the clock still showing 1.1 seconds.

Davis, who scored four points on the night, took the ball for the throw-in, while Haggerty posted up at the lane. Lindsay D tossed a perfect, hands-high pass to Haggerty, who turned toward the hoop and fired in one motion. All eyes were on the sphere as it arced toward the basket (some later said it seemed to be moving in slow-motion) – the ball entered the cylinder cleanly as the buzzer sounded – and within an instant the Cohasset girls were joyously mobbing Haggerty on the floor.

The win guaranteed the Sixers a .500 record on the season in he always encouraged the Skipper defensive machine to squash their opponents. You can count on Levangie to make perimeter shooting a big part of his agenda for next year.

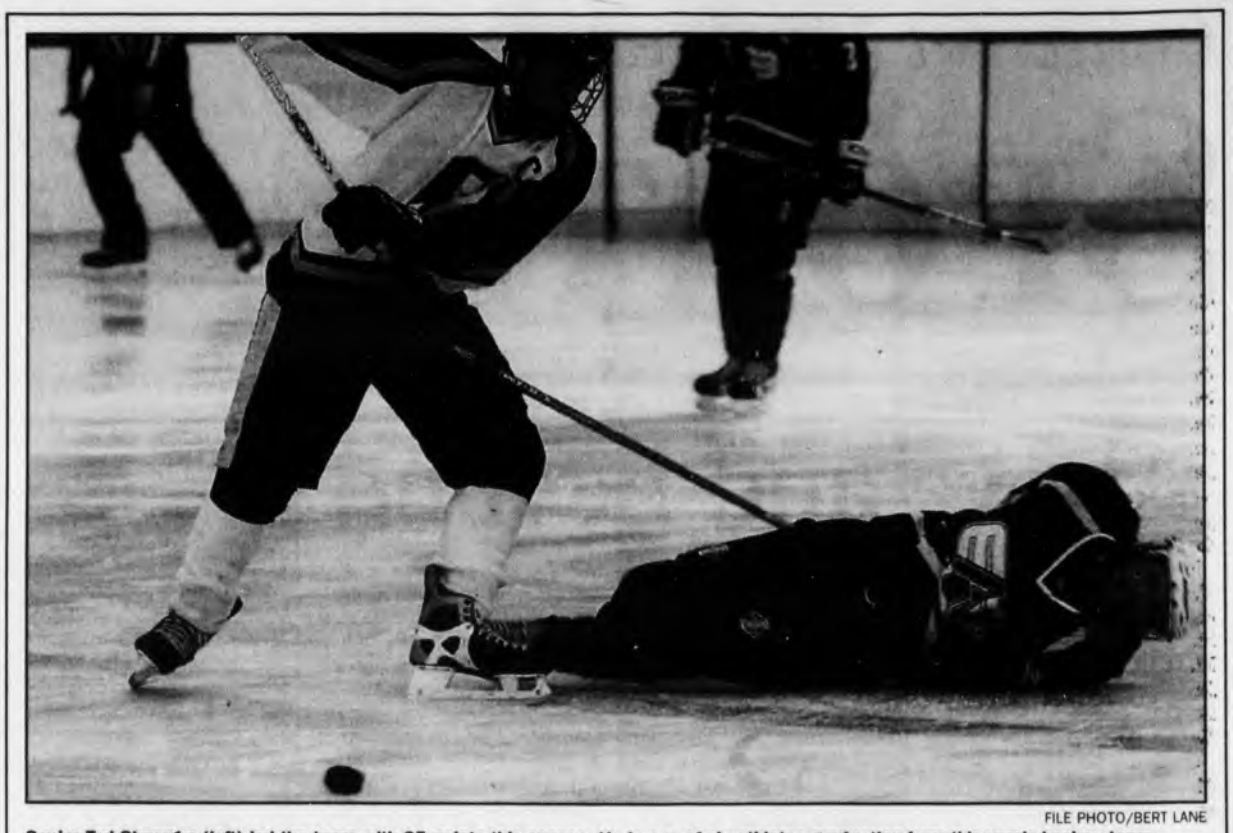
Another problem lies in the departure of Anderson and Whitney, as both will graduate in June. Cohasset will sorely miss Anderson's outstanding shooting from the paint. Levangie believes, however, that Grossman, Katie James, and others will compensate for her loss to the team.

Levangie said Whitney was "the best defensive player in the league." Nevertheless, Coach maintains that the Skipper defense will remain strong again next year.



"The off-season is extremely important," said Levangie. "If the girls want to compete with other teams in our league, they need to work year-round at their game. If the self-discipline and motivation are there, I think the girls will do very well."

He does not envision the 2005-2006 as a "rebuilding" or "starting from scratch" scenario. He can count on several players returning next fall. The same could be said for rivals Carver and Norwell.

Levangie suggested some options for the girls to keep their game tuned in the off-season. He recommended a weekly shooting clinic at the high school. He also advised participation in AAU basketball or a summer league.

When asked who will captain the squad next year, he remained tight-lipped. He said he has not yet decided, and he will make his wishes known next season.

The girls will wrap up the season when they join the other Cohasset basketball teams at the Booster Club night dinner on March 16 at the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

emerged as one of Cohasset's best forwards down the stretch, and Bouchard showed at times he can be a potent goal-scorer.

Virga says this line has the chance to emulate the first line of this year's Harwich club, all three of whom had over 30 points this season.

Cohasset will also return a number of its top defensmen, including Conor Holway and Brandon Smith. Holway established himself as one of the top hitters in the South Shore League, and noticeably improved his puck-carrying skills as the season went on. Smith, meanwhile, missed the first two months of the season, yet stepped right in to play almost every other shift and played well in doing so.

"I wouldn't trade Conor and Brandon for any two defensemen in the South Shore League," Virga says. "They will be the best in the league next year. With those two and Zach Murray and Charlie Czerkawski behind them, we have four very solid defensemen."

Other players who showed promise this season include Pat Doonan, Corbin Faber, TJ Kennedy and Dan Sullivan.

The Skippers will lose six seniors to graduation, including four captains. The captains were Ted Straughn (team's leading scorer, 7-18-25), Joe Durkin, Tim Pilczak (third-leading scorer, 7-8-15) and Crandon Leahy. The other seniors are goalie Brendan Michaud and Mark Donovan.

"I'm going to miss these seniors, and I'm going to miss some great captains," Virga said.

As for next year's captains, Virga is keeping his options open. The coach says it will not automatically be seniors; it will be whomever puts the work in during the off-season to become better hockey players.

"I don't care who plays or who the captains are; I just want hockey players," Virga said. "The first two months of the season cannot be training camp."

Most of the kids on the team play multiple sports, and Virga does not want that to change.

"I encourage them to play other sports," he said. "But you can still play hockey one night a week, and during the summer. You can play on Sundays during the fall and still play football."

Will the extra effort be made, and if so, will it pay off? We'll find out next November.

their first year in the competitive South Shore League. In addition to Davis's four points, Quigley's bucket, and Haggerty's four points on the night, Eliza Kinnealey provided a huge spark for the Cohasset girls with four points on two nice hoops in the first half.

The Cohasset girls also played two other games in the past two weeks:

Cohasset 7, Halifax 4

After a layoff of 10 days, sharpness was not the rule of the day when the Sixers took on Halifax at the CHS gym on Feb. 27. The Blue & White girls had played their finest basketball of the season in a pair of close losses to league-leading Abington and second-place Duxbury (the latter in triple overtime) two weeks previously, but the rust and lack of basketball conditioning thanks to the President's Week vacation was evident from the many errant passes, off-the-mark shots, and overall lack of timing in the girls' play.

So the bad news, so to speak, was that the Blue and White ended up with their lowest offensive output of the season, a mere seven points against a Halifax team on which they had scored 16 earlier this year.

But the good news was that Halifax managed just four points and were shut out in the second half by a tight Cohasset 2-3 zone defense, enabling the Sixers to eke out a 7-4 victory.

Cohasset forward Kate French proved to be a one-girl wrecking crew, scoring all seven of her team's points, including a clutch free throw in the waning minutes that boosted the Sixers into a two-score lead (in as much as Halifax had shown no capacity for making a three point shot) to seal the win.

Cohasset and Halifax had played to a 4-4 deadlock at the intermission, but a basket by French on a Cohasset "30 play" – a pass from guard Emma Quigley at half court to center Carli Haggerty at the top of the key and then to French as she cut toward the hoop from the left wing – at the start of the half gave the Sixers a lead they were not to relinquish.

Norwell 23, Cohasset 10

The Blue and White hosted Norwell in the final regular season contest this past Sunday with nothing on the line in so far as playoff position because Cohasset and Norwell were locked into a playoff meeting regardless of the outcome.

So with the Cohasset coaches deciding not to play their usual defensive and offensive formations so as not to give away anything to Norwell, the Sixers were off their usual game, especially on defense. Haggerty led Cohasset with five points, French hit a bucket, and Quigley sank a three pointer (her fourth of the season) to account for the Blue & White's offensive output.

Now the Cohasset girls are off to Carver for their quarterfinal playoff meeting with Norwell tonight. If successful, the Sixers will advance to the semis at Weymouth tomorrow with the finals also set at Weymouth on Sunday.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Registration

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 19, 2005.

Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 12, 2005, from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon, in the lower lobby of the High School gymnasium. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 19, 2005.

Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio at (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 19, 2005 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of July 31, 2005. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the junior league baseball and softball programs (ages 13 and 14) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the American League division for baseball (ages 9-11) and softball (ages 9-11) divisions will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls in the National League division for baseball (ages 6-8) and Instructional Softball (ages 7-8) will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (boys and girls ages 5-6) will be $65. Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

Please note that boys and girls who are 6 years old, but who played in the farm league last year are eligible to play in the National League Division this year. Please contact Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklawy.com if you have questions about player eligibility.

Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)-383-1897.

Junior League baseball

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce the creation of a new Junior League baseball program for the upcoming 2005 spring season. The program is being introduced to help fill the void that has been created with the elimination of the middle school baseball program. As previously announced, the CYBSA has introduced a similar softball program for 7th and 8th grade girls as well.

The baseball program will be a Little League governed Junior League – eligible players must be 13 or 14 years of age as of July 31, 2005. Our teams will be placed in a division with teams from Norwell, and perhaps another neighboring town. Games will be played during the week at approximately 5:45 pm, and, as scheduled, on weekends. We hope to field as many as three teams of twelve players.

The fee for participation will be the same as the CYBSA Little League Major League program - $125 per player. Each player will receive a new uniform jersey and baseball hat. Players will keep the hats and jerseys provided to them.

Registration will commence immediately, and run through March 19, 2005. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 12, 2005, from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon, in the lower lobby of the High School gymnasium. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 19, 2005.

COASTAL STARS

Mite C1

The Mite C-1 team traveled to Martha's Vineyard to play in the 15th Annual Invitational Tournament this past weekend.

The team faced Braintree in Game One and winning 4-2. The team skated great and had some fancy stick handling. Defensemen Sean Feeney and Davis Cronin were excellent in keeping the puck out of their zone. The line of Ben Swim, Jake Moore and Daniel Cronin were outstanding in keeping the puck moving up against Braintree.

The Stars beat Braintree 4-2. Tyler McKinnon was outstanding in goal. The goals for the Stars came from Liam Manning, who had two, and Jack Conlon who had two with assists from Hugh Healey and Tommy Prendergast.

Game 2 was against a strong Martha's Vineyard team; once again the Stars skated their way to victory. The line of Chris Bertone, Cam Mastrangelo, and James Dietrich proved to be a force to be reckoned with. Joe Deyeso and Joe Proctor were outstanding in defense and McKinnon was once again steady in the goal.

The Stars beat Martha's Vineyard 5-2. Goals came from Healey with an assist from Conlon, Bertone with an assist from Mastrangelo, and Conlon had a hat trick with an assist from Prendergast.

Manning received the player of the game for his outstanding efforts.

The Stars faced Acton-Boxborough for Game 3. The boys came out strong and skated hard. Acton-Boxborough proved to be tough at the net holding back all shots. Deyeso was tough in the net and had a great game with some unbelievable saves. The Stars fell to Acton-Boxborough 6-0.

The Stars skated to the championship game and once again faced Acton-Boxborough. The boys put forth a strong effort and many shots but could not get past AB's strong defense. The Stars were defeated 7-1. The goal came from Jack Conlon.

The Stars had a great outing with a strong second-place finish. We would like to thank all the coaches for their hard work and a great weekend.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team defeated Cape Cod 7-2 on Saturday, Feb. 26 in Hingham.

Stars center, Andrew Tautkus fired a centering pass from his brother, Matthew, past the Cape Cod goalie, making it 1-0, Stars. James Daley made it 2-0 Stars with a breakaway goal mid-way through the first period. The Stars defensive pairings - Tommy Coyne and Tristan Wiggin, and RJ Neuls and Jonathan Gardner, kept Cape Cod scoreless in the first.

Right wing Michael McPartlin put the Stars up 3-0 with his goal to begin the second period. Matthew Tautkus one-timed a pass from his brother, Andrew, past the stunned Cape Cod goalie, making it 4-0 Stars. Andrew Tautkus then scored his second goal of the game to begin the third period. Stars forwards Liam Rose, Seamus Feeney and Mark McGoldrick each contributed with an assist.

Down 5-0, Cape Cod scored to narrow the Stars lead to 5-1. Another quick goal by Cape Cod closed the gap to 5-2. Stars goalie Max Hemingway turned away several shots preserving the Stars lead. Daley then scored back-to-back goals, assisted by McPartlin to complete his hat trick and put the game out of reach. With the win, the Stars improved to 15-2-3.

PATRIOT LEAGUE WRAP UP

Editor's Note: The report of the boys travel basketball teams' season-ending games with Halifax will appear in next week's Mariner.

The Boys Patriot League Travel Basketball teams delivered some very spirited action in their final four regular season outings.

In far away Bridgewater, the Sixers struggled early in the game as Bridgewater led by one at the nine-minute mark. But the momentum shifted quickly as Robert Jones alertly picked off a pass and fed Sam Richardson for a bucket.

Anders Goetz was a thorn in Bridgewater's side as he forced five consecutive turnovers, which led to scoring opportunities for Cohasset. Yes, this was now looking like the 6th grade squad that has dominated the league.

Gabe Seksay blocked a shot. Jack Carrier controlled the defensive boards. Seksay and Richardson, with nothing but sheer aggression, continued to get scoring opportunities.

Cohasset was in the lead but Bridgewater came back and tied the game with 3:21 left in the first half. Cohasset's shooting went cold. This was unfamiliar territory. Seksay then blocked a shot and fed a streaking Jones for a score. But BW battled back and led at the half, 21-19.

The second half started with Jones draining an outside jumper that was all net. Derek Youngman converted a steal to a fast break for Jones followed by a Richardson to Youngman bucket. The game was tied with six minutes left. It was a dog fight. The ball began to drop, as Seksay made the most of offensive positioning. Ben Campbell nailed a baseline jumper for two to seal the win for Cohasset, 37-36.

The sevens hit the pine next, with only eight players. BW had the size advantage, so Cohasset needed to capitalize on their speed and passing. Early on, the ball didn't drop for the boys in blue and BW jumped out to an early, perhaps insurmountable lead.

Brendan Doonan and Jeff Charles were strong defensively with their quick hands, anticipating the steal. Dana Valentine and Chris Brown provided size and strength on the boards. John Kearney and Will Wise directed the offense. Cohasset kept BW guessing, switching from man to man defense and back again. Johnny Maher and Kevin O'Connell led the scoring for Cohasset, scoring eight and seven points respectively, with O'C nailing a three.

The eights started strong, confidently breaking the press, however they had early trouble scoring. Evan Richardson kick-started the action with a bucket. Ryan Daly was a force to be reckoned with under the offensive glass all game long. With nothing but grit and determination, Daly positioned himself very well and not only hauled down numerous offensive rebounds, but he converted them to points for his team.

Daly's magic began to rub off on his teammates. Nick Simonds was fouled underneath on a strong move and went to the charity stripe. Nick Savage was fouled and hit both shots. BW was up 31-19 at the half.

The break didn't slow down Daly as he took up residence under the glass and was fouled and sunk both. Richardson found Daly again for two. Savage played superb man defense against a taller opponent. Cohasset slowly chipped away at the BW lead. Aggressive defense and going to the net yielded several Cohasset scores.

At the one minute mark, Richardson went coast to coast to bring Cohasset to within four. BW held on and escaped with the win. Ryan Daly turned in his best performance of the season.

Under Friday night lights at CMHS, the squads matched up against East Bridgewater.

Eric Wasel established himself in the low post position with strong defensive rebounding and registering a blocked shot. EB pressed the boys, and Sam Richardson fed Mike Monaco in classic textbook fashion for 2. Gabe Seksay continued to dominate the offensive boards and dumped a few baskets in. At the half, Cohasset was up. The Sixers delivered their usual great team play and secured the win.

The Sevens came out in a man to man against EB. Robby McCunney set the tone with a resounding block and then fed Dana Valentine for an easy bucket. The boys played a strong team game against EB. Patience and composure allowed the sevens to work the ball, creating scoring chances. They also engineered fast break opportunities as Johnny Maher found an open Jeff Charles twice and Eamon Davis for scores.

Chris Brown controlled the middle of the paint and intercepted a pass which he fed to Kevin O'Connell and then back to Brown on the give and go for two. Taylor McQuade provided a textbook screen for Charles from the baseline for an easy basket. Will Wise found Maher and Davis open for scores. Brendan Doonan played his usual aggressive scrappy game, wrestling for every loose ball. John Kearney was also on the receiving end of fast break chances being fed from McCunney for two, and from Valentine for two.

The sevens won the game.

The Eights found themselves down by four at the half, but within the first minute of the second half they tied the game up. Evan Richardson led his team with aggressive no holds barred play. Driving the line, Richardson scored. He fed Nick Savage in the low post for two.

Marcus Charles was on fire, playing extremely smart, aggressive ball. After he stole the ball, he found Ryan Daly for a bucket. Charles then stole the ball again and went the distance for two and was fouled. His made foul shot tied the game up at the 6:45 mark.

Dan Martin, on the receiving end of a fast break pass, sacrificed his body, saving the ball before it went out of bounds. Martin then delivered a resounding defensive block which created a score from Charles. Owen Landon was fiercely defending the EB guards and fed Charles on the fast break.

Martin controlled the offensive boards. With great determination, on his third consecutive board he was fouled in the act of shooting.

Team play put the boys in blue in the victory column.

In Weymouth, the Sixers engaged in scrappy back and forth action and finally scored on a Sam Richardson hook shot. Anders Goetz continued to show tremendous aggressive defensive, tormenting the opposing guards. But Cohasset struggled early to get the ball to drop through the net. But it was Richardson again who got the scoring going and slowly but surely they came back. Jack Carrier protected the paint and caused Weymouth to turn the ball over. He also was on the receiving end of a Robert Jones led fast break. Carrier was fouled and sunk both shots from the charity stripe.

Drew Cobin led good ball movement, causing the Weymouth defense to shift. He found Jones for a bucket.

After a very low scoring first half, the boys from the shore came back. Derek Youngman, Eric Wasel, Mike Monaco and Ben Campbell all found the net, sealing the win for Cohasset.

The 7th graders engaged in an early defensive struggle and it was several minutes until Dana Valentine found Will Wise for a basket and then Brendan Doonan found Jeff Charles for two. The boys found their touch, shut down Weymouth and took a led that they never relinquished. Robby McCunney hit a bucket from the outside and Cohasset led 20-17 at the half.

The second half started with a Wise three pointer that propelled the scoring attack of Cohasset. McCunney and Charles were the hot shooters, scoring eight a piece. Wise chipped in seven and Johnny Maher had six in the win over Weymouth.

Strong defensive positioning and limited turnovers contributed to the win. John Kearney, Kevin O'Connell and Eamon Davis controlled the back court while Chris Brown and Taylor McQuade shut down the low post with their size and rebounding prowess.

The 8th graders found themselves down early, 7-0, but patience prevailed.

Danny Brady started the offensive action, driving strongly to the hoop for two. On the next possession, Mike Fithian converted an offensive board for another bucket. Dan Martin took it to the defense and was fouled. The 8th graders were here to play.

Nick Savage ripped a board and was fouled sinking one of two from the line. Owen Landon found Evan Richardson for two. Landon was then fouled on under the defensive boards and sunk one. Landon has come on strong of late, playing smart heads up ball on both ends of the court.

Nick Savage converted a three point play. Richardson was fouled and converted both shots from the stripe. Marcus Charles foiled a sure fast break by Weymouth, coming from nowhere to stop the easy bucket. With 24 seconds left in the first half, Cohasset was down by six. Martin delivered a resounding defensive block which created a score from Charles. Owen Landon was fiercely defending the EB guards and fed Charles on the fast break.

Charles started the second half with a steal and a bucket. He then found Nick Simonds for a bucket. Charles then stole the ball and Simonds was the cleanup guy, converting the rebound to a basket. Simonds showed great composure and presence in the paint, limiting Weymouth from too much penetration.

Despite the strong offensive showing, Cohasset struggled to close the gap despite incredible efforts by Daly, Danny Martin and Adam Berger.

'We knew we made a difference'

those with him throughout his fight were his daughters, Emily and Liesl and their mother, Marianne.

Following her dad's death, Emily participated in the Cohasset Relay For Life, a "community overnight event (for) those from all walks of life to join in the fight against cancer. The event raises cancer awareness, funds for research, education....and local programs while...remembering loved ones, (inspiring) others and celebrating life."

Emily's participation in the Relay led her to become captain of her team, a position she holds to this day. "It's so wonderful to be there each year," Emily stated with passion and dedication. "There is something there that is impossible to describe. Special moments make it all so meaningful. The Luminaria (when candles are lit honoring those touched by cancer) and the Survivor's Walk (when cancer survivors lead the first lap of the relay) are so emotional. I can't not do it anymore!"

Emily's skills and expertise as a team leader and fundraiser expand each year. "At first, I 'winged it'!" she explained shyly. "But I decided to write personal letters and make calls to friends and family for support and donations and it was successful. Others in school joined in and it has continued to grow."

The achievement of these young people under Emily's direction is no small feat. In 2004 the team she led at the Cohasset Relay raised the most funds of the 37 participating teams and contributed more than $9,000 to the cause.

In addition to raising money and increasing awareness for this worthy organization, participation in the Relay provides participants with an opportunity for fun, creativity and camaraderie. This all night event overflows with festive and expressive contests, entertainment and moments of reverence and sentiment. Though fundraising is the most significant requirement, coordination of teams includes various other preparations. Tent decorating, food and menu planning, uniform themes and symbols and the determination and stamina to have a team member walking along the track throughout every moment of the event all are parts of a winning effort.

Emily's team was brimming with themes and symbols of inspiration during their 2004 participation at the Relay. Their tent area and team represented the "Impossible Dream" foreshadowing the upcoming feats of the Boston Red Sox.

"My Dad was a huge Red Sox fan," Emily explained. "Even though he moved to New Jersey for several years, he continued to be a Sox fan. The year he died, we had been given tickets to the Red Sox-Yankees game during April vacation. My Dad was too sick to go, but I went anyway, because he wanted me to.

"We watched Red Sox games together from his hospital room. He never stopped being a fan. I wonder if maybe our team at the Relay was what brought them the luck to win!"

Another inspiration to Emily's team was a nine-year-old little girl named Lily. The younger sister of a friend of Emily's sister Liesl, Lily died of cancer the previous March. As a tribute to her memory, the team members wore lily boutonnières throughout the relay.

"My own sister is so important to me, the news of Lily's death really meant something in my life," said Emily. "She really left a footprint in my heart. It would be very hard to continue our work for the relay without honoring her."

Emily has endless words of praise for her co-captain, Alana Driscoll also of Hingham.

"It would be so hard to continue this without her," Emily stated about her friend and Relay colleague. "We have a lot of girls who get together and we all do as much as we can to tell people about what we are doing and why it's important. We also do fundraising projects throughout the year. One of the things we did was to sell slush at the soccer games. As soon as Moms knew what we were doing, they would buy some and say' Keep the change'. That was a great feeling we knew we were making a difference."

Youth summit

In addition to her great success as a Relay for Life Fundraiser, Emily was selected to attend the Relay Youth Summit in Dallas Texas. A forum to develop leadership and fundraising skills, this session was attended by more than three hundred staff, college and high school students representing Relay For Life Events throughout the continent. Energized and enthusiastic, Emily described her experience at the conference.

"It was fun and really cool," she exclaimed. "I learned a lot about how other groups run their event and I heard about activities that are fun and unique ways to raise money and encourage donations. I also received lots of information that helps team members to tell people about the Story of the American Cancer Society and why its work is so important."

Mary Shepherd, Community Executive for Income Development spoke effusively of Emily's dedication.

"We are so fortunate to have Emily involved in the Relay for Life. She is a mature and driven individual with a deeply personal inspiration. It is wonderful to see her shine. She is so focused and takes her responsibility very seriously; she was a great person to attend the Youth Relay Summit." Shepherd continued, "We are happy to have her on the planning committee for the Relay. Of course, she is so genuine, it is impossible to say 'no' to her!

"Of course, people of all ages are participants and supporters of this event, but it is so meaningful when the young people become involved. We find that it becomes a passion for many of them that they carry as they move on in their lives. The existence of a Relay for Life in an area they are considering for college can be a factor. If one doesn't exist, these students are often inspired to start one. This is a vital way for the message to spread and the support for cancer awareness and programs to grow."

Solace and joy embrace Emily each day as she wears a necklace given to her by her Mom on her 14th birthday; the first one she observed without her Dad. The white gold charm, embellished with her initials, her birthstone and that of her father lovingly whispers the inscription, "Always a part of you." Similar charms are worn by her sister and mother, proclaiming the eternal presence of their Dad's spirit.

Plans are underway for the 2005 Relay For Life at Cohasset High School June 17 & 18. Emily, Alana and their team are busy with their fundraising efforts and plans for the overnight event. Emily addressed the challenges of managing school and the relay. "It's not always easy to juggle everything, but it doesn't matter. Sometimes it's stressful but it is all so special and so worth it."

To anyone considering involvement in the Relay For Life or any events to support the American Cancer Society, Emily offers these words of wisdom: "Get involved! Cancer touches so many families and you never know when it may be yours or someone's who you love. Whenever you have a chance, do everything can to help others. You will always be glad you did."

"Every 26 seconds someone calls the American Cancer Society for help. The Society's toll-free information line is 1-800-ACS-2345 and is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week." For information about the Relay For Life, please call 508-897-4392.

Rally for Relay is Saturday

Join millions of other American Cancer Society (ACS) Relay for Life participants across the country in the fight against cancer. Find out how to get involved in the Annual Relay For Life event in Cohasset at a Relay Rally on Saturday, March 12—generously hosted by St. Anthony's in their reception hall from 9-10 a.m. The variety of ways to become involved with the Relay will be highlighted throughout the Rally.

The Relay For Life event will be held at Cohasset High School on June 17 and 18. Anyone interested in joining the planning committee, becoming a team captain, volunteering, or just finding out more about Relay For Life is encouraged to attend the Rally. Relay teams representing families, clubs, churches, neighborhoods and corporations will join the race to beat cancer by celebrating survivorship and taking turns walking around the track. Teams are encouraged to enjoy the great music, food and camaraderie of the event.

Relay For Life is the American Cancer Society's largest signature event as well as the most successful national fund-raiser. Nationwide, Relay For Life raised $306 million in fiscal year 2003-04 in more than $4,050 communities with more than 2.6 million participants celebrating 550,000 cancer survivors. Relays in more than 60 communities in Massachusetts raised more than $9 million last year for local programs of cancer research (89 grants currently throughout Massachusetts, totaling $35,204,899), education, advocacy and patient services. These include transportation for cancer patients to their treatments, one-on-one support for women with breast cancer, cosmetologist consultations for women being treated for cancer, tobacco control education, and mammography outreach.

For more information about Relay For Life, to learn how to become a volunteer, or to RSVP for the Relay Rally, please call Mary Shepherd at ACS at 1-888-648-4880.

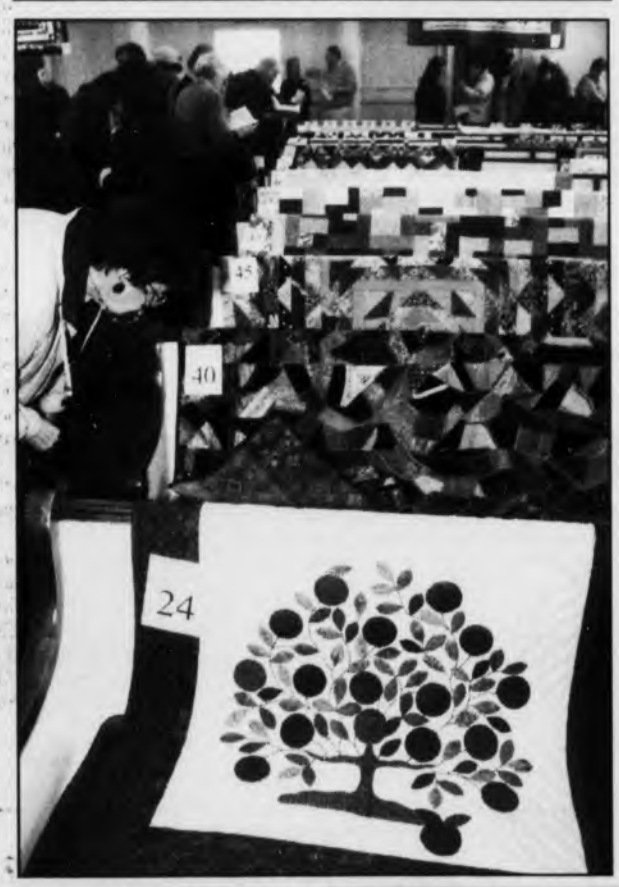
Covering the quilt show



Visitors to Saturday's quilt show examine the many quilts on display at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset Saturday, March 5. Proceeds from the show went to benefit the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust, or PACT, and Reach Out and Read, a program to make literacy part of regular pediatrics at Boston Medical Center.

Quincy's Bonnie Gorman takes a closer look at the fine work of "Coral Reef," a quilt made by Cohasset resident Jeanne Aurello in 2001.

Taking advantage of some down time during the luncheon, Cohasset's Sandy Parnell and Claudia Story take some time to chat between dishing out the scrumptious desserts made by members of the church.

Above, Dorothy White of Marshfield takes a closer look at "A Storied Crazy Quilt," a piece with an interesting history behind it. Originally made by Eleanor Perason in Jan. 1885, the quilt survived fires and gambling debts to find its way into the hands of Mary Quinn Londergan of Marshfield.

How to Find Real Estate for 30% to 50% Below Market Value

DISCOVER THE HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS MOST REAL ESTATE INVESTORS OVERLOOK

"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties. That means, you do not have to have money in the bank.

My system is so comprehensive that the State of California accredited it. But like just about everything in life, it works best if you work at it.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than $3 trillion dollars worth of assets are in probate. It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.
2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.
3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.
4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.
5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

An estate can be your quickest way to acquire a prime business for pennies on the dollar. You can run it, or sell it quickly for market value and position yourself for substantial gains.

Estate hunting is also a great way to start an e-business, auction off your findings, and cash in on the new, thriving e-based economy.

One of our students made profits of 1,000 percent to 3,000 percent on the possessions he found in estates and then quickly sold. There is a potential windfall in every estate you search.

You can use probate to build a tidy business around just about any item or collectible that interests you. Millions of items, and real estate, end up as "buried treasure" hidden in probate.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO DES DAUGHTERS
Time May Be Running Out For Your Compensation Claim
DES (diethylstibestrol) was prescribed for pregnant women during the 1950s and 1960s after Harvard researchers incorrectly concluded, without proper testing, that it helped prevent miscarriages even though the manufacturers of DES know that the drug crossed the placenta and stunted the growth of offsprings' reproductive organs. They conducted no studies or warned of this effect. In 1954, the first controlled study of DES effectiveness showed that the drug did not work. In 1971, the use of DES was banned as a carcinogen. Recent studies report serious side effects associated with prenatal DES exposure including:
• Infertility And Endometriosis including multiple miscarriages and stillbirths
• Pre-Term Delivery Where Offspring Is Significantly Disabled
• Ectopic Pregnancy
• Clear Cell Adenocarcinoma Of The Cervix Or Vagina
If you are a woman whose mother took DES while she was pregnant with you and you suffer from any of the above injuries, you may be entitled to compensation.

Applications are picking up for Alternative Energy Committee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen is looking for residents to serve on a committee to investigate alternative energy sources, such as harnessing solar and wind energy. The committee will either be appointed by Town Meeting or by the board itself. It will be charged with investigating various "green" energy methods, and will report back to the Annual Town Meeting with its findings in 2006.

To date, residents Jim Shipsky, Benjamin Bixby, Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street and Luciano Lauretti of Jerusalem Road have expressed interest in being a part of the committee alongside John Dunn of Schofield Road, who brought the idea forward to selectmen with Merle Brown.

Shipsky, who has served on the Open Space Committee and Growth and Development Committee, said in his letter of intent, he has committed his "professional and personal life to working toward sustainability." He said when Selectman Rob Spofford was Chairman of the School Building Committee, he urged him and the committee to make the additions and renovations to the schools "green." He added, "Unfortunately, there was no interest in 'green' or energy efficiency at that time. I am delighted at the possibility of Cohasset moving toward sustainability now."

Shipsky is also a member of Sustainable South Shore, and is currently working on an emissions inventory for the town of Hull. "This will establish baseline data, useful in setting goals for reduction of greenhouse gases, as well as saving the town money on energy. I have a lot of ideas about how Cohasset can become sustainable," he said.

> "I am delighted at the possibility of Cohasset moving toward sustainability now."
> — Jim Shipsky, applicant

Bixby, a member of the Cohasset High School class of 2001, is currently a candidate for a Bachelor of Science in Foreign Service (BSFS) at Georgetown University's Walsh School of Foreign Service in Washington, D.C. He expects to receive his degree with honors in International Politics, specializing in Trans-State Actors in World Politics this May.

Bixby has studied under the tutelage of Dr. David Jhirad, current Vice President for Science and Research at the World Resources Institute and former Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy for International Energy Policy, Trade, and Investment.

In his letter of intent Bixby writes, "I would enthusiastically undertake any assignment in the context of this committee, and participate in its work both in person while possible and by phone in all other cases. I am confident that my current location in Washington would serve as an asset to the committee; I am proximate to both international and federal sources of information, and perhaps financing. As part of my service on the committee, I would like to investigate the present and potential benefits to the town of federal — as well as Commonwealth — legislation encouraging renewable energy investment."

Willard has had a strong interest in renewable energy for many years and in his letter of intent said he has supported paying a higher rate on his electric bills to support the purchase of energy generated by renewable methods. He said he believes it is "a wonderful idea for Cohasset to begin the process of exploring new ways to provide power to the town and lessen our footprint on this earth."

Professionally, Willard has been in manufacturing sales for the past nine years and has worked with firms that are building and inventing new energy generation and storage devices. He has worked with firms in both the fuel cell and solar energy industry along with firms specializing in energy storage with a primary focus on transportation.

Lauretti told selectmen in his letter of intent for the position that he has background experience in project financing and operations of large natural gas fired cogeneration facilities. He also has experience in banking and private equity investments.

Interested candidates should submit a letter of intent to Town Manager Bill Griffin at 41 Highland Ave., or contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

"I'm delighted to welcome Peter to the company and know our passengers will benefit from his strong commitment to outstanding customer satisfaction, operational excellence and his appreciation of changing market needs."

"LimoLiner has already had one strong year of service and my goal is to build this franchise into the preferred choice for frequent travelers between Boston and New York," added Pescatore. CHECK INTO LITERACY WITH THE
VERIZON READS "HOMETOWN HEROES" CONTEST

Imagine your life if you couldn't read - couldn't enjoy a book, read a newspaper, or understand life-saving emergency instructions on a sign. That's a daily struggle for many people. Fortunately, there are people out there who are dedicated to helping everyone learn the joy of reading and we'd like your help in finding them and giving them the recognition that they deserve.

Interview someone in your community that you feel has worked hard to help others with literacy education. Ask them why they believe that literacy for all is important and what they are trying to do to make that a reality. Then, in 500 words or less, tell us why you think they should be considered for this honor. Fifteen Literacy Heroes from communities throughout Massachusetts will be chosen to receive a $1,000 grant to further a literacy effort in their community.

MAIL YOUR SUBMISSIONS TO:
Literacy Heroes Contest, Massachusetts Literacy Foundation
One Herald Square, Boston, MA 02118
or email: MLF@bostonherald.com

- ★ Entries must be received by April 8, 2005.
- ★ Please include contact information for BOTH you and your nominee as well as the name of the school/organization if applicable.
- ★ Essay writers will each receive a $50 gift certificate to Barnes & Noble.

This contest is provided through a partnership between the Massachusetts Literacy Foundation and Verizon Reads as part of the Massachusetts Reads event. Verizon residential telephone customers can contribute one dollar a month for literacy by checking the box on their local phone bill. LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

A MATTER OF FREQUENCY

Presbycusis (age-related hearing loss) compromises high-frequency hearing more than low-frequency hearing, making it difficult to hear the high-pitched conversation of women and children. While traditional analogue hearing instruments often work well to address this type of loss, newer digital instruments have the potential to do a better job. Not only can they make a distinction between high and low frequency sounds, but they can also fine-tune hearing to an unmatched degree. As a result, wearers of digital instruments can push a button to tune out nearby chatter. And when they are trapped in noisy traffic jams, they can push another button to dampen the din outside their cars. Digital technology enables wearers to adapt their instruments to their changing requirements.

We take the responsibility very seriously of matching every patient with the hearing instrument best suited to his or her special circumstances. We then use a state-of-the-art technology to achieve the most accurate, comfortable, personal fit. The extensive training required of a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist and our experience in the field make us well-suited to both tasks. Is your hearing in need of a boost? Call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER 781-337-1144. Hearing tests are painless - have one soon at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth.

P.S. You should have your hearing checked as often as you have your eyes checked.

Welcome to Hollywood . . . Ireland

Emerald Isle is jewel in filmmakers' crown

By JUDY ENRIGHT
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

HOLLYWOOD, Ireland - The glitz. The glamour. The pomp. The circumstance. Well, no surprise there. This is Hollywood after all.

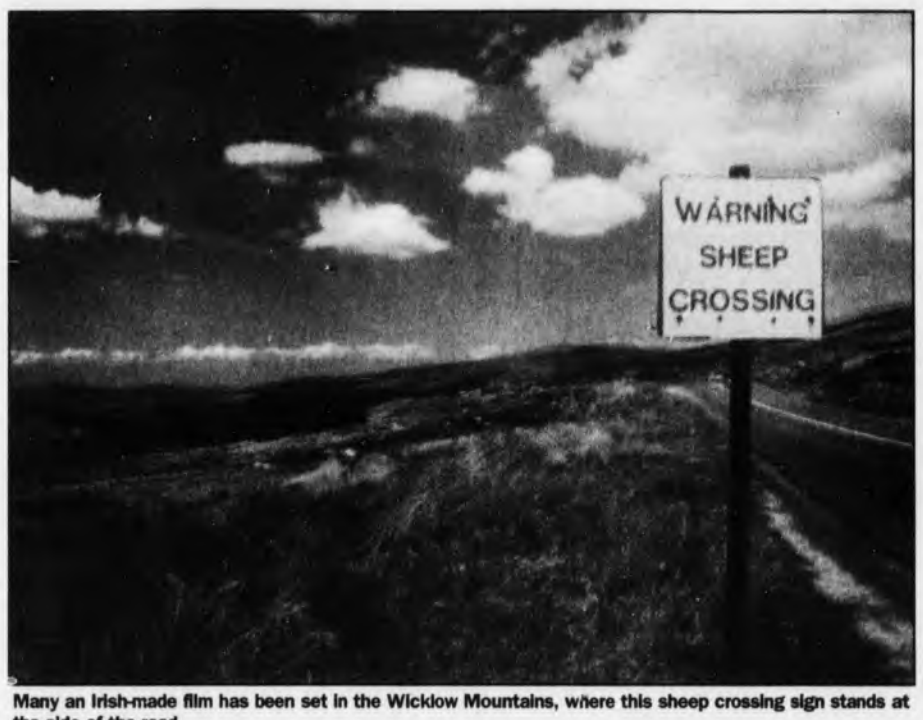
Hey, hold on a minute. This couldn't be Hollywood – I put the car in reverse and take another look at the road sign. It does say Hollywood, but there are no hills, no mansions. Where's Rodeo Drive?

But this is indeed Hollywood æ Hollywood (Cillin Chaoimhin), Ireland, set smack-dab in the thick of the Wicklow Mountains, and one of many Irish locales where American film companies have flocked to produce their epics. So, if you want to rub shoulders with movie stars, be hired as an extra or witness the filming of some future box office smash, hop a plane for Ireland.

This Hollywood is a basic farming community with fields bordered by hedgerows, narrow, winding roads and a tiny center with a post office and general store, the Hollywood Inn and a pub called Tutty's æ a far cry from Hollywood, U.S.A. Local lore, though, claims that Hollywood, U.S.A., took its name from a former resident who was lonely after moving to the States and named Hollywood after his hometown in West Wicklow.

Every major studio has produced or co-produced a film in Ireland and, in the past 10 years, Disney (Touchstone) alone has produced and/or distributed five films shot here including "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Reign of Fire," "Veronica Guerin," "Ella Enchanted" and last summer's "King Arthur."

In addition to being a prime location for movies, Ireland has become a favored spot by American and British television, too. The enormously popular "Ballykissangel" was filmed in the tiny town of Avoca and produced at Ardmore Studios in Bray, Co. Wicklow.



The talk of the town in Ballymore Eustace, in Co. Kildare, is still the months of film crews, actors and extras who landed there to film "King Arthur." Earlier, the town was the site of battle scenes for "Braveheart."

But the presence of film crews and character actors in tiny towns is nothing new for the Irish, who have watched their film industry explode over the past few decades. Most moviegoers are familiar with lush Irish landscapes from classics such as "The Quiet Man" and "Ryan's Daughter."

Hollywood, Ireland, doesn't look quite the same as its counterpart in California.

A sheep, or maybe it's an extra on location at an Irish film shoot.

Many an Irish-made film has been set in the Wicklow Mountains, where this sheep crossing sign stands at the side of the road.

Those films paved the way for "My Left Foot" and "The Crying Game," international successes that are credited with thrusting the Irish film industry into the spotlight in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

By 2010, television and movie productions in Ireland are expected to generate some 500 million Euro (in excess of $615 million) and employ more than 11,000 people.

There are lots of reasons why filmmakers love Ireland and vice versa. Ireland promotes film production by awarding tax incentives. Then there's the ready number of skilled Irish crews and the breathtaking natural scenery.

One of many Irish sectors thriving, thanks to the film industry, is tourism. The Irish are masterful at promoting their country's many attributes and the County Wicklow Film Commission hasn't missed a trick. The commission has produced a slick brochure, titled "Film Action in County Wicklow," complete with three road trips (less than 50 miles each) that motorists can drive to absorb settings where various films were made. There's the Excalibur Drive, Braveheart Drive and Michael Collins' Drive.

The brochure proudly states, "County Wicklow is not only known as the Garden of Ireland but also The Hollywood of Europe. Over the last 85 years, hundreds of films have been made in the county, which rightly justifies this title."

The 42-mile Excalibur Drive (North Wicklow Film Trail) starts and ends in Roundwood. (If you're ever asked in Trivial Pursuit, Roundwood is reputed to be Ireland's highest village at 238 meters above sea level.) As you drive along the route, you might recognize settings from dozens of films, including "Into the West," "Michael Dwyer" and "The Blue Max," to name just a few.

The Irish are masterful at promoting their country's many attributes and the County Wicklow Film Commission hasn't missed a trick.

The Braveheart Drive (West Wicklow Film Trail) is about 50 miles round-trip and starts and ends in Hollywood, on the L107 near the junction of the N81. "Braveheart," "Dancing at Lughnasa" and "Michael Collins" are among the movies filmed on this route. The drive takes you through Ballyknockan (famous for its granite), Lacken, Manor Kilbride, Blessington, the glorious Sally Gap and Laragh and past abandoned lead mines in the Wicklow Gap (note that the Irish portion of the Tour de France came over the Gap in 1998, where a sprint was staged.)

The 45-mile Michael Collins' Drive (South Wicklow Film Trail) starts in Wicklow Town. Look for the Railway Bar in Rathdrum and backdrops filmed in Glencree, Lough Dan, Greenane, Glenmalure and Aghavannagh.

Then pass through the Vale of Avoca and stop for a pint in one of the many small, colorful pubs in Avoca, on the Avonmore River, which was known as Ballykissangel from 1995 to 2000 (when the show was filming).

For more details about travel in County Wicklow, go to the Wicklow Web site at www.wicklow.ie, call Tourism Ireland in New York at 800-223-6470 or go to www.tourismireland.com

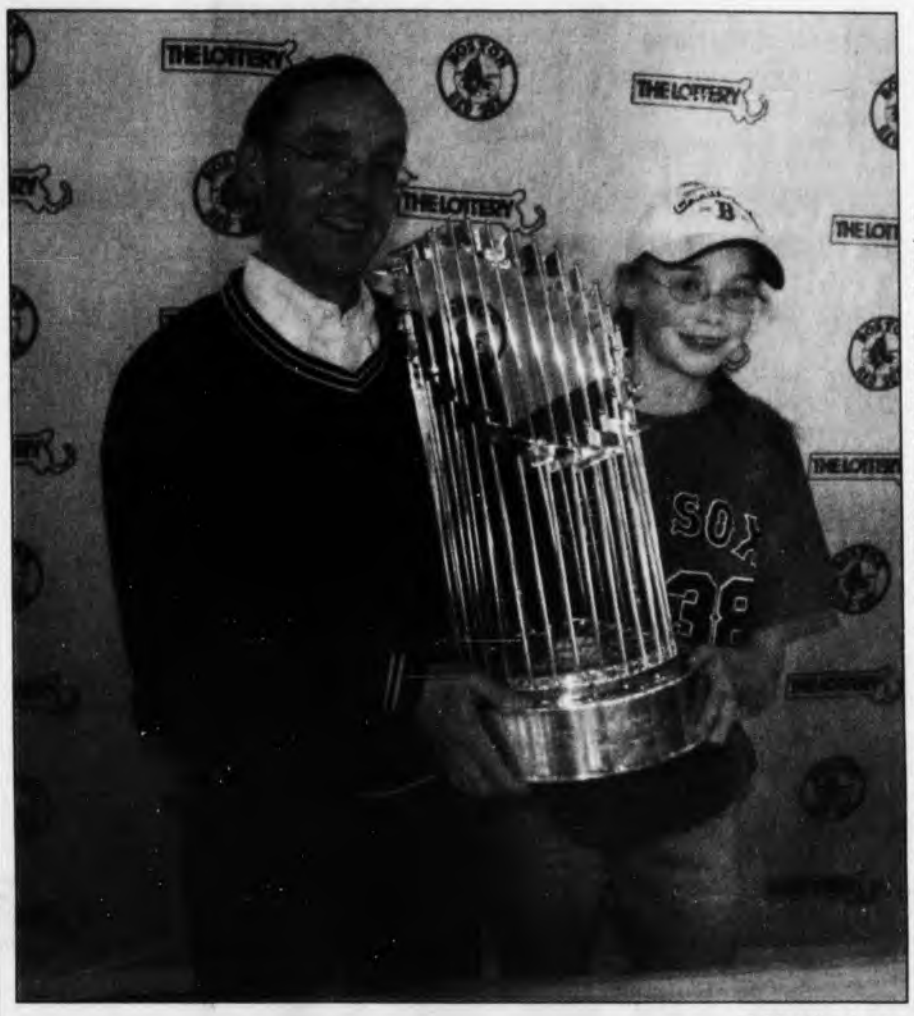
Sewer hookup hybrid floated for Cook site

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One year ago, selectmen voted unanimously for Northland Residential Company to work with the town to build senior housing on the Cook Estate. Today, without a viable wastewater disposal option for the site, shovels have yet to pierce the ground at "The Villages at Deer Hill." But that doesn't mean anyone is giving up.

"We feel this can be done in such a way that there will be no impact on the existing sewer capacity in the town."
— Northland Residential Company letter

In a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Jack Dawley, vice president and director of acquisitions for Northland and Peter Crabtree, acquisition manager for Northland, outlined a new hybrid wastewater solution for the site.



Current plans include building 95 units of affordable and market-rate housing on the Sohier Street site. The new proposal would dispose of wastewater from the market-rate townhouses on-site and wastewater from the affordable apartments through a town sewer connection.

"We feel this can be done in such a way that there will be no impact on the existing sewer capacity in the town while at the same time generating substantial fees (both from up-front payments and ongoing revenue) for the sewer commission to use for other sewer projects that have been earmarked, but are not sufficiently funded," the letter states.

Northland submitted a Request for Proposals that called for the development of 60 market rate "for sale" townhouses and 35 rental apartments (30 affordable and 5 market rate). The 95 total units will produce 14,250 gallons per day (gpd) of wastewater. Northland says soil tests have shown the site can handle approximately 9,000 gpd in a conventional Title 5 soil absorption system. That means the site would be able to Selectman Rob Spofford and his daughter, Virginia, 15, hold up the World Series Championship Trophy which made a stop at the middle-high school Sunday.

Fans line up for local stop

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It was about 40 minutes late but none of the roughly 400 people waiting in line at the middle-high school seemed to mind.

"It only took 86 years, so I figured I might as well come," said Cohasset's Mary Hartwell, who has been a Red Sox fan since she was 7 years old.

Numbers were handed out as people arrived Sunday afternoon for an up-close and personal encounter with the World Series Championship Trophy, which is now in possession of the Red Sox.

Young, old and in-between – families, groups of friends and individuals – many clad in Red Sox baseball hats and shirts, came from near and in some instances far, to pause with the trophy and snap a photo or two. They were paraded into the gym where the trophy was on display in groups of 10.

The last time the Red Sox won the World Series was in 1918, many decades before most of those in line were born.

John Dunbar, 40, of Weymouth, said the crowds were so big in Weymouth the

What a knockout!

Rocky is top dog for role in 'Annie'

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Judging from his size, Rocky looks like the underdog but in reality the shaggy canine is anything but.

His tail wagging all the time, the 20-pound bundle of energy went through all the motions Sunday to nail one of the leading roles in the Cohasset Dramatic Club production, "Annie."

Rocky will play "Sandy," the stray "mutt" that Annie befriends in the Broadway musical, which will be staged May 6-22 at Cohasset Town Hall.

Coady Egan, 11, of Scituate, says even though her dog, a bichon frise shih tzu mix, has never acted before, he'll do fine. She's been attending dog obedience classes with Rocky through the 4-H Club in Kingston.

"We thought he might be able to handle this," explains Coady's mother, Susan Egan. She spotted a notice about the tryouts in that morning in the Sunday Globe and they brought Rocky to the auditorium at Cohasset Town Hall.

Rocky beat the equally enthusiastic Muffin, a five-year-old cocker-poo (cocker spaniel-poodle mix), and Fripp, a spirited 14-month-old golden retriever, for the part. A fourth hopeful, Barley, a stunningly handsome 1-1/2-year-old Wheaton terrier, arrived a little late after Rocky had already been cast.

Jessica McDonald, director, says it's not the first time a dog has been cast in a CDC production.

"Last year in the 'Wizard of Oz,' Toto kept running away – finally we carried him around with us," McDonald recalls. "But that is part of the charm of community theatre.

"You don't know what to expect, especially with an animal."

CDC, which was founded in 1921 and is one of the oldest drama clubs in the country, stages three shows a year. Last summer, it also took over the Children's Drama Workshop in Cohasset – a kids theatre day camp that culminates in a performance.

"Annie," which is an outgrowth of the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," features 11-year-old Annie who meets Sandy after she runs away from the New York City Municipal Orphanage.

CDC auditions for a range of roles drew 104 girls; there were

Selectmen not sold on override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although selectmen have not voted on a budget recommendation — if recent discussion is a gauge, they won't be voting to support an override.

As it stands now, the school committee's proposed budget is $600,000 more than the number the town says it can afford without seeking a Prop. 2-1/2 override this spring.

"I think people are going to flip," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer if they are asked to support a $600,000 school override. "It's totally unrealistic to go for this budget. It's too much money."

Selectmen say the proposed town or "municipal" side of the budget has already been scaled back and is within Prop. 2-1/2 limits.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she believes there needs to be a town-wide approach in budgeting and if there is going to be cutting back of services, the budget should reflect that on all fronts.

Selectman Rob Spofford said, "What I think you mean is, the municipal side is going backwards."

He said that is not the case with the schools which are adding positions and programs. The town is not filling one fire department position, one police

Babysitting service at Town Meeting

A number of high school students participating in Jack Buckley's community service class could be offering babysitting services during the April 2 Town Meeting.

Buckley said by getting the word out about the program, his students hope to be able to gather a list of parents who would be interested in utilizing the service.

He said the students need to figure out how many children they will be able to accommodate and establish protocols for medical emergencies. The school nurse will help with the training, Buckley said.

There will be a sign-up sheet posted on the Town Hall bulletin board, and notices will be sent home with Osgood and Deer Hill students. For more information, please contact the students at:

CHS_babysitting@hotmail.com.

Selectmen aren't sold on school override position, one DPW position, and one clerical position at Town Hall, and the position of Town Planner has been cut back to one day per week.

But Town Manager Bill Griffin pointed out there are 11 paraprofessional positions being cut from the school budget as well as one clerical position to help make ends meet. Nine of the eleven paraprofessional positions which have been cut are already in effect, as the funds were needed to help cover fiscal year 2005 shortfalls. At the beginning of budget season, there was roughly a $500,000 shortfall from either items that were underbudgeted or simply not budgeted at all.

Those paraprofessional positions will not be added back in for FY06, which begins July 1. The additional three positions are being cut from the FY06 budget as a way of helping bring down what began as a roughly $800,000 difference between what the town had allocated for the schools and what the school department said it could work with.

In addition, $40,000 has been cut in supplies and materials. The school department hopes the Cohasset Education Foundation can raise those funds. Also, $30,000 has been cut from the athletic budget, which the school department hopes the local boosters clubs can raise. A new high school math teaching position the school department had hoped to add to this year's budget, will be postponed for at least another year, freeing up roughly $45,000. Without the teaching position being added, $6,000 in new math textbooks will not be necessary.

There has also been $40,000 cut from the school's maintenance budget, bringing the total maintenance line item for the schools from $50,000 down to $10,000. There has been talk of bringing the entire maintenance budget over to the town side, except for a small amount of money which would be given a different label and set aside for supplies or other small maintenance items. The Department of Education mandates there be a certain amount of funds available in the school budget for upkeep. Griffin said he might recommend adding the $40,000 which has currently been cut from the school budget, to the override because the town has made a commitment to maintaining its buildings.

The schools are proposing to add a grade one teacher at a salary of roughly $45,000. In addition, one grade two and one grade three teacher which were both cut last year and funded by a private fund-raising group were restored to the budget. Those two positions will add roughly $90,000 to the bottom line. In addition, the high school will add a new English/social studies teacher, also at $45,000.

At the middle school, the guidance/adjustment counselor position will become a full-time position, adding another $45,000 to that line item. The position of middle school administrator will increase from half to full-time for an additional $40,000. There will also be an upgrade of the confidential administrative assistant position to full-time business manager for an additional $35,000.

McMorris reiterated she thinks the budget should be looked at on a more universal level, with all parties striving to meet the same goal. However, Spofford said the school committee, "says its budget is done," and it has already sent a letter to selectmen asking the override question be included on the ballot. Only the Board of Selectmen can vote to put an override question on the election ballot.

Dormitzer said in his opinion, this year, with the current financial situation of the town, there should be no new programs. "This is the year to bite the bullet," he said.

Spofford said he would suggest the board ask the school committee to make some reductions "This is not the year to be adding anything new," he said. Spofford added the school committee was asked at the last joint meeting of the two boards to provide an accurate picture of the scenario the schools will face if the override fails and it has to reduce its budget by $600,000.

Selectman Fred Koed said the school committee could say it has presented a final budget and cannot live with anything lower. "They're going to be looking at us (town) to take out more. I don't see how we can go back in and take things out," he said.

Spofford said selectmen have the option of offering an amended budget which could encompass both the town and schools, and reflect what they think the entire town can afford.

"If they (schools) aren't willing (to reduce), we could present a budget we think is good as a whole," he said.

The Warrant has already gone to the printer without the budget having a formal recommendation from the Board of Selectmen. The board will take a vote within the next two weeks. If it is found an override is the only option, a special election will be held at some point after the regular town election, which is scheduled for April 9. Holding a special election could cost the town between $3,000 and $5,000.

Fiscal year 2005 shortfall

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said after speaking with Supt. Denise Walsh last week, it is his understanding the schools are currently projecting a $200,000 shortfall for fiscal year 2005, when ends June 30.

The schools have already paid $48,000 in separation costs for three former employees, none of which were budgeted, he said. Upon their departures, former Supt. Edward Malvey, former Business Manager Ivan Klimko, and former high school principal Michael Jones received payment for accrued vacation. Malvey also received longevity pay even though he was only with the school system for six years.

According to the teachers' contract — which does not include administrators — after 15 years, a teacher has the option of receiving a $3,000 longevity bonus for each of the last three years they have worked in the system, or a lump sum of $9,000. Malvey, who worked in Cohasset for roughly 6 years, was paid $27,588 upon his departure, which according to town records includes one check for $18,588 that would be roughly seven weeks' pay, as well as an additional $9,000.

Klimko, who had worked for Malvey since 2001, received $10,791 when he left, which is a little more than six weeks' pay. Klimko's position was cut in half due to budget constraints, and Karen Park was hired to take his place. In addition, Michael Jones, who had worked in Cohasset since 2000, was given $9,438 when he left Cohasset to become principal of Lexington High School, which is the equivalent of a little more than four weeks' pay.

During calendar year 2003, Malvey received $134,872 in salary and wages, as was the highest paid employee of the town. Jones and Klimko made $101,196 and $93,724, respectively.

Buckley has recommended adding $100,000 to the school department budget to cover the separation costs from FY05 as well as roughly $35,000 in unbudgeted tuition reimbursement for teachers. He has also recommended adding an additional $100,000 to be added to the Reserve Fund, which will be used for covering any other unanticipated expenses that arise between now and the end of the year. There is already $93,000 for future gas bills and $65,000 for unemployment costs set aside in the Reserve Fund, and the School Committee will need to request those funds as the bills come in. If Buckley's recommendation is passed, the school department will have a total of roughly $250,000 set aside in the Reserve Fund.

Override's effect on taxes

Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained with a $600,000 override, the tax levy as a whole will be 11 percent; 2 percent of which comes from "new growth" that is charged to new construction.

If the town passes the override, the average taxpayer could be facing a potential total tax increase of 9 percent. The override would account for roughly 3 percent of the total increase, and would add 30 cents to the tax rate, or roughly $201 for the owner of a $670,000 home.

Under Proposition 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year, towns are allowed to raise taxes 2-1/2 percent, which will be on top of the 3 percent for the override.

In addition, towns are allowed to exclude debt for one year for voter approved projects, and this year there will be a 3-1/2 percent increase for debt service for the high school and Deer Hill renovation projects, which was approved in April of 2000.

Whatever the outcome of the override, there will be a 1-1/2 percent surcharge on the tax bills which go toward the Community Preservation Fund, as well as a potential increase in water rates, if an article proposing the rate increases is approved at

Buffer zones for vernal pools liked

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although vernal pools are protected by the Wetlands Protection Act, members of the Conservation Commission are looking to solidify their protection even more through a bylaw change which would increase the distance of surrounding buffer zones to 100 feet.

"They are of undisputed importance to the environment."
— Debbie Cook, conservation commission

The existing Conservation Commission regulations give the board jurisdiction over 100 feet surrounding a vernal pool, but the town's bylaws only give jurisdiction to 25 feet. The Commission would like to see the bylaw changed to 100 feet to have consistency between the two.

"You can currently do anything you want up to 25 feet," said Conservation Commission member Veneta Roebuck, who presented a Town Meeting article to the Board of Selectmen which would increase the buffer zone.

According to the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife's Web site, vernal pools, which are also known as ephemeral pools, autumnal pools, and temporary woodland ponds, are best known for the amphibians and invertebrate animals that use them to breed. They typically fill with water in the autumn or winter due to rising groundwater and rainfall, and remain as a small pond, although usually frozen, until the spring. Vernal pools dry up almost completely by the middle or end of summer, which means they cannot sustain fish.

"They are of undisputed importance to the environment," said Conservation Commission Chairman Debbie Cook, when she presented the article to the Advisory Committee Feb. 17, adding while vernal pools are sometimes hard to recognize, they adhere to very specific criteria. They provide a breeding ground for creatures that typically need water for only a portion of their life cycle, such as certain species of salamanders and frogs.

After mating season, Cook said there is a time when the creatures venture out into the world, and they tend to come out all at once, which is why it is so important to have a strict buffer zone. "I guess it's quite a sight," she said.

At the March 8 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Selectman Rob Spofford said he was concerned increasing the buffer zone to 100 feet is too much. He said 100 feet is a significant distance, and if this bylaw had been in effect when the new Osgood School was being built, he said the school might not have been built at all, as there is a vernal pool located in that area.

Spofford asked whether new construction can cause the formation of vernal pools, as runoff flows in a different direction when a new building is added to the landscape. If a new vernal pool is created after a house is built, it could affect what a property owner is allowed to do on the site moving forward. "We're making it more restrictive," he said.

However, Roebuck said vernal pools are not found in people's lawns and are usually located near wetlands, which are protected by their own set of buffer regulations. In addition, because of the strict criteria vernal pools must adhere to, she said the town has most likely found all the vernal pools it has. Roebuck said currently, Cohasset has 14 certified vernal pools, 11 of which are in the Greenbush rail bed. When a vernal pool has been certified, it automatically receives any protection given under the Wetlands Protection Act.

Cook sewer proposal raises many questions

Town Counsel reportedly has some concerns

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"It's opening up a whole can of worms."
— Ray Kasperowicz, sewer commission

The proposal put forth by Northland Residential has spurred many questions, some of which Sewer Commissioner Ray Kasperowicz has run by Town Counsel Paul DeRensis.

At the Wednesday meeting of the Cook working group, Kasperowicz said he received an answer from DeRensis "on the fly," and has nothing in writing, but he would do his best to explain to the best of his knowledge where Town Counsel thinks the proposal stands.

Kasperowicz said from what he understands, DeRensis "doesn't see it as something that would work." He said DeRensis mentioned problems with due process, equal protection, and it also has an aspect of discrimination, which Kasperowicz said he would assume is due to only half of the units being given a connection. He said with two separate sewer systems on one parcel of land, DeRensis didn't think it was a practical solution.

However, Selectman Ronnie McMorris said because DeRensis is representing the sewer commission in its law suit with Avalon, she said it is unclear whether he is working in the best interest of the town, or the sewer commission, which is why she has recommended in the past that separate counsel be retained to deal with any matters pertaining to sewering the Cook Estate.

Kasperowicz said he understands the conflict, but added he thinks DeRensis' comments have merit. "If we only sewer 30, there are some that aren't going to be sewered," he said, adding there will be a pipe running on the property past the other units, yet they will not be able to connect. By law, if a pipe runs past a home, the property should have access to the line, which could cause problems. "It's opening up a whole can of worms," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin then pointed out, whatever Town Counsel recommends or any other counsel, the ultimate decision is up to the sewer commission.

McMorris said currently the town has a number of options, and she said they all depend on whether the sewer commission is willing to entertain them. She said three options have come up so far. She said the latest Northland proposal is a great option, and so was the proposal for the site to discharge clean water into the municipal system, which was rejected by the sewer commission, and she said she can't understand why. She said working out an agreement with Hull for municipal sewer from that town is also a solution that's out there, but it is just a matter of getting the sewer commission to come on board with the idea.

"You're a good marketer and you're ably trying to put me in the corner," said Kasperowicz, who said he would try to explain why those decisions were made, but his argument has been heard many times before. He explained discharging clean water may solve some problems at the plant, but can cause others if there is too much flow coming in for it to handle. He added, when making any decisions, the sewer commission's main objective is to satisfy the needs of existing homes, especially those that abut waterways.

Kasperowicz said with the decisions the town needs to make, he thinks it might be better to put them on a Town Meeting Warrant and have the town decide what it would like to see done. He said Hull is a limited resource and if Cohasset is able to secure any capacity, it will have to make the decision as to how best to dole it out, and that is not an issue he feels the sewer commission or any other board alone should make. Kasperowicz said bringing three housing projects to town all at once will change the town dramatically, and decisions should not be made lightly.

McMorris suggested the working group set up a time to meet with the Hull Sewer Commission. However, Griffin said he has not been authorized by the Board of Selectmen to do so, and that is not the charge of the working group. However, Griffin said if the group wants to have a "fact-finding" session, that would most likely be fine, to see what options might be available for the town, without negotiating. McMorris said she would bring that up with the board Tuesday. Because Kasperowicz, an accountant, audits the town of Hull, he said he would not be participating, but he would send questions along for other members to ask for him.

Another issue Griffin said needs to be addressed is if plans change for the site, the Request for Proposals may need to be sent back out again in light of procurement laws. However, he said if the town land is not going to be used as part of a solution for the site, the town is out of the deal. If

Students give aid to tsunami victims

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

During the month of February, Cohasset Middle-High School students participated in several activities to raise money for the victims of those affected by the Indian Ocean tsunami. On Dec. 26, 2004, an earthquake erupted under the Indian Ocean just off the coast of Sumatra, causing deadly waves to crash onto the shores of 12 countries in Southeast Asia.

In the middle school, students sold kindness "Lolligrams." In the high school, Student Council members collected money on "Have a Heart Day," and Ali Boehmke collected money in the middle and high school offices, the cafeteria, and from several generous merchants downtown. In all, the students collected $830 which will be donated to Save the Children.

Students at Deer Hill have also been coordinating fundraising efforts to help aid tsunami victims. Members of the Student Council organized and implemented a work-a-thon and bake sale. Student Council President Carly Oddleifson and Vice-President Tucker Oddleifson coordinated the events.

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley said it was Tucker's idea to coordinate the work-a-thon, which asked students to complete various chores at home to earn money, which they then donated toward the tsunami fundraising efforts. During the bake sale, which was a school-wide effort, five parents from each room baked an item that was put up for sale. Gauley said the grand total from the combined fundraising efforts was more than $1,850, which will be donated to the American Red Cross.

"This was especially inspiring given the fact that so much of the work was done by the Student Council, that the idea came from a student, and that the kids raised so much money," said Gauley. He added two students earned more than $150 from shoveling snow.

the town land remains in the equation, but the project is reduced in size by as much as one-third, the project will be different enough that it will trigger the need for a new bid process.

Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee said in the interest of ensuring all options are explored, she would like any other suggestions to be put on the table for discussion. She said there has been talk about Donald Staszko possibly having an offer for the town, and Griffin said he would try to schedule a time for Staszko to meet with the group. Town Counsel will also be scheduled to attend upcoming meetings slated for either Tuesday or Thursday. Members of the working group will also attend the March 28 sewer commission meeting.

Although McMorris said the town is committed to making the project work as originally proposed, with 95 units, the committee is willing to discuss any other possible options for the site. Anyone with proposals is encouraged to contact Town Manager Bill Griffin at the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Red Sox trophy day a success

Selectman Rob Spofford said last Sunday's World Series trophy display event went off without a hitch, and he was very pleased with the outcome of the day's events. "It was a great day to have everyone to town," he said.

Spofford thanked Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley for their efforts in coordinating the event, as well as Facilities Manager Brian Adams, Police Chief James Hussey, Sgt. Shelley Peters, as well as new police officers Edward Bagley and Patrick Kenney, and Supt. Denise Walsh for opening the building for the occasion.

Spofford said in all, roughly 130 families were given numbers in line, which leads him to estimate there could have been between 300 and 400 people in attendance.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she thought the day was "great fun," and joked she was glad she and Spofford got a chance to actually hold the trophy, "Once we could get Chief Hussey to get his hands off it."

Spofford echoed McMorris' sentiments and quipped, "It was great to participate in something apolitical...unless you're a Yankees fan."

Harvard Din and Tonics add a twist to ASP festival

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Singing has brought members of the Harvard Din and Tonics to every corner of the globe. With their crisp white ties and tuxedo tails and a smooth a cappella sound, they are both pleasing to the eye and the ear no matter where they travel.

But Sunday March 19, Cohasset residents will get a taste of the Dins, when they perform at the fifth annual Appalachia Service Project Festival at Cohasset High School beginning at 7:30 p.m. Among those on stage will be Cohaset resident David Ingber, who is currently in his sophomore year at Harvard.

"I am looking forward to performing in Cohasset in a big way," said Ingber, a 2003 graduate of Cohasset High School. He said it will be great to meet up with old teachers and friends, "and it's such a great cause," which makes the event twice as nice.

Each year since 1988 a group of teens and adults from Cohasset has taken a one-week trip to some of the poorest areas of the country, volunteering their time to make badly needed home repairs. This year, ASP will take volunteers to various counties in West Virginia and Kentucky. The ASP Festival helps raise the funds necessary to make the trip possible.

Ingber said he began singing with the Dins as a first-year student, and was fortunate to be chosen as one of 14 members of the group. "The audition process is very rigorous," he said, but as someone who had been a member of the all-state choir, he was no stranger to performing. Those trying out must perform a solo, followed by three consecutive nights of callbacks. He said it is essential for members of the group to be able to blend well with the others and learn quickly.

Being a Din has provided Ingber with many opportunities. He has performed at a variety of different functions, from corporate events, to performing in large concert halls, to smaller events like the ASP Festival. "We travel to New York several times a semester," he said, adding he recently traveled to Vail, Colorado, where he skied during the day and sang at night.

Ingber has performed in different countries as well. This summer, the group went on a world tour for 11 weeks, visiting 22 countries and 30 cities. "We were performing pretty much every night," he said. The Dins visited Norway, Belgium, France, Switzerland, the Czech Republic, China, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, and Australia, to name a few.

Although the Dins have traveled across the globe, there are some experiences which have been just as memorable here at home. In fact, last week, the Dins were asked to perform for Sharon Stone as she came off a plane at Logan International Airport.

Stone was in town to receive the Harvard Foundation's 2005 Humanitarian Award in recognition of her decade-long work to combat AIDS. When she landed in Boston, there were the Dins, snapping and humming a base line, waiting for her to be close enough to hear them sing their signature tune, "Sha Boom."

However, as the group was about to start, they realized Stone was talking on her cell phone and was not paying attention, which caused a few more minutes of vamping before she was close enough to realize what was going on.

Although Ingber thoroughly enjoys the time he spends singing with the Dins, he said this will be his last year performing. "I've put in two fantastic years," he said, but he doesn't want to limit himself in terms of the opportunities he is able to have during his college years. Ingber is majoring in English literature.

But once you're a Din, you're always a Din, and Ingber said those who have graduated know at any point, sitting in the crowd, they might be called up on stage to sing "Sha Boom" at a moment's notice. But before he turns in his tails for good, Ingber said he will take advantage of every opportunity that comes his way, including singing in Bermuda during spring break. He said he will never forget the experiences he has had and will always be grateful for the opportunity it presented. "I got to travel the world because I can sing," he said.

Admission to the festival is $10. Tickets can be purchased at All the Best Natural Foods, located in James Brook Crossing on Pleasant Street.

Saturday's entertainment

In addition to the Din and Tonics, there will be many other entertaining musical acts, including:

- The Brown Sisters
- CHS Jazz Band
- Caitlin O'Connell
- Ali Ritts and Dan Sylvia
- Janet Hoyler and Scott Taylor
- Anne Chapman and Gary Ritts
- Katie and John Campbell

Sox trophy hits a homerun

day before that he and his group that included his son Jack, 14, came to Cohasset. They were number 32 in line but had hoped to be number one.

"I'm going to enjoy this season being able to say 'we're the defending champs.'"

— Jamie Hogan, Cohasset

"We arrived first but we went to the wrong door," said Dunbar, who was babysitting his nephew Ryan Flaherty, 21, of Pembroke, back in 1986 the last time the Red Sox were in the World Series.

"Seeing them win the World Series was more than a dream come true," he said.

Jamie Hogan, 30, now of Cohasset, who was part of the same group, said 1986 was one thing, but 2004 was entirely another. "I'm going to enjoy this season being able to say 'we're the defending champs,'" he said.

Hogan added, "No one ever came back from 3-0" about the American League Championship Series with the Yankees. "It was Shakespearean," Flaherty pointed out.

The trophy has been making the rounds around Massachusetts cities and towns thanks to a partnership between the Red Sox and the Massachusetts State Lottery, which is sponsoring the World Series Trophy Tour.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, has been on hand during each event in the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset. "This trophy is like a celebrity," he said. "Even though everyone has to stand in line for a long time – everyone says it's worth the wait."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, brought along daughters Emma, 3, and Amanda, 5, who are too young to appreciate the finer points of baseball. They both said their favorite part of Red Sox games was the cotton candy.

Peggy Litchfield of Cohasset said she had a confession to make. "I have to fess up I didn't become a Red Sox fan until they were winning, then I really got into them." Litchfield planned to get some photos for her son, Jaime, who just finished 11 weeks of boot camp at Parris Island, N.C.

Jake Watts, 16, of Cohasset said he's been waiting – you guessed it, for 16 years for this chance. "It's exciting and definitely worth it," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin played baseball at Providence College and is a huge Sox fan. "This is wonderful, I never thought I'd see it," he said.

Derick Danielson, 10, of Scituate, was also excited. His grandfather, Leo Fiori of Cohasset, may be the biggest Sox fan of all. Fiori's license plate says "Sox 1-4-3."

Trophy highlights:

- Official name is "The Commissioner's Trophy"
- Designed by Tiffany & Co. in 2000
- Standing 24 ins. tall and weighting 35 lbs., the trophy features 30 pennants, one for every team in Major League Baseball.
- The pennants encircle a convex base etched with latitude and longitude lines symbolizing the globe and adorned with 24-karat gold vermeil stitches.

STAFF PHOTO/BERT LANE

Vincent Kennedy tries to pick up the World Series Trophy, while his brother, Ian, waits his turn. Roughly 400 people stood in line to see the trophy at the middle-high school Sunday.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh was sporting a pink Yankees cap! "In the spirit of full disclosure I'm a lifelong Yankees fan," she said, explaining her father was a Boston Braves fan. "That does not mean I didn't appreciate the Red Sox win," she said. "The Yankees didn't play the way they should have, they didn't deserve it."

Terence Faherty of Cohasset was waiting in line with his son Terence "T-Bone" 3, and daughters, Meghan, 7, and Betsy, 6.

Faherty, who grew up in Randolph, said he was a lifelong Red Sox fan. "They're going to go back-to-back just like the Patriots," he said.

The Fahertys had "number 86" in line. When told that might be good luck, Faherty wasn't so sure.

It took 86 years to win, he said, adding the Sox also lost to the N.Y. Mets in 1986 in the seventh game of the World Series.

Rocky is top dog for role in 'Annie'

27 call backs, McDonald explains. "We chose 12 orphans and two Annies," she says. The show will have a double cast meaning the casts alternate performances.

Area residents can get a preview of "Annie" Sunday in Scituate. Cast members have a float and will be singing and handing out flyers during Scituate's St. Patrick's Day Parade that gets underway at 1 p.m.

Cohasset's Betsy Crawford, 13, a seventh-grader at the middle-high school, and Whitney Jaffe, 11, a fifth-grader at Deer Hill, will share the role of Annie. Both girls worked with the dogs during Sunday's auditions.

Also on hand was Judy St. Peter of Cohasset, who ran the budding canine actors through a series of steps. (St. Peter's daughter, Dayna, 10, a fourth-grader at Deer Hill, plays one of the orphans in the show.)

With three dogs of her own, St. Peter is a good judge of canine behavior. She and her border collie Zinger have worked with the town of Cohasset to chase Canada geese — whose droppings can pollute parks and waterways — off playing fields and away from Lily Pond.

St. Peter watched to see how the dogs connected with the girls. She also showed the girls how to use a yummy dog treat as a motivator. Watching Rocky, she could see he was very social but not too easily distracted.

Producer Jean DiGiacomandrea said she was pleased with the choice. She explained Fripp was a little too big and too young, and Muffin was too well groomed. Rocky has the just the right scruffy look needed for the part, she said.

Coady thought Rocky might have the edge.

"Rocky likes everybody," says Coady. "And he's even good with hamsters!" (The Egans were babysitting a hamster at their Jay Street in Scituate home last weekend.) Coady knows the musical well. She played Annie in a Scituate Recreation Department performance

The curtain rises for CDC's "Annie" at 7:30 p.m., May 6 & 7, 13 & 14, 20 & 21 and at 2 p.m., May 8, 15, & 22 at Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are $12 at the door and at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset and Front Street Books, Scituate Harbor, or by calling 617-697-2115.

Public hearing March 21 on proposed water rate hike

The Water Commission is holding a public hearing on its proposed water rate increase and new appropriation. The hearing will be held at 7:30p.m., Monday, March 21, at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, 339 King St.

"In Article 18, to be considered at the April 2 Annual Town Meeting, we propose to increase water rates and a new $4 million appropriation for needed Water Department improvement projects," said John McNabb, chairman of the water commission. "Water rates have not been raised for eight years, since 1997. This rate increase is needed to allow the water commission to continue its ongoing system improvements program to improve drinking water quality."

"This new appropriation of $4 million is needed this year to improve drinking water quality and to complete the system improvements needed to comply with the TTHM regulation," said McNabb. "Annual operating costs have increased about $150,000/year, because of additional personnel and increased chemical use which is needed to provide better quality drinking water. The sale of water to Linden Ponds in Hingham does not eliminate the need for a rate increase, but reduces the amount of the water rate increase that is needed."

"Most of the rate increase will by paid by the heaviest users – increasing from $5.52 to $7.38 per 100 cubic feet for water usage in excess of 2,000 cubic feet (15,000 gallons) per quarter." said Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer. "For the majority of customers who use less than 2,000 cubic feet per quarter, the additional cost will be less than 18 cents per day."

"We also propose to appropriate $4 million for needed projects to improve drinking water quality, lower TTHM levels, improve taste and odor, and improve water service," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt. "These projects are:

- Construction and activation of second well to replace Sohier Street wells
- Ellms Meadow Wellfield Pumphouse construction to reactivate wells
- Acquire 67 acres with $454,300 state grant (50 percent of cost) and legal costs
- Replace filter media and repair underdrains of filter beds
- Upgrades to plant automation and SCADA automation software
- Installation of radio reads for water meters to improve meter reading
- Prepare plans and specifications for major retrofits to Plant needed by 2007
- Equipment upgrades & personnel costs to go to 24 hour operations
- Water sampling to monitor TTHM levels throughout distribution system
- Inventory and replacement of valves and gates in distribution system
- Develop and implement Lily Pond Management Plan; improve Pond water quality
- Aaron River Reservoir Study; assess to see if improvements needed

Creative solutions

Cohasset is blessed with plenty of brainpower. That, coupled with so much of the population wanting to preserve the character of the town, should be an unbeatable combination.

But from where we sit, many people seem to be working at cross purposes. The good news is we believe most have the same goals at heart even though, at times, they are at each other's throats.

We all want the best for Cohasset.

What does that mean? Great schools; excellent town services; preservation of the town's unique character through controlled growth; municipal sewer connections; affordability for our seniors and young families, and so on.

Can we have it all? Under Prop. 2-1/2 – which we believe is a good law by keeping property taxes under some restraints – something has got to give on the revenue side.

It is apparent that Cedaremere is moving ahead whether or not it is able to connect to the town sewer.

The Cook Estate project needs a sewer connection for at least part of the project because the on-site conditions can't handle more than 60 units.

Both Cedarmere and Cook will provide much needed, age-restricted housing for "seniors" 55-plus.

Maybe it's time to consider allowing both projects to hookup to the municipal sewer system which would generate considerable money for the town – amounting to several million dollars (an estimated $1.4 million for the Cook Estate alone).

Cedarmere even offered to pay to upgrade the plant to incorporate the Little Harbor area, alleviating the town of that burden. (We're not advocating new projects take sewer capacity away from Little Harbor). Both Cedarmere and Cook have also offered to solve the "I & I" (leakage) problem that would provide more plant capacity.

Would those hookups also open the door for Avalon? Perhaps. But, we need to face the possibility that Avalon, Cedaremere and Cook could all move forward in any case.

We agree that hundreds of housing units coming to town practically in one fell swoop is too much. But Cohasset isn't alone in facing these kinds of pressures. Hingham's Linden Ponds senior housing project is going to add upwards of 2,000 units over its eight-year buildout. That coupled with the Shipyard project and several others translate into Hingham's population growing by about 20 percent over the next five years or so.

In addition to death and taxes, the other sure thing in life is change – so the only question is how do we handle or cope with change? Cohasset, once a summer colony, has undergone a lot of changes over the years. Anyone over the age of 50, who grew up in town, knows that.

Maybe Cohasset needs to look at the "upside" of at least, Cook and Cedarmere, which could translate into going a long way toward solving a housing shortage and gaining some desperately needed cash (so the yearly override scenario can take a breather).

The flip side is the continuing gut-wrenching budgetary experience in town which is not for the faint of heart. Simply put, the town "as a whole" needs more money than it can generate from current property taxes alone.

Cohasset has someone knocking at the door, with attractive, well planned developments that can add to the bottom line. The town may have to realize, it's no longer in a position to slam the door in their face.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Apologizes for budget remarks

DEAR CHIEF LINCOLN,

School Committee member Rick Flynn sent his letter to Fire Chief Roger Lincoln with a copy of the Mariner for publication.

I would like to apologize to you and all the members of your department for a recent comment I made regarding your department's budget. In the context of a discussion concerning the 2006 town budget, and a possible reallocation of resources, I stated, according to the Mariner, that " Cohasset is one of the smallest towns with one of the biggest and most highly paid fire departments".

As soon as these words passed my lips, I knew I had misspoke. The reason for my comment had everything to do with trying to discuss and resolve ongoing budget and revenue issues challenging Cohasset and not to put negative attention on the Fire Department budget. At the same time, I was speaking in generality without exact knowledge of what I was saying. I certainly should not have said this. My statement was not accurate.

I know that Cohasset has an excellent Fire Department with a professional and dedicated workforce that is a true asset to our town. The department is sized accordingly for a town of our size and in the difficult economic times we are in, they are not overpaid.

I hope you can forgive my comments and know that my intentions are always to try and figure out positive townwide solutions to difficult fiscal problems.

No teacher raises?

TO THE EDITOR:

I read, with interest, an article in the March 4, 2005, Mariner titled, "Override-yes, but how much remains a question."

Of particular interest to me was a statement attributed to Dr. Denise Walsh, superintendent of schools, that the teachers are not taking any salary increases this year.

Just to be clear with the members of the community and your readers, the Cohasset Teachers Association is in negotiation with the School Committee regarding a new Collective Bargaining Agreement. After several meetings, both sides have made their positions very clear on the salary issue.

To imply that the CTA has accepted the School Committee's position of no raises for next year is simply inaccurate. We will, however, continue to bargain in good faith to resolve this important matter.

Now, that's Italian!

TO THE EDITOR:

I enjoyed the pizza article in your March 4 issue, but I was sort of surprised at the sidebar regarding what makes a good pizza. Not to sound thin skinned (an attribute in a pizza, but not in a person), but couldn't you find at least one Italian to throw in his two cents worth? So, to add balance to the paper I would like to give you my recipe for pizza.

I'm partial to Victoria's crust, so I buy my dough there. I use Pastene California pizza sauce, which is what Pizzeria Regina uses (Pastene is locally owned and is very good).

After spreading the sauce on the dough I cover it with raw spinach, a few julienne cut carrots and some raisins (seriously). Cover with cheese, I prefer a mix of mozzarella, provolone, and asiago. A few slices of pepperoni, onion (red, yellow ones are for wimps), and mushrooms on top of that. Chop up a whole bunch of garlic (keeps the werewolf away too), toss a couple artichoke hearts or asparagus rolled in prosciutto on top of it all. Sprinkle some parmesan on top and bake it 'til it's done.

Sometimes if you want it done right, you've got to do it yourself.

Don't blame schools for high tax bills

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

A sidebar article in last week's Mariner (Town Picks Up Some School Costs) which stated that the schools account for "60 percent of the overall town budget" is another example of the pitfalls of trying to reduce the complexities of school and municipal financing into simple terms, whether by means of two-paragraph articles in the Mariner or lengthy letters from citizens (including mine).

The article listed five items which, the article asserted, "the town covers" for the schools.

The largest of those items was "$3,148,730 for debt service" for the new schools. However, "the town," i.e., the taxpayers of Cohasset through their real estate taxes, only "covers" 40percent of those costs – the state reimburses us (or soon will be) 60percent of the costs of the new schools. The new schools are largely the direct burden of the state, not the taxpayers of Cohasset.

Another item listed in the article was "$102,514 for administration allocated per DOE guidelines." However, this line item, as I understand it, does not represent actual dollars expended by the town for "administration." Rather, this line item is a book-keeping entry required by the state which does not correlate to an actual expense incurred by the town. (The $102,514 figure for Cohasset is derived from a DOE formula which directs school districts to multiply $70 by the number of students in the district, an artificially-contrived number which in our case does not translate into actual dollars expended by the town's taxpayers.)

A third item listed "$208,028 under public works." A big chunk of this includes the salary for the new maintenance supervisor, whose position was expressly created last year at Town Meeting. He will supervise both school and other town-owned buildings. Do the schools account for a good deal of this expense? Obviously, but it is an expense which also benefits the rest of the town's buildings as well.

The other two items in the article were "$524,605 for retired teacher insurance and special education assessment" (of which the vast majority is for the former) and "$1,463,125 for benefits and insurance for school employees." These items clearly fall into the category of school-related expenses. However, these are items which the "town" side of the budget has been "covering" for decades.

I mention all of this in the context of the recent letters from Mr. McElroy and Mr. Fitzsimmons who largely feel that runaway school expenses are to blame for our exploding tax bills. The central thesis of my letter-to-the-editor two weeks ago was that school expenses are not appreciably greater today than they were 20 years ago. In 1985, the school budget constituted about 50percent of the overall town budget. If you do the arithmetic and back out some of the numbers listed above, the 50percent figure is roughly the same today. (And if you do not include the 40percent cost of the new schools to the town, i.e., the fixed mortgage payment which most accountants would not consider to be an "operating expense," the ratio of the school operating budget relative to the overall town budget for 2005 is probably less than it was in 1985).

About the only assertion made by both Mr. Fitzsimmons and Mr. McElroy which unequivocally is correct is that our tax bills (though not our tax rate) rank in the top 10 in the state, truly a dubious distinction. The reasons why our tax bills have been growing faster relative to other communities' in recent years are numerous, but here are some of the major ones:

1) The local aid formula from the state has been tilted in favor of lower-income communities in recent years even more than it was before the end of the good times in 2000. In FY 2001, local aid from the state covered 11.83percent of Cohasset's operating budget. In FY 2005, local aid covered only 7.92percent of our budget. (These figures are from the introduction to the 2004 town warrant.);

2) The state aid formula for education in particular has been altered to favor poorer communities at the expense of those such as Cohasset. Essentially, our governor and legislature have left middle-class suburbs to fend for ourselves, a trend which will continue in FY 2006 according to the governor in his recent speech to the State Assoc. of School Superintendents;.

3) As we all know, Cohasset has not substantially enhanced its commercial tax base in the past 10 years compared to many other communities, where box-store malls and office building complexes have been built. The boom years of commercial construction in the 1990s bypassed us. Our reliance on homeowners to pay for municipal services has been increasing, not decreasing, relative to most other cities and towns. I am not saying that we should open up the town to this sort of development, but we should be aware that there is a price to pay for maintaining our town "as we know it" in an era of declining state aid; and

4) Although we have approved debt-exclusion overrides for new schools in recent years, so too have many other communities. But unlike most others, we also have approved overrides for sewers which uniquely have added to our tax bills.

I too, share the frustration and concern of others with regard to our upwardly-spiraling tax bills. However, to blame the children, teachers, administrators, and School Committee of Cohasset for this problem evidences a myopic attempt to find a convenient scapegoat without looking at the real reasons why we (and virtually every other city and town in the state) find ourselves facing Prop. 2-1/2overrides more often than we would like.

Andrew Quigley lives at 38 Jerusalem Road.

An official state rodent!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where State Rep. Bill Greene of Billerica wants to name the beaver the official state rodent.

If rodent means what I think it means, I don't know where to start on all this.

I thought all along that Whitey Bulger was the official state rat. But that's what happens when you listen to Howie Carr too much.

Bill would like for the beaver to become the official state rodent as soon as possible before the busy little rodent with the buck teeth and a proclivity for building dams causes a tsunami down Main Street in Billerica.

"They've exploded all over the state," he says. "They're causing a great deal of damage to many areas. (My bill) is just to get attention to the problem."

The state wildlife folks estimate that the beaver population in Massachusetts has soared from 20,000 to 70,000 in the past 10 years, which is a lot of dam —or as some people say, "damn" — builders.

It didn't take that many workmen to build the Grand Coulee Dam on the Missouri.

How long will it be before they find the headwaters of the North River around Route 53 in Pembroke an ideal place to set up shop?

One problem with beaver dams is that the ponds they create have been known to wash out roads, overflow sewer systems and flood basements and if you tear them down one day, they'll build them back up the next. Not for nothing do they say "busy as a beaver."

Another problem is that the animals themselves may just as well be protected by state law. You can't shoot 'em and you can't trap 'em, unless you use a painless box or cage.

Maybe the best way to get rid of them is to make them the official state rodent like Bill Greene says. Then you'll never hear from them again. It's like electing a vice president.

Did you know that Massachusetts has not one, not two, not three, but four official songs, not one of which, to my knowledge, has ever been sung by Bruce Springsteen or Michael Jackson in concert.

There's the official patriotic song, "Massachusetts, because of you our land is free," by Randolph's own Bernie Davidson. Let's hear a few bars. What, you don't know the words?

There's the official folk song, "Massachusetts," by Arlo Guthrie. What, you never heard of that either?

And there's the official ceremonial march, "The Road to Boston," and the official (just plain) song, "All Hail to Massachusetts." I know better than to ask you anything about them.

Whatever happens to the beaver as the official state rodent, when it come before the Great and General Court, I hope it fares better than the official state drink when it came before the Rhode Island legislature.

The contestants were coffee milk (whatever that is) and lemonade.

Everything was going smoothly until a Republican legislator began passing out samples of lemonade and a supporter of coffee milk, a Democrat, screamed foul and it became a partisan matter that wound up before the State Ethics Commission.

I never found out who won but it didn't matter.

I always consider Narragansett beer to be the official state drink of Rhode Island anyway.

Creating charming homes and villages

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

A developer was going to cut down six trees along King Street. He had already marked them with orange spray paint, chainsaw-ready. But wait, the trees are on Town property. Fortunately a King Street resident noticed the orange markings and triggered a public hearing. Ten residents attended the March 9 meeting and defended the trees, insisting the developer did not have the right to destroy trees "owned" by all Cohasset residents.

Andy Swanson, Cohasset's tree warden, had inspected the trees and found them healthy. He defended them. The trees were saved. One is an Eastern Pine about 70 feet tall, waving in the breeze, a beautiful part of that magical passageway alongside Lily Pond. What a wonderful legacy to leave our descendents!

Meanwhile, on the other side of 3A, behind Stop & Shop, is a Town-owned woodland of about 10 acres. It is an absolutely beautiful place of great biodiversity: uplands with a maturing forest and understory, wetlands, habitat for many wildlife species. Most of this beautiful place is threatened by another 'developer': the Selectmen of Cohasset. They have offered it to Northland Residential Corporation as part of the proposed Cook Estate project. However, a stay of execution is possible here too.

These were never built 95 units at a whack by a speculative developer. That process yields cookie-cutter projects without life, lacking in spirit.

On March 10 Northland commented on a reduced development that would allow entirely on-site sewage treatment: 45 market-rate units and 15 affordable units. This scheme would not require use of the 10-acre Town forest. The woodland could be defended with a conservation restriction, protecting our water supply, and leaving students of Deer Hill School and all residents the legacy of this beautiful ecosystem.

This would reopen the question of where and how to build more new affordable senior homes. If you look at the historic process that created charming homes and villages, you find a piecemeal process. In this process each new building is designed by an individual, usually with roots in the place, who really cares about the outcome. The design responds to buildings that already exist, in a way not unlike how Nature grows an organism. Visualize Italian hill towns, English or French villages, or Greek island towns. These were never built 95 units at a whack by a speculative developer. That process yields cookie-cutter projects without life, lacking in spirit.

Cohasset village was created using a piecemeal process. Someone who really cared built each building. The charm of Cohasset village is entirely due to this process. It worked great then and can work great now. If you look at Cohasset village with fresh vision, you can spot many opportunities to insert senior homes. Not units, but homes. Charming cottages owners can love. Duplexes. Little clusters. Imagination can yield endless variety. The homes can be made 'green' and sustainable, protecting Earth and anticipating the rising energy costs that have already begun.

Yes, zoning relief will be needed. But if you were a senior, which would you prefer: boring cookie-cutter projects no one can love, with soaring utility costs, or charm and authentic atmosphere powered by low-cost renewable energy?

3A widening, wetlands and critter crossings

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER AND MARK BRENNAN

As a part of the Greenbush rail project, the MBTA has agreed to widen Route 3A at Lower King Street to accommodate a left-turn lane onto King Street for the southbound traffic. (For those not familiar with the term "Lower King Street," this is the portion of King Street that runs from the intersection of Forest Avenue and North Main Street to Route 3A.)

This reconfiguration will avoid congestion on Route 3A as southbound cars make the left turn onto King Street. The widening will begin approximately at Hingham Lumber on the north. Route 3A will go back to its normal width just before Rose Hill. The total distance along Route 3A involved in this construction will be a little more than 1,300 feet, or about 4/10 mile. We have contacted all abutters and will provide their comments to the MBTA.

More little known facts — As you may know, Cohasset has the distinction of having the most wetlands adjacent to the Greenbush rail line. Thus, construction will remove some of these wetlands. For each square foot of wetlands that the MBTA removes, they have agreed to replicate two square feet of new wetlands. The reason for the 2 for 1 replication is that Mother Nature is hard to fool. Newly constructed wetlands often do not truly become wetlands but revert to their former status. So, the 2 for 1 replication offers a conservative approach that accounts for newly constructed wetlands that fail to become permanent wetlands.

Most of the wetland replication for the entire Greenbush project will be in Cohasset. They will be constructed in the land area to the south of and behind the boat storage yard on Route 3A almost up to Laugelle Lane. The MBTA has already purchased this property from several owners in anticipation of the wetland reconstruction. A key part of the wetland replication will be to populate the new wetlands with plants that are typically found in local wetlands. The construction of these new wetlands is currently scheduled to take place this coming fall.

Speaking of wetlands, most of us are familiar with the small critters, turtles, frogs, etc., that populate the wetlands. As an accommodation to the spring migration of these creatures from one side of the rail bed to the other, the MBTA has designed "critter crossings." These are small tunnels that permit the small animals to migrate from one side to the other under the tracks without harm.

After the critter migration season is over, approximately by May 1, the MBTA will begin its task of marking and clearing trees and brush along the right of way. Remember, the MBTA will mark trees that will not be removed with red and black striped ribbon. Any trees and brush between these marked trees will be removed.

Botanical survey of Gulf River Estuary

On Wednesday, March 30, the Cohasset Garden Club and the Gulf Association will jointly sponsor an open meeting to hear a report on a just-completed botanical survey of the Gulf River Estuary by scientists of the New England Wild Flower Society. The meeting will be held at St. Anthony's Parish Center in Cohasset beginning at 7 p.m. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

The featured speaker will be William E. Brumback, conservation director of the New England Wildflower Society who conducted the survey on behalf of the Gulf Association. Brumback has titled his talk, "Gulf River Estuary—The Beauty and the Beast."

On four separate days during the growing season last summer, Mr. Brumback and a colleague from the society covered the length and breadth of the estuary by canoe and on foot, including upland areas, to compile a complete inventory of all vascular plant species occurring within the survey area. The appendix to his 38-page report lists 217 species of trees, shrubs and herbacious plants growing in the area; 18 of them are identified as "invasive" and two as "likely invasive."

For more information on this meeting, contact the Cohasset Garden Club.

New wastewater proposal floated for Cook Estate

Northland has therefore proposed the potential on-site capacity be used for the 60 market-rate townhouses that it says would allow all market-rate units to be constructed without any impact on the town's sewer capacity.

However, the company says the only viable way to build the affordable rental component is to dispose of its wastewater through town sewer. If those units are created as outlined in the RFP, the wastewater flow will be 5,250 gpd. If the market-rate apartments were eliminated and only of the 30 affordable rental apartments were constructed, wastewater flow could be reduced to 4,200 gpd.

The letter also states South Shore Housing, which is partnering up with Northland on the rental portion of the project, has agreed to work with the company to help make the rental component economically viable with either 30 or 35 apartments. As a side note, the letter states if the income stream from the five market-rate units is eliminated from the rental component, the net result is a substantial loss in value of the apartment buildings, which Northland and South Shore Housing are willing to absorb.

It will be the town's decision whether it allows any market-rate rentals to connect to town sewer, however, the letter states there will not be any on-site capacity available for the wastewater from the market-rate rental apartments.

Northland says it understands there are citizens that worry projects, including the Cook Estate, may step in line ahead of residents who have been waiting for municipal connections. Northland says in light of that concern, it will offer to donate sufficient funds to the sewer commission to remove four times the amount of flow it would generate, by making infiltration and inflow repairs. Infiltration and inflow, or I&I, is water which seeps into leaky pipes from the outside and affects capacity.

Northland believes through I&I repairs, the sewer commission can eliminate up to 21,000 gpd of inflow to the town's sewer, and the apartments will only generate 5,250 gpd, for a new inflow reduction of 15,750 gpd. Northland would pay the town a certain amount of money which it would use to make the repairs. Based on previous experience, Northland said it thinks a reasonable number would be $94,500, or $4.50 per gallon at 21,000 gallons per day.

In addition to I&I payment, Northland has proposed paying the normal sewer connection fee at $15,000 per unit. With 35 units, the total would be $525,000. Added to the I&I payment, the town could receive a one-time payment of $619,500. Northland also said the Sewer Commission could potentially receive $17,500 per year in ongoing sewer fees.

Can this option go forward?

The town is trying to meet a need for senior housing, as well as get out from under the threat of more 40B housing projects. Chapter 40B is the state's 30-year-old law that allows developers to skirt local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing. To help encourage development of the kinds of housing projects the town needs, the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw was drafted and approved at the 2002 fall Special Town Meeting.

The Cook Estate project will be the second project to file under the town's SMROD bylaw, which allows developers to build higher density housing projects — as many as 10 units per acre — in exchange for providing affordable housing. The planning board holds a public hearing process for the project and decides whether to grant a special permit.

At the March 15 selectmen's meeting, Margy Charles, who has been sitting on the Cook Estate working group, brought the new Northland proposal to the board's attention. The Cook Estate working group has been charged with investigating all possible alternatives for building senior housing on the Cook Estate property. Selectman Michael Sullivan said the Northland proposal is similar to solutions he has heard other projects bring forward before.

"That concept was put forth by Cedarmere way back when and it was not acceptable," said Sullivan, adding he has already put in a call to Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz about the Northland proposal and Town Counsel Paul DeRensis will also be asked to weigh in on the matter.

Since 2003, developers for Cedarmere, a proposed 105-unit senior housing project slated to be built off Beechwood Street on the former Hayes Estate — the first project to file under the SMROD bylaw — have proposed a similar scenario for their project. They proposed making improvements to help reduce I&I to the Elm Street plant which would boost capacity by a little more than 15,000 gpd, which is equal to the amount Cedarmere would expend. Therefore, developers said they had proposed a "zero impact," project.

In addition, Cedarmere developers said they would pay for a cassette upgrade which would boost current capacity to roughly 450,000 gallons per day, which they said with existing capacity would be enough not only to accommodate itself, but all of the anticipated tie-ins of the Little Harbor area, Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road Extension, Old Coach Road, and a 60-unit senior housing development on the Cook Estate. Along with that cassette upgrade, Cedarmere developers said they would also explore access to the town of Hull's capacity for future Cohasset projects, and work to further the sewering of Little Harbor. They submitted a sewer application and were denied by the Sewer Commission and are currently in the throes of an appeal process.

Cedarmere continues to move forward, as it has received DEP approval for an alternative on-site wastewater system, but developers have not given up on a municipal connection, as it is their preferred method of wastewater disposal. Projects yielding more than 10,000 gpd, are required to obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the state. Northland developers say implementing an on-site system similar to the one Cedarmere will use has been investigated and it is not a viable option.

In addition, before Cedarmere put forth its plans, AvalonBay developers, who are looking to build a 200-unit 40B project off Route 3A, were told by town officials that pursuing a municipal sewer connection was not an option due to a lack of sewer capacity. Developers then began the quest for an alternate means of wastewater disposal, acting in good faith that a connection would not be a possibility. There could be legal ramifications if another project was given a connection, even though Avalon never filed an application for a sewer connection.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said in her opinion, the Northland proposal addresses the wastewater problem a little differently than the Cedarmere proposal. She added, in doing research, she was shocked to find only one-third of the homes in Cohasset are being served by the plant due to the large amount of I&I seeping in, and it would be a benefit to have that taken care of.

Due to the preexisting commitment to sewering Little Harbor, McMorris said, "This is something we might want to talk to the DEP about," adding input from the state as well as potentially hiring private counsel could be necessary when determining how to proceed with any sewer connections in town.

Voters at the 2003 special Fall Town Meeting allocated $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre parcel of Cook-owned property, which was then marketed to developers. Northland Residential's bid was accepted by the town, and the developers are slated to purchase the Cook property from the town as well as the adjacent 8.7 acres of town property for $5.4 million for senior housing. There will be a double closing, transferring the property from the Cooks to the developer.

Connecting to the sewer

The financial impact of allowing all 95 Cook Estate units to connect to municipal sewer would be significant for the town.

With each unit yielding an estimated 150 gallons per day, for a total of 14,250 total gallons per day, a one-time connection fee of $15,000 per unit would yield $1,425,000. Northland would also be willing to make infiltration and inflow, or I&I repairs, which would help decrease the amount of water which is currently seeping into the town's pipes, therefore affecting capacity. Its efforts would remove four times the amount of flow it would generate (up to 21,000 gpd).

However, with both Avalon and Cedarmere denied sewer access, there could be financial repercussions should lawsuits ensue. Cedarmere also offered to make I&I repairs as part of its proposal.

What the Villages at Deer Hill would look like:

- Concrete foundations and floors
- Exterior walls will be spruce clapboards and white cedar shingles with stain finish. Trim is pine with painted finish. Roof shingles are asphalt. Decks are pressure treated lumber.
- Each residence will be heated and air conditioned by a natural gas fired air system. Hot water will be supplied by a 50 gallon insulated hot water heater.
- All homes will be equipped with hard wired smoke detectors.
- All homes will be pre-wired for television.
- Kitchen sinks are stainless steel high/low bowl. Kitchen cabinets have a wood or plastic laminate finish. Countertops are Corian brand solid surface. Appliances are by General Electric and include dishwasher, disposal, gas range, microwave, and a top/bottom refrigerator/freezer.
- Wall to wall carpeting and dense padding is installed over tongue and groove plywood, except in kitchen, baths and front entry. Other areas will be either ceramic tile or sheet vinyl.

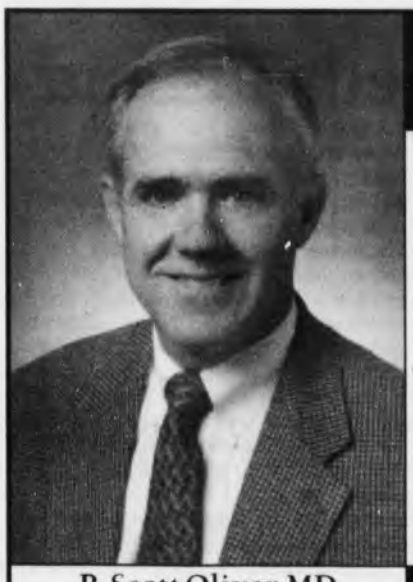
The site plans take into consideration the target market for the development, providing amenities the active, 55-plus crowd wants. All units have a first-floor master bedroom, one- or two-car garages, and loft spaces. There will be walking trails along the perimeter of the entire village, which could be linked with present or future "off-site" trail networks. The plans also include a common garden facility available for all residents, and the existing Cook residence will be renovated into a "village clubhouse" to be used for social events and gatherings.

Floor plans for townhouses will come in four designs. Three feature two bedrooms and two and a half baths, and the fourth has two bedrooms and two full baths. Square footage ranges from 1700-1950 square feet of living space.

What a downsized project would look like

Northland Developers say without sewer access, due to limitations of the soils on site, only 60 units could be constructed.

Zoning regulations, under the Senior Overlay Bylaw, require 25 percent of the total units constructed be set aside as "affordable" to households with an income of up to 80 percent the area median income. This would result in 45 market-rate units and 15 affordable units.



Taking into consideration only 45 market-rate units are available to "subsidize" the development costs of the affordable units, Northland said it expects the market-rate townhouses would have to be priced at a minimum of $800,000 each. Those estimates assume the cost of land acquisition is similar to the price of the Cook parcel and development costs are similar to what was projected in the Northland RFP submittal.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMAN

For the selectman candidates: The Cook Estate project has been heralded as providing badly needed housing for our senior citizens. Can the project be saved?

SELECTMAN/ Gary Vanderweil

"Cook Group Won't Budge," the Mariner's headline story last week, indicated that the Cook Estate Working Group is unwilling to look at alternatives to the proposed 95-unit housing complex. I think they are making a mistake.

Because Cedarmere's 78 mid-price "Over-55" homes obviate the need for Cook's 60 such homes, I believe a total re-think of the Cook project is necessary. The re-think would be based on a downsized project emphasizing on-site septic, green space, and affordable housing. The need for affordable ownership housing (as opposed to or in addition to affordable rental housing) should be addressed.

The key to making Cook into a smaller project is to reduce its cost to potential developers, and there are three ways to accomplish this: (1) Cohasset can contribute money, e.g., it pays the estate $4.5 million and sells to a developer for, say, $3.5 million. (2) The property is obtained from the estate for a lower purchase price. (3) One or more individual house lots are carved out of the Cook property and are sold to raise money which would offset and effectively reduce the purchase price. If these cost reduction measures are unpalatable to the town or to the estate, then, without a sewer connection I do not believe the project could be saved.

In this case, future alternatives for affordable senior housing should be focused closer to the downtown area, with its proximity to shops, churches, town hall, and harbor. Such alternatives would be consistent with "Smart Growth" practices, designed to improve the quality of life while reducing urban sprawl, energy consumption, and air pollution.

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

"Neither the words of our leaders
Nor the attitudes of the rest of us,
Can, in isolation, alter reality.

What actually transforms reality and
Produces positive change is the interaction
Of those two forces." — Author Unknown

It is time to engage those forces in a town wide, open dialog, limited only by our imagination (as long as we are realistic). We need to alter the perceived reality of what can and can't be accomplished. It is time for Cohasset to take a collective deep breath and re-examine the Cook Estate project.

This will require that we look to the Trustees of Jane's Trust for great understanding. The Town of Cohasset would like to leave a permanent legacy truly worthy of Jane's memory. Our current conundrum is not something Jane would have preferred for Cohasset. I believe she would have wanted what would have been best for her "legacy of generosity" and at the same time be best for Cohasset.

Cohasset and the Trustees need to recognize that all costs are variable. That means that the value of the land is based on what it can support for development.

Percolation tests have confirmed the site will handle a septic system for 60 units. The Second Amended Judgment is one overriding reality we cannot ignore. The commonsense solution is to sewer the Little Harbor Watershed and put the amended judgment behind us.

By downsizing the Cook Estate project to 60 units on site, we avoid the legal ramifications of why this project merits a sewer connection over previously denied developers. With the Trustees approval, we can maintain the option for a second phase if the town ever decides it is appropriate to extend sewer on Sohier Street.

Further Information on Jane B. Cook's trust, Jane's Trust, can be found online at: www.hembar.com/selectsrv/janes/

SELECTMAN/ Debbie Shadd

The Cook Estate is a tremendous opportunity for Cohasset that we should not let slip away. This project was approved overwhelmingly by the Special Town Meeting in November of 2003 and offers many benefits to Cohasset. First, it will provide 30 units of much needed affordable housing for our seniors, a well documented need in surveys conducted by the Town's Senior Housing Committee. Second, the Town will realize over $500,000 from the purchase and immediate resale of the property which can be used to replenish our reserve fund. Third, the Cook Estate project will expand our tax base, generating $425,000 per year in new property taxes, thus reducing the pressure for overrides. Finally, the project will help limit our exposure to future Chapter 40B developments.

It has been determined that an on-site septic system for the entire Cook Estate project is not feasible. Northland, the developer chosen for the project in March 2004, recently proposed a solution which shows promise. Northland proposes to build an on-site septic system to service all of the market rate units in the project. It would ask to connect only the affordable housing component of the project to the town sewer system. Northland would donate to the Sewer Commission enough money to fix groundwater leaks into our existing sewer system sufficient to increase our sewer capacity by four times what is needed for the affordable units of the Cook project. Northland's proposal will therefore increase sewer capacity for existing residences by fixing leaks at no cost to the town. This solution would allow the Cook Estate project to proceed as planned, provide affordable housing for our seniors, increase our capacity to sewer existing residences in town, and provide additional revenues to Cohasset. The Cook Estate project would be a plus for Cohasset.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the school committee candidates: The current school committee has said the school budget process this year has been a transparent one. Do you agree? What improvements, if any, would you work toward to ensure the public is informed along the way, and is not just presented with the end result?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Lee Jenkins

A transparent budget is a document from which one should be able to cull information as to where we were and where we are going.

After studying Cohasset school budgets for many years, FY'06 comparatively gives few details that were formerly supplied. It provides a bird's eye view and summarizations of budget worksheets without line-item details or the individual school itemizations. For an in depth comprehension one should be able to examine anticipated outlays in each department by line item with indications of current budget, projected budget amounts and, when possible, prior year expenditures..

FY'06 includes a pie chart indicating that 71percent of the budget is earmarked for salaries without supplying specifics. To understand department salary expenses it's important to view a breakdown showing each employee's: position; current and projected salary; step and grade, as has been done formerly. Administration salaries should specify department Chairman and team leaders with their stipends. Stipends for sports and extra curricular activities should also be listed.

When problems arise, fiscally responsible decisions must be made to maximize resources and initiate corrections to prevent important programs from being lost. Without sufficient transparency and accurate financial tools, both students and taxpayers stand to suffer.

To improve the current process, in addition to presenting accurate detailed budgets, two Articles, if passed, at Annual Town Meeting will provide periodic totals throughout the year of actual expenditures for all town budgets. This will allow everyone in town the opportunity to view the information at the Library or Town Clerk's office to keep informed. For schools specifically, another avenue would be to post budget updates onto the school website for review.

Providing greater transparency into the budgeting process will allow parents and the Cohasset community as a whole to play a greater role in the success of our schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Pam Wilson

Under the leadership of the new Superintendent, the school committee has provided clear access to all of the issues they're working on. If there is still a feeling of communication breakdown within the community, then we need to work to over communicate these issues.

It is my understanding that since Dr. Walsh's arrival in July, she has been working diligently, to clean up the budget, and to remedy five critical areas in the old town budget that were under funded. In order to create an environment of "transparency," which I prefer to call open communication and inclusion, she has created a strategic plan which includes members of various town committees, town officials, parents and representatives of all the schools. The result was the creation of a strategic plan for the entire school system. She has worked diligently to created a zero-based budget, and is using goals and objectives of this plan for her priorities. In creating these results, the 2006 budget has been discussed publicly at each school committee meeting.

Dr. Walsh has unraveled the line items and has clustered them according to DOE reporting requirements. The budget, this year, is very clear and concise. I believe that a goal of the school committee is to encourage community involvement. A well informed community fosters cohesive creative thinking and inclusion. I believe that this is the goal of our current committee members and their Superintendent. If we are to keep our community well informed and in an environment of open thinking, we must benchmark as often as possible, to evaluate what other communities are doing to foster strong educational programs. In order for the school committee to accomplish their intended work, they must be trusted and supported, with the understanding that their ultimate goal is the wellbeing of our schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 3-YEAR/Alfred Slanetz

This year's school budget more accurately represents the schools true operation than that of previous years. Denise Walsh and Karen Park have done a good job starting from scratch six months ago. However, there is still a lot of additional work that needs to be done.

First, to even understand where the resources are allocated relative to our educational mission and whether we are on budget, we need to hire a talented financial person to provide clear and concise monthly information. With this information, expenditures can be managed to assure that everything we do is cost effective and focused on educational value. Furthermore, new educational programs and alternative ways of providing services can be financially modeled so that informed decisions can be made to proactively improve and optimize the quality of education.

Of greater concern to me, however, is the complete lack of transparency on the true resource needs to provide an educational program of the absolute highest quality. Every year, the administration and faculty propose the minimum program that they think may have a chance of getting funded rather than one that would be educationally best. Then, in the name of finding an acceptable override, the School Committee and Selectmen cut from there. If the School Committee and Town do not have the opportunity to hear what an optimal program would look like and cost, how can the School expect decisions that optimize educational value?

This self-defeating band-aide approach over many years has created a vicious cycle — a continual decline in educational quality and a significant growth in fixed costs that contribute little to educational value in the classroom. We must change this dynamic and design a well thought out integrated plan to create an educational program that is commensurate with the high quality expectations of our community.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For the school committee candidates: How will you, as a school committee member, ensure that the "best and brightest" teacher workforce is recruited, nurtured, and retained given the town's current fiscal landscape, teacher contract negotiations, and community demands for excellence?

For the selectman candidates: For years Cohasset had a private attorney as Town Counsel and not a large firm. Has the switch saved money and provided needed special legal expertise? Or is it time to revisit the issue?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Leading the way

Nicole Whitney sets an example on and off the court

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Rarely do Cohasset fans come across a high school basketball player with the speed, agility, and strong defensive abilities of Nicole Whitney. She also dominates on the soccer and track fields.

Until age three she lived in Cohasset. Then the Whitney family moved to Connecticut and, a few years later, down to Virginia.

Luckily for Cohasset's sports teams, Nicole returned to Cohasset in the eighth grade. She quickly made friends with many girls, including Casey Anderson, who shared an interest in athletics.

Nicole seemed destined to take up basketball. In fact, one could argue basketball can be found in the Whitney family DNA. Her mother, a former CHS lady hoopster, encouraged Nicole to join her friends in sports activities.

Today, Nicole's parents can be found at every one of her games, cheering her on.

After losing many seniors to graduation last year, Nicole assumed the co-captain position and set out to rebuild a successful team. With the help of fellow captain Casey Anderson, Nicole helped lead the 2004-05 Skippers to their second tournament berth in two years.

Whitney's leadership skills caught the attention of her head coach, John Levangie.

"Nicole ranks as one of the best defensive players I have ever coached and one of my best captains," he said. "She set an example for everyone to follow. Her commitment to the team was just exceptional."

"I could not have asked for a more positive experience. Every day I looked forward to practice."

Cohasset senior Nicole Whitney

Nicole's offensive ability improved over the second half of the season. She says she saw her shooting skills as her biggest weakness. Yet she managed to find her range outside of the 3-point arc. She consistently contributed around 10 points a game. Not too shabby for an athlete known for her defensive play.

When asked what aspect of basketball she liked the most, Nicole said, "Playing on a small team. And the kids this year were really nice.

"I got to know a lot of the underclassmen. I could not have asked for a more positive experience. Every day I looked forward to practice."

Nicole also enjoyed her leadership role as a co-captain.

"Helping to lead the team to the tourney gave me personal satisfaction. Everybody contributed and did an awesome job," she said.

One of her younger teammates, Lacey Richardson, shared with the Mariner her opinion of Nicole.

"Nicole taught us what to do on and off the court," she said. "With her strong leadership and ability to lift all our spirits, Nicole had a key influence in making this a fun season."

Amazingly, Nicole says basketball does not rank as her best sport. Last fall, she lit up the soccer field and served as a co-captain for that squad as well.

In the spring, Cohasset fans will find Whitney zipping around the track like the Energizer Bunny. Rarely does another runner match Nicole's scorching running pace.

When not on the court or athletic field, Nicole finds time for meaningful school and community activities. Every other month, Nicole and her friends help out at Father Bill's Shelter.

She also enjoys serving on her yearbook committee and on the Social Awareness Organization. And, of course, she loves to just hang with her friends, go to the beach, or go shopping.

Her routine will likely change next fall. Nicole hopes to attend a school in New England and is still deciding where she wants to continue her education.

Norwell's Samantha Rosen in the midst of her floor exercise routine at the March 6 state individuals meet in Beverly. She scored an 8.25 in both this event and the vault.

Two gymnasts end career at state meet

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For a year, qualifying for the March 6 state individuals gymnastics meet has been on the mind of Norwell senior Samantha Rosen.

You couldn't blame her, considering how close she came last year.

"I missed it last year by five-hundredths of a point in both events," Rosen said. "Making it this year was definitely a huge goal for me."

In order a qualify, a gymnast has to be in the top 15 of their section. With three sections, that's 45 athletes coming from over 100 programs across the state, so qualifying is no easy task.

Rosen joined Cohasset senior Nancy Durkin as Nor-Coh's representatives in Beverly. Rosen scored an 8.25 at the meet in both the vault and floor exercise. Durkin competed in the all-around competition, and scored between 8.1 and 8.3 in all four events.

"We both had a great meet," Rosen said. "Some of the scores there were unbelievable. To even get 10th place in the all-around, you needed a score of about 37. It was tough competition, but we both had a lot of fun."

And for both, it was their last competition as high school gymnasts. Rosen says she will not be continuing the sport in college, a sport that she has trained for year-round.

"It was kind of weird knowing that this was our last meet," she said. "But we knew it had to end for both of us eventually."

And for it to end at the state's biggest event is no small achievement. Congratulations.

Coastal Stars Report

Mite A

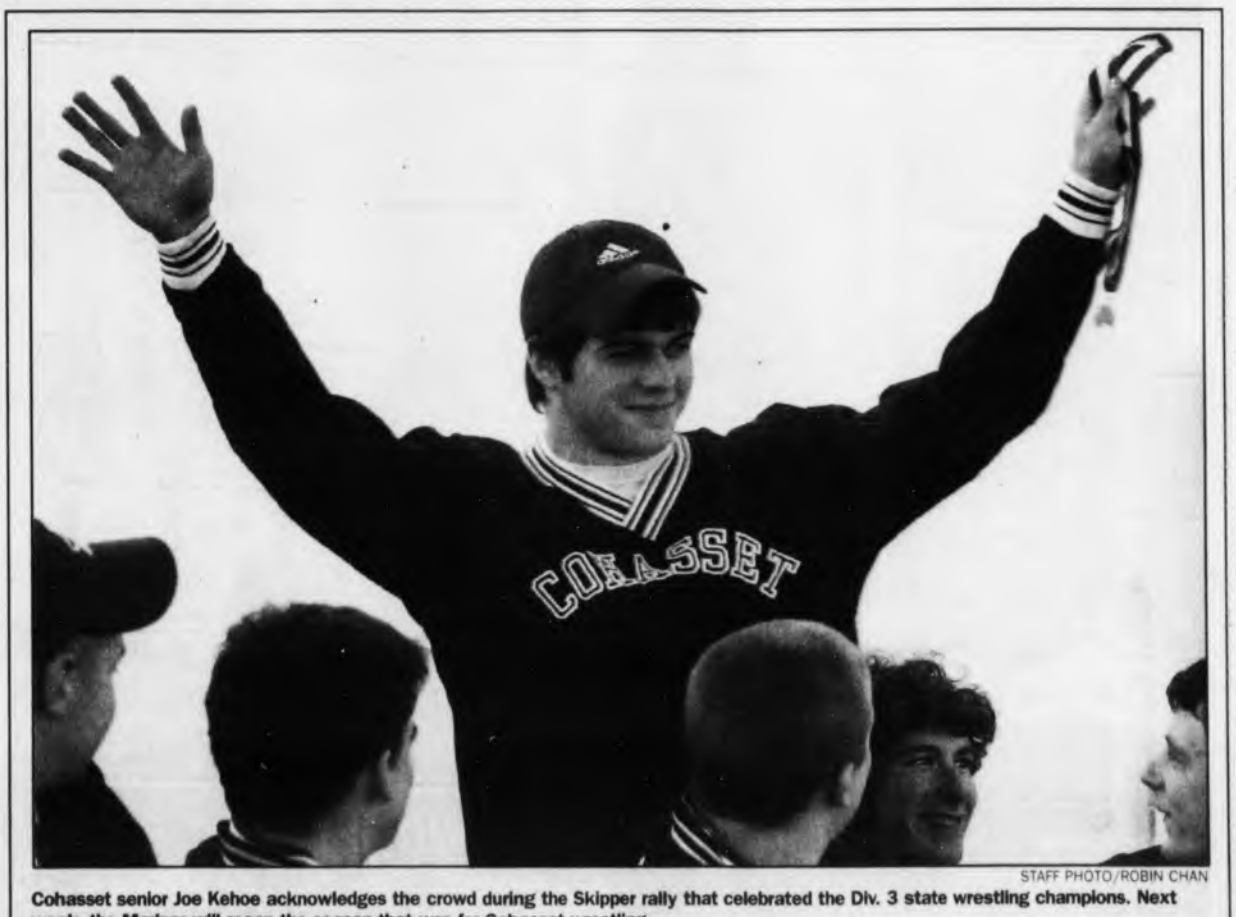
After winning a tournament at Saint Sebastian's in Needham the first weekend of February vacation, the Coastal Stars Mite A team had two bye weeks from play. The boys got back into action this weekend at the Lower Cape Cod Spring Tournament held at the Charles Moore Arena in Orleans. Over the course of the weekend, the Stars played three preliminary games, defeating WTM (from the Springfield area) 11-2, upsetting a strong Southern Rhode Island team again with the score of 11-2, and holding off the Waltham Mite A's with a 7-1 victory.

The boys finished the weekend with the Championship game, a rematch with Waltham, on Sunday afternoon. The Stars played another strong game both on offense and defense and an outstanding game by goaltender Jeff Nagle gave the Stars the Tournament Championship with a shut out win of 6-0. As the scores of each of these games indicate, the Stars continue to be an offensive powerhouse.

This is the result of great teamwork as every offensive player scored at least one goal throughout the tournament and a few came from the defense as well. Goals were scored by Charlie Blackington, Martin Buckley, Brendan Crane, Patrick Holway, Colin MacDonald, Charley Michalowski, Tommy O'Brien, Kenny Parnell, Sam Topham and Brandon Winn.

Of course, scoring goals doesn't mean as much if the other team scores more. However, the Stars defensive play of Matt Burchill, Jeremy Duchini, Garrett Leahy, Kenny Parnell, Sam Topham, Charley Michalowski and Charlie Blackington kept the pressure on the other teams non-stop throughout the tournament. They killed power plays, kept the puck in the other teams zone and set up many of the scoring opportunities for the Stars offense.

And of course, Jeff Nagle in net was kept busy in all of the games, putting on a strong demonstration of goalie skills from glove saves, kick saves, blocker saves, butterflies and whatever else was needed to keep the puck out of the net.



The coaching of Tim Leahy, Tim Burchill and Charlie Parnell has made this group of boys into a strong team and each skater has improved throughout the season. The Stars are 15-1-4 so far this season and are in second place in the South Shore conference with only two games left to play. They face Braintree on March 19 and end the season with a game against the first place Seahawks, the only team the Stars have lost to in regular season play, on March 26.

Mites

It was a gray, cold, snowy day when the families from Marshfield and Cohasset boarded their chartered buses (a.k.a. mini-vans and SUVs) heading south to Cape Cod.

The Coastal Stars Mite A, B, & C teams played in a 3 day "March Madness" hockey tournament in Orleans over the weekend. All three teams played a combination of 12 games days and swept the board clean. A, B, C walked away

Coghlan-Cusack Marathon Golf Classic

In its decade of existence, the Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic has become a staple on the local scene, kicking off the golfing season each spring with a celebrity-studded gala two days after the Boston Marathon.

The event has raised over $270,000 for Our Lady's Hospital for Sick Children, and its organizers are looking forward to the biggest and best edition yet on April 20.

The 10th annual installment of the ECNC Classic is scheduled for South Shore Country Club in Hingham that day, with a noontime shotgun start followed by an awards banquet. This year's tournament will be dedicated to the late Jim Hannan, a charter member of the ECNC committee, who passed away earlier this month.

Over the years, celebrities from both sides of the Atlantic have participated in the ECNC tournament - Eamonn Coghlan and Neil Cusack themselves; entertainers Finbar Furey and Niall Toibin; former Red Sox pitchers Bill Lee and Luis Tiant and manager Joe Morgan; present and former Patriots like Adam Vinatieri, Babe Parilli, Larry Eisenhauer, and Gino Cappelletti; boxers Gerry Cooney, Micky Ward and Dana Rosenblatt; former Celtics Jo Jo White and Ernie DiGregorio; ex-Bruins Ken Hodge, Johnny McKenzie, Rick Middleton and Johnny Bucyk; and a host of New England Revolution players and coaches from Frank Stapleton to Taylor Twellman, along with radio and television personalities Steve Burton and John Dennis.

Speakers and entertainers at the post-tournament dinner have included former heavyweight champion George Foreman, Delores Keane, and John McDermott.

The Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic -- named for the former world mile record-holder and the only Irish winner of the Boston Marathon (in 1974) - is sponsored by Foxwoods Resort Casino, Honey Dew Donuts, United Liquors, the New England Revolution, Magner's Irish Cider, New Balance Athletic Shoes, Galway Irish Crystal, Kerr Printing, and Tuohy Sports and Entertainment, in association with the Aisling Gallery of Hingham.

Although a sold-out field is anticipated again this year, a few spots (at $150 per player or $600 per team) remain available. For information contact the ECNC Classic c/o Aisling Gallery, 229 Lincoln Street, Hingham MA 02043, e-mail ECNCClassic@aol.com or telephone (781) 773-1097.

Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Registration

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 (for Little League) and 13 and 14 (for Junior League) as of July 31, 2005. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the junior league baseball and softball programs (ages 13 and 14) will be $125. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $125. Please be advised that the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization requires that all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration, or the programs offered to players, may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)-383-1897.

Junior League baseball

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce the creation of a new Junior League baseball program for the upcoming 2005 spring season. The program is being introduced to help fill the void that has been created with the elimination of the middle school baseball program. As previously announced, the CYBSA has introduced a similar softball program for 7th and 8th grade girls as well.

The baseball program will be a Little League governed Junior League – eligible players must be 13 or 14 years of age as of July 31, 2005. Our teams will be placed in a division with teams from Norwell, and perhaps another neighboring town. Games will be played during the week at approximately 5:45 pm, and, as scheduled, on weekends. We hope to field as many as three teams of twelve players.

The fee for participation will be the same as the CYBSA Little League Major League program - $125 per player. Each player will receive a new uniform jersey and baseball hat. Players will keep the hats and jerseys provided to them.

Registration will commence immediately, and run through March 19, 2005. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 12, 2005, from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon, in the lower lobby of the High School gymnasium. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 19, 2005.

Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio at (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registra-tions that are received or postmarked after March 19, 2005 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. The late fee will be strictly enforced. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

Please contact Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538, or via email at ltoconnell@hklaw.com if you have questions about this new baseball program.

Finally time to go a little Mad

FROM THE SIDELINES

JULIE ANN NEVERO

I love this time of year. You know, when the snow finally starts to melt (keep your fingers crossed), the birds start chirping, the sun begins making regular appearances. It can only mean one thing: Time for March Madness.

Brackets were released Monday and by the end of the week, every office in the country will have some sort of pool going. Even those who know virtually nothing about sports will turn in a bracket and talk trash when they do.

Games start Thursday and until then, we'll use the days leading up to the action to read every newspaper article, research every sports website, and watch all the ESPN coverage we can stand in an attempt to pick the perfect bracket. We'll change it a hundred times before we come to the realization that maybe we should enter two.

We'll be glued to the TV for three weeks, watching the action unfold. The first couple of rounds are always the less stressful. Here, you basically pick the higher seeds and add a few upsets. But the tide can change very quickly in the second round if one of your picks get knocked off. This is where we scream at the TV cursing at kids from a team we never cared to watch until now.

Fear not, at least you have that second bracket to fall back on.

Win or lose, though, March Madness is what sports are all about. Drama, excitement, heartbreak, and joy, the NCAA hoop tourney covers all bases. It's a welcome break from the glitz and glam of the NBA, an organization that determines a player's worth by his "bling, bling" factor.

This tourney is about living out hopes and dreams. It's lifelong aspirations coming to a head. It's kids working together to achieve a common goal. It's every moment hanging on every three-pointer or foul shot. Virtually every team has a player with a story either inspirational or hard-luck. It's the culmination of years of hard work, determination, and sacrifice and the it all unfolds on a national stage.

It's hard to remember all this when there's money on the line (wink, wink), but do me a favor and take the time to really watch these games. Listen to the stories, admire the performances. Hey, you're already watching them anyway. Trust me, it will be more than worth your while.

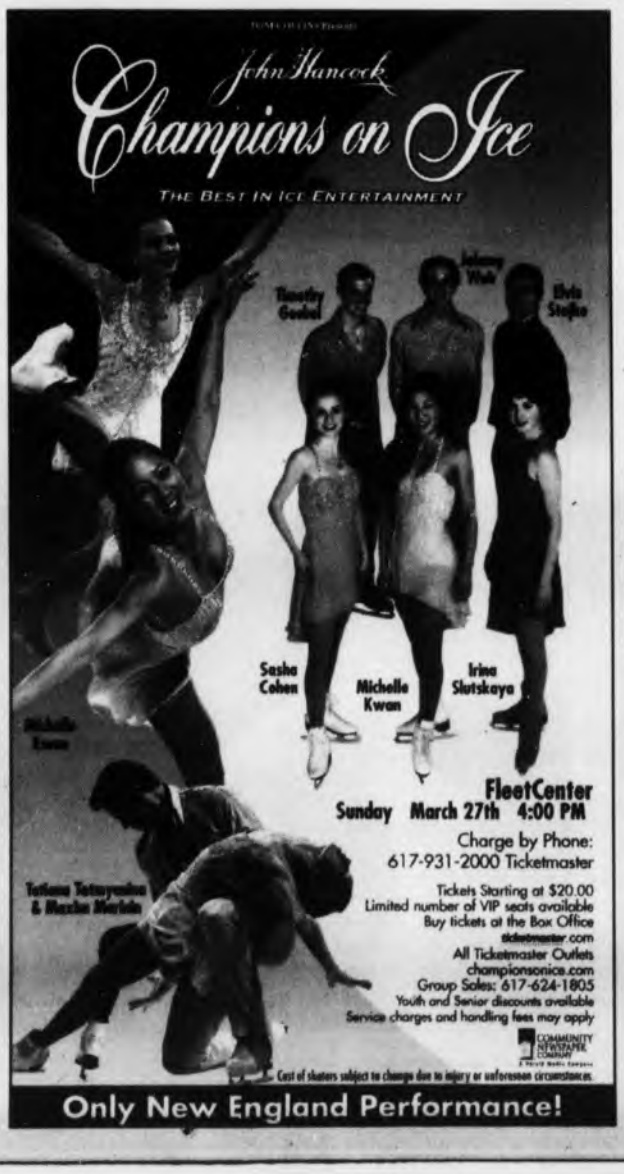
This ain't my fantasy

So a few of my guy friends had their big Fantasy Baseball draft Sunday afternoon. I might be alone on this one, but I just don't get the fascination with this. One guy flew all the way from San Diego to attend the live draft and hours later was highly disappointed with his team.

They all spent weeks doing research on the internet and conspired to buy the best fantasy baseball books, all in an effort to get the best players cheap. They go around the room and bid on guys until they've spent an imaginary $200 to build a team.

They came out of the four-hour draft with mixed feelings, all of which came out at the dinner table. Some were ecstatic, others depressed. Some felt betrayed by friends who opted not to honor pre-draft agreements and instead "stole" their guy, while others kept their word and got hosed in the process. By the end of the meal, they were all pointing fingers and praying for player injuries.

When baseball starts less than a month from now, they'll be online all day everyday setting up their lineups for that night's game and talking trash in the "comment" box. They will watch the games they can depending on what area of the country they are and will tune into SportsCenter even more religiously just to catch those stat scrolls at the bottom of the TV frame. This will be their lives everyday for the next seven months.



Call me crazy, but this ain't no fantasy of mine!

I tried doing a fantasy baseball team once two years ago and had stopped caring by the end of May. It's not because I wasn't doing well, it's because it was just too much involvement. I went in knowing I would never last for that very reason. Everyone knows nothing really matters until after the All-star break. Until then, baseball doesn't really hold my interest.

God bless these guys.

Coastal Stars Report

1, 2, 3 with trophies in hand.

This weekend included all kinds of excitement, not all of which was related to any hockey games.

To mention a few of the highlights:

- One David Hasselhoff Baywatch impersonation by lifeguard Tim Leahy.

- One Bill Murray Caddyshack moment when a "Baby Ruth bar" found its way to the bottom of the hotel pool.

- One flu epidemic that wiped out parents and kids alike.

- One devastating head injury that was quickly tended to by the parents of the Coastal STARS ER department.

Offensive Mites B4 game Recap:

Aidan (A-train) Beresford: 3 goals and 2 assists.

"Triple B" Big Bryan Bowman: 3 goals and 2 assists.

M.D. (Mad Dog) Matty Doyle: 3 goals and 4 assists.

Brendan (Prime Time) Evitts: 4 goals and 3 assists.

Jack (Sniper) Evitts: 2 goals (1 game winner) and 4 assists.

Curtis (Cujo) Golden: 2 goals (1 game winner) and 5 assists.

Kal (Stone Wall) Maier: 1.26 GAA, 2 goals and 4 assists.

Tucker (Flash) Ambrose: 2 assists.

"Triple R" Robert Rocket Reidy: 2 goals and 4 assists.

Sam (Farm Hand Strong) Rice: 3 assists.

Department of Defense:

An aggressive and talented Worcester team out shot the STARS by a 4:1 ratio. As all hockey groupies know, goaltending WINS playoff hockey and today Worcester met their match in the finals when a focused and determined Michael (MVP) Lund refused to lose. At times, standing on his head making one miraculous save after another and rejecting 36 out of 38 shots on net, Michael was a combination of Jim Craig, Patrick Roy, and Ken Dryden.

This win would not have been possible without the supreme effort and great two-way hockey of the STARS defense. Can we say the D word? We can say 4 of them! Declan (Leahy), James "the Destroyer" Hussey, Captain Patrick "Dynamite" Graham, and Joe "The Determinator" Redfearn led the tournament with fewest goals allowed.

After three days of intense hockey action, the players and their families headed home basking in the glow of the wins and the sunshine, reveling in the events of the weekend tournament.

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 Hockey team brought excitement to the Cape this weekend winning the Mite C division of the Lower Cape Code Spring Hockey tournament.

The Stars started the weekend off with a strong 5 to 1 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth on Friday evening. Brian Mathews got the scoring started early with goal on a feed from Colby Comeau. Following a Dennis-Yarmouth goal Kyle Bowman got the lead back after scoring on the rebound of his own shot.

Derek Benson put the Stars up 3-1 in the second period on Colby Comeau's second assist of the game. The Stars put up a solid defensive effort in the second period. Mats Nelson, Gunnar McKenzie, and Matty Johnson all made strong defensive plays in the period. Brian Mathews scored his second goal of the game late in the period assisted on a pass from Gunnar McKenzie.

Kyle Bowman finished the scoring in the third period taking a feed from Colby Comeau who had his third assist of the game. The Stars also got stand out play from Robert Bothwell on defense and Josh Duchini who displayed good puck movement.

The Stars had the goal machine going in the second game of the tournament taking the Cape Code Waves 14 to 2. The Stars line of Seamus Ryan, Colby Comeau and Hugh Healey displayed some solid passing in the first period leading to the team's first goal scored by Colby with an assist from Hugh Healey. Derek Benson scored the second goal of the game assisted by Harry Sheldon who displayed some solid stick work.

The line of Andrew Kuppens, Kyle Bowman, and Jo Jo Carbone played outstanding in the second period culminating in the Stars third goal by Kyle Bowman who was assisted by Jo Jo Carbone. Brian Mathews scored goal number 4 on the rebound of a Jo Jo Carbone shot. Colby Comeau scored goal five assisted by Andrew Kuppens. On one of the best hustle plays of the game. Mats Nelson took the puck off the face off just outside of his own end and raced down the ice scoring on an unassisted breakaway.

Following two more goals by Derek Benson, and one each by Brian Mathews and Jo Jo Carbone, Gunnar McKenzie scored two goals of his own both assisted by Brian Mathews. The Stars finished the scoring off with a goal by Mats Nelson and one by Robert Bothwell who scored his first goal of the season. The Stars also got stand out play from Shaelyn Tobin and Hugh Healey as well as great goaltending from Chris Phillips.

On Sunday, the Stars went up against a strong Barnstable team and had to play solid two-way Hockey to secure victory, netting the win 2-1. Although playing a scoreless first period, the two teams skated hard with the Stars having good scoring chances. Jo Jo Carbone, Hugh Healey, and Derek Benson all had shots on goal during the period but were denied by some solid goaltending. Chris Phillips kept the stars in the game midway through the period making a remarkable save on an uncontested breakaway.

Barnstable got on the board first in the second period scoring a goal as the Stars were caught in a line shift. Derek Benson got the goal right back midway through the period scoring a goal after Harry Sheldon swept a loose puck over to Derek who hit the one timer.

The Stars went up two to one in the third period when Derek Benson took a feed from Gunnar Mckenzie and beat the Barnstable goaltender to the far side. The Stars played outstanding hockey the rest of the way getting solid defensive play from Mats Nelson, Mathew Johnson, Shaelyn Tobin, and Robert Bothwell. Jo Jo Carbone, Kyle Bowman, Hugh Healey, and Josh Duchini were aggressive with their back checking through out the period keeping Barnstable from gaining control in the offensive end. Chris Phillips made the play of the game with just over two minutes to play stopping a Barnstable breakaway with an unbelievable sprawling save while being run over by the Barnstable winger.

In a rematch of the earlier game, the Stars once again faced a tough Barnstable team who was looking for revenge in the tournament final. The Stars got on the board first when Colby Comeau picked up a loose puck and netted a backhander after a nifty fake on the Barnstable goalie. Gunnar Mckenzie and Matty Johnson were solid on defense during the period keeping the puck out of the Stars zone.

The Stars kept the pressure on in the second frame skating up and down the ice and keeping the pressure in the Barnstable zone for most of the period. After taking a penalty in their own zone, The Stars got some great penalty killing by Gunnar Mckenzie, Kyle Bowman, Mats Nelson, and Derek Benson. Jo Jo Carbone scored the Stars second goal of the game taking a feed from Kyle Bowman beating the Barnstable Goalie to the short side. Following a Barnstable Goal, Seamus Ryan, Colby Comeau, Brian Mathews, Shaelyn Tobin, and Robert Bothwell were all over the offensive end, getting to every loose puck, and having several scoring chances as the period ended.

The Stars kept the pressure on in the third period. On their first shift, Kyle Bowman, Andrew Kuppens, and Jo Jo Carbone moved the puck well with both Andrew and Jo Jo having scoring chances. Kyle put the Stars up 3-1 midway through the third period netting a one timer off of a Derek Benson rebound. Using quick line shifts for the remainder of the game, the Stars played error-free Hockey. Josh Duchini, Matty Johnson, Mats Nelson, and Gunnar Mckenzie kept Barnstable from having any uncontested scoring chances and when a chance did present itself, Chris Phillips was at the ready to make the save. The Stars iced the win with 20 seconds remaining when Jo Jo Carbone stole the puck at center ice scoring an empty netter.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team defeated Cape Cod 7-2 on Saturday, February 26 in Hingham.

Stars center Andrew Tautkus fired a centering pass from his brother, Matthew, past the Cape Cod goalie, making it 1-0 Stars. James Daley made it 2-0 Stars with a breakaway goal mid-way through the first period. The Stars defensive pairings of Tommy Coyne and Tristan Wiggin and RJ Neuls and Jonathan Gardner, kept Cape Cod scoreless in the first.

Right wing, Michael McPartlin put the Stars up 3-0 with his goal to begin the second period. Matthew Tautkus one-timed a pass from his brother, Andrew past the stunned Cape Cod goalie, making it 4-0 Stars. Andrew Tautkus then scored his second goal of the game to begin the third period. Stars forwards Liam Rose, Seamus Feeney and Mark McGoldrick each contributed with an assist.

Down 5-0, Cape Cod scored to narrow the Stars lead to 5-1. Another quick goal by Cape Cod closed the gap to 5-2. Stars goalie, Max Hemingway turned away several shots preserving the Stars lead. Stars center, James Daley then scored back-to-back goals, assisted by Michael McPartlin to complete his hat trick and put the game out of reach. With the win, the Stars improved to 15-2-3.

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 Team faced off against the Whitman/Hanson/Kingston Hawks on Sunday March 6th, coming away with a 6-1 victory.

Most of the action was jam-packed into the first 10 minutes of the game. The Stars rallied early, scoring four back-to-back goals. Defenseman Jonathan Gardner shut down several attempts by the Hawks to leave their own zone. He kept pushing the puck back up the boards to his forwards. His hard work paid off, when forward Mike McPartlin received the puck right on his stick and fired the first Stars goal into the back of the net.

The second goal came on the next shift, the result of quick back-and-forth teamwork between linemates Tommy Coyne and Andrew Tautkus. Moments later, forward James Daley stripped the Hawks defenseman of the puck, stormed in and scored, putting the Stars up 3-0.

One minute later, Daley pushed the puck into the Hawks' zone. Forward Ryan Melia intercepted and got off a quick pass to Matthew Tautkus, who made a stunning shot that sailed over the shoulder of the Hawks' goalie. It was 4-0 Stars with 8:22 left in the first period.

The Stars came into the second period two men down, due to penalties. They successfully fought off the penalties. Back at full strength, Mike McPartlin scored his second goal of the game by crashing the net and tapping a rebound just over the goalline. Forward Liam Rose initiated the sixth and final Stars' goal, by feeding James Daley the puck right in front of the net. Daley scored his second of the game and Rose earned the assist. With six minutes left in the second period, the Hawks scored their only goal.

In the third period, the Hawks defense came alive, shutting down any scoring attempts by the Stars. The Stars defense, led by Tristan Wiggin, Nicolas Craig, RJ Neuls and Jonathan Gardner, held strong on their end, allowing only two shots on net, which were handedly turned aside by goalie Max Hemingway. Forward Seamus Feeney had a solid game with strong stick work and great backchecking. The 6-1 victory gave the C-4 team their 20th win of the season

Squirt A

Connor Maher anchored a stingy defense, and Dan LeBlanc scored the game's only goal, as the Squirt A Coastal Stars earned a 1-0 win over the Brewins. The game's defensive tone was established early when Mike Carbone's give-and-go with Neil Conway was saved and Steven Harrington was denied from in front.

The Stars set up several opportunities with sharp passing, but the Brewins goalie made stops on Jonathan Spitz and Patrick Burchill. EJ Culhane, DJ Evans, Kevin McDougall, and Dan LeBlanc were superb in front of Maher, and the Stars forwards back-checked aggressively. Jake Durkin, Steven Harrington, and Neil Conway got back to disrupt potential breaks.

With just over seven minutes left in the second, Dan LeBlanc picked up a loose puck in the neutral zone and skated it across the blue line. Finding daylight at the right circle, LeBlanc jetted past the defense, cut in on net, and backhanded inside the right post for the1-0 lead.

The Brewins defense stayed tight after the goal. Trevor Salmon fed Mike Carbone in front, but the shot was saved. Chris Carpenter's give-and-go with Steven Harrington was saved. Jonathan Spitz' shot was saved, and Harrington was robbed on the rebound. Neil Conway set up Trevor Salmon out front, but the shot was saved.

Meanwhile, the Stars defense was even better than the Brewins. Connor Maher took a point-blank shot off the chest. EJ Culhane broke up a 2-on-1. Kevin McDougall, DJ Evans, and Dan LeBlanc scrambled to break up plays in front.

With 7:17 left in the game, the Stars incurred a penalty. Steven Harrington, Chris Carpenter, EJ Culhane, Dan LeBlanc, Mike Carbone, and Patrick Burchill combined to kill the man advantage. Kevin McDougall, Dan LeBlanc, Neil Conway, and Jake Durkin killed another penalty two minutes later. Maher made two brilliant saves, one on a shot from in front and the other on the rebound. The Brewins pulled their goalie with a minute left, but the Stars withstood the extra skater and left town with the win.

Squirt C2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 hockey team lost an exciting game against Braintree last Sunday. After Braintree scored two quick goals the Coastal Stars stormed back with three goals by Mick Barry, Jack Kuppens, and Nate Morse.

Braintree was not to be deterred, although the defense of Chris Bjorkman, Coleman Hernon, Jake Denton, Colin Bell and Tim Cavanaro was relentless. Braintree scored a late second period goal to tie it up 3-3. Answering back was Jack Kuppens with an early third period goal to send the Stars ahead 4-3. Alec Hurd, the Star's goalie, turned away a host of shots by Braintree and kept the score at 4-3 until a Braintree winger scored his third goal of the game to tie the game at 4-4.

Both teams continued to pepper the goalies with outstanding shots followed by phenomenal saves. Jake Timcoe, Brendon Queenan, Ethen Maher, Nick Mulrey, Adam Jackson, Nate Morse continued to shoot on the Braintree goalie without success. It wasn't until an errant shot went off a teammate's skate did Alec Hurd see a goal go into the net breaking the tie and giving Braintree a 5-4 lead. The Stars pulled the goalie with 1 minute left and the six players for the Coastal Stars tried in vain to score on Braintree. Although many shots grazed the net, Braintree prevailed 5-4. It was only the third loss of the season for the Stars.

Indoor Spring Training Camp Little League Battery Club

The South Shore Baseball Club's final indoor Spring Training Camp (STC) of the season, open to players between the ages of 8-15, starts April 2 at its Hingham facility. The last Little League Battery Club session of the year also commences April 2 at SSBC.

Two-hour STC sessions are scheduled four consecutive Saturdays, Apr. 2-23, 10 am to 12 noon, for players between the ages of eight and 12 and open to all players eight to 15, 12 noon to 2 pm.

STC features defensive instruction for infielders and outfielders, one solid hour of batting, hitting lectures by SSBC's experienced staff, two live batting cages, and five individual hitting stations. Advanced registration is required. STC is open to SSBC members as well as non-members.

"This is the last chance for youth league players that want to be in mid-season form on opening day," SSBC president/director Frank Niles, Jr. explained. "With New England weather, it's impossible to predict when and how often they'll be able to work outdoors in the spring. That's why we have indoor training camps. SSBC's coaching staff is one of the best in New England in terms of assisting players in their overall development."

Little League Battery Club

SSBC's final Little League Battery Club session will be held four Saturdays in a row, Apr. 2-23, 8-10 a.m., for players aged eight to 12.

"Our Battery Club has been designed for pitchers and catchers who want to learn and work on the finer points of baseball's two most important positions," Niles said.

Pitching instruction will concentrate on proper mechanics from the wind-up and stretch, strategy and pitch selection, different grips and its effects on the ball, pick-off moves, fielding, and positive attitude. Catching sessions focus on correct receiving and throwing techniques, pitch selection, blocking low pitches, and overall strategy.

Group size is limited in order to provide personalized instruction. SSBC is a year-round, full service club and training facility for baseball and softball players, boys and girls (5 and older), in Hingham. For more information about SSBC or any of its programs call 1-800-749-6466/(781) 749-6466, or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com.

Ahoy, Mr. Skipper!

Staff photos/Robin Chan

Brian Michaud can't help from laughing before trying to answer his philosophical question about what he would want to find out if he had a crystal ball.

Elizabeth Stone is smitten by Andrew Jerz, who plays an air guitar, during the formal wear portion of the Mr. Skipper pageant last Friday. The event raises money to help offset the cost of senior class activities.

Tim Pilczak wows the crowd with his rendition of the Napoleon Dynamite dance sequence during the talent segment cementing his title as the 2005 "Mr. Skipper."

LaDawn Langford, right, tries to lobby for her favorite contestant, Ted Straughn, who gazes over the adoring crowd during the formal wear segment of the pageant at the high school.

The girls in the audience react to Tim Pilczak's Napoleon Dynamite dance. Tim was later named "Mr. Skipper."

WORSHIP NEWS

St. Stephen's Church Easter celebration

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, will celebrate the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service on Saturday, March 26 at 7:30 p.m. The theme of the worship will be "Easter and the Environment." Jesus' Easter resurrection is an act whereby God reconciles all things to himself. To follow the risen Christ means to see dignity and interconnection in all that exists – ocean and stones, earth and air, plants and people, all creation. Following the worship, Colette Wood, Chair of the Diocesan Committee on Faith and the Environment, will lead a discussion on "God's Earth is Sacred."

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, March 27 will be at 8 and 10 a.m. with choir and brass. The worship tells the story of women, followers of Jesus, at the empty tomb enjoined to "go and tell" Christ is risen.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church on Maundy Thursday,March 24, at 7 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following worship there will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time – breads, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits, and milk and honey!

A 24- hour Prayer Watch will begin on Maundy Thursday at 3 p.m. Parishioners sign up for an hour throughout the day to be in church to read, pray, just to be quiet, or meditate. It recalls Jesus' words at Gethsemane, "So, could you not watch with me one hour?" and the words of Psalm 130: "my soul waits for the LORD more than those who watch for the morning, more than those who watch for the morning." It is a powerful experience of prayer each minute throughout the day bringing the church into Good Friday.

Good Friday worship begins at noon on March 25 with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book service begins at 1 p.m. A service for children takes place at 2:30 p.m. and ends the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross.

Bomb scare in Tedeschi Plaza

Police are still seeking information about who may have left a large cooking pot on the sidewalk near the curb in front of CVS in Tedeschi Plaza on Tuesday evening.

A call came into dispatch from an employee at the plaza at roughly 5 p.m. alerting police to the object. Cohasset firefighters and police went to the plaza to investigate further and observed a large metal, cooking pot with a lid on the curb.

"At that time there was not a lot of information – no one knew who put it there," Police Chief James Hussey said. He explained Fire Capt. Jim Runey, who was in charge at the scene, therefore determined, the item should be treated as a potential hazard and called for further assistance.

"We're happy this turned out not to be a life-threatening situation."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Police cleared out the stores and set up a perimeter; cars were moved, Hussey said. Most of the employees and customers went over to the Starbucks area of the plaza.

Hussey said Chief Roger Lincoln asked for a response from the bomb squad which operates out of the state Fire Marshall's Office. Bomb technicians, who had been training at Logan Airport, arrived within the hour. They geared up and a technician put on a special suit. The object was able to be x-rayed on site and the film developed.

"Nothing bomb-related was seen," Hussey said. He said the lid was removed and inside there were other covers and pots.

"The evidence was cleared and collected by our own detectives and the perimeter was broken down," Hussey said.

"Now we are trying to determine if someone placed it there with the intent of causing an uproar," he said.

Hussey said either it was a hoax, or someone put it down perhaps in the parking lot, forgot about it and drove away, and someone else seeing it in the middle of the lot, moved it to the curb.

"We're happy this turned out not to be a life-threatening situation," he said. "From beginning to end, the entire matter took about two hours – we really appreciate the cooperation of all the store owners and managers.

"The stores were able to open their doors again in two hours, that was great."

Hussey said whoever owns the pots should not be embarrassed to come forward so the police can bring this incident to closure and rule out the possibility that it was a hoax.

"It's not something that you normally see – something just dropped off at the curb," Hussey said. "This had to be handled as a serious matter."

State Police bomb disposal officers give instructions to Cohasset firefighters and police officers.

Snowplow drivers plead not guilty

Next court date is April 14

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset resident Paul V. Gratta of Rocky Lane and his employee Frank J. Eddy of Hull, pled not guilty in Quincy District Court last Friday (March 11), to charges they allegedly ran a scheme to evade a state tracking system while operating a private plowing business on state time.

Gratta, 50, and Eddy, 33, were both charged with larceny over $250, procurement fraud and making false claims against the Commonwealth.

Both were released on personal recognizance. A pre-trail conference is scheduled for Thursday, April 14.

Gratta owns and operates Hub Construction, a home improvement contracting business based out of Hull. For many years, he has worked as an independent snow plow contractor for the state. As a result, he is frequently called to duty by the Massachusetts Highway Department to plow, sand, and salt the road assigned to him — a stretch of Route 3A north and south from the Hingham rotary to the Weymouth line.

According to Attorney General Tom Reilly's office, during the Tuesday, March 8 snowstorm, which produced whiteout conditions in many areas on the South Shore, State Police assigned to the Attorney General's Office observed Gratta plow and salt his route on Route 3A before allegedly leaving the Global Positioning System device assigned to him by MassHighway, which tracks his location, in a snow bank on the side of the road in a white paper bag. Once the GPS device was out of his snow plowing truck, Gratta allegedly plowed a private institution, using the salt provided by the state. He then allegedly retrieved the GPS and returned to plowing Route 3A.

The investigation found that some time later during the same snowstorm, Gratta allegedly met Eddy who works for Gratta's contracting business and also plows for MassHighway, and handed over the GPS device to him. Eddy allegedly stored the device in his vehicle and continued on Gratta's assigned route, to make it look like he was still on the job, while Gratta resumed plowing and salting private areas in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull, which were not part of his state route.

Attorney Robert Jubinville, who is representing both men in the case, said Gratta left his route with good cause.

"He left his route because he got a call to do a nursing home," said Jubinville. Although he was not sure which nursing home Gratta plowed, he said the person who normally clears its roads had a truck which was out of commission and there was an emergency situation which needed immediate attention. "They couldn't get an ambulance up there," he said. Gratta was five minutes away from the nursing home, and he spent five minutes plowing to help out, and had planned to be back on his way, until he was stopped by the police. "The whole thing would have been 15 minutes," Jubinville said.

Jubinville said part of the charges relate to Gratta's using state salt on a private way, but he said because Gratta plows both privately and for the state, he had a combination of salt in the back of his truck. In the end, "One could make the argument that the last yard of salt he used for the nursing home was his anyway," he said.

In addition, Jubinville said Gratta has not received payment for the plowing he did that night, and as a result, the Commonwealth may find there was no violation.

Jubinville said they are going to try to resolve the issue during the April pre-trial conference, and it is his hope the Commonwealth will dismiss the charges. However, he said if it doesn't, they will bring the matter before a jury.

Magical Moon open house

Donna Green helps children with cancer

The Magical Moon Foundation announces an open house and spring celebration on Saturday, March 19, at the Donna Green Studio 11 Elm St., Cohasset Village, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

This celebration is to help raise money and awareness for the Magical Moon Foundation's ongoing project, The Velveteen Rabbit's Gift of Courage.

Celebrating the first item finished that will be going into the package for children with cancer, the studio will be offering Velveteen Rabbit Easter Baskets for sale. Each one is uniquely hand-crafted and contains the Velveteen Rabbit plush bunny along with myriad Easter and Spring collectibles.

Monique's Fairy Loft is also busy making spring baskets that are so magical you won't want to open them for fear a fairy will escape!

What better way to celebrate life and spring than to be surrounded by beautiful art and music and support a worthy cause.

There will be a delectable assortment of refreshments for your enjoyment. And for the amusement of any children, the real Velveteen Easter Bunny will be handing out treats for children and information on the Courage project to adults.

In honor of those in the battle, Donna will be handing out Magical Moon T-shirts for anyone who has survived cancer. There will only be a limited number of these available, so arrive early and announce that you are a survivor.

What better way to celebrate life and spring than to be surrounded by beautiful art and music and support a worthy cause. Spreading the word is also a way to make a contribution!

For information about the Velveteen Rabbit's Gift of Courage for children with cancer, Call The Magical Moon Foundation at 1-800-840-0205 or visit The Donna Green Studio at 11 Elm Street in Cohasset Village any Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

King's supports Daffodil Days

As days lengthen and icicles melt at midday, spring's approach is very evident at King Jewelers! Since midwinter, the store has been collecting orders for daffodil bouquets in preparation for "Daffodil Days"— a celebration of spring. The long awaited blossoms will arrive in the store on Wednesday March 23. All proceeds from the sales of the bouquets benefit the American Cancer Society.

King's continues the tradition of supporting this organization and its programs this year by inviting youth who have participated in community service projects to join in the event. Alison Cronin of Weymouth, who was named Miss Massachusetts Teen USA, will be present from 2-4p.m. in the store to meet with these young people, greet guests and draw the winning names from a raffle of two fine jewelry pieces given by King's.

A senior at Weymouth High School, Alison donates her time to causes such as cancer-related events and drug abuse resistance. King Jewelers is honored to present her to the community on this special day as she serves in her role as "goodwill ambassador for Massachusetts."

"We are anxious to encourage young people that they can and do make a difference when they devote their efforts to charitable causes," said Valerie King. "Right in our own community there are so many families touched by cancer. Much of the energy and determination that make fundraising events successful begins with children and teens. That's why we are inviting them to join us in this year's celebration. We want to recognize their hard work and compassion and emphasize that kids have the power to change the world."

This year King's has surpassed the donations made last year to the American Cancer Society thanks to the generosity of customers and friends. The flowers will be available to be claimed on Wednesday, March 23, when the store hosts its second annual Celebration of Spring Party. All those who have participated in this charitable cause will be treated to spring jewelry collections on display for the day.

On view will be the newest designs in 18 karat gold, diamond, colored stone and silver jewelry from Lorenzo and Simon- Golub, the couture designs of Jarretiere, ekdesigns newest spring pieces and estate jewelry. Representatives from some of these design houses will be present to discuss the collection with customers.

Alison Cronin of Weymouth, who was named Miss Massachusetts Teen USA, will be at Kings from 2-4p.m. March 23.

The public is invited to join the Kings and their customers and guests at this event. Proceeds from daffodil sales are given to the American Cancer Society. For more information please call King Jewelers-781-383-1755.

O'Hare is sweet on 'Charity'

Revival of classic musical comes to town prior to Broadway

Actor Denis O'Hare freely admits he is not a fan of most Broadway musicals. "I don't enjoy too many of them, because they sugarcoat reality," the Tony Award-winner explained recently by telephone from Chicago. O'Hare does like "Sweet Charity," however, which is a good thing since he has a featured role in the Walter Bobbie-directed revival of the musical beginning performances Friday at Boston's Colonial Theatre prior to Broadway.

"This show is true to the Fellini film, 'Nights of Cabiria,' that inspired it. The world it depicts is based in reality, which is one of the reasons I can get behind this production. I do mostly straight theater, but I did workshops of this show with both Marisa Tomei and Jane Krakowski and I stayed with it when Christina Applegate was cast in the lead." With a book by Neil Simon, music by Cy Coleman and lyrics by Dorothy Fields, and based on an original screenplay by Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinnelli, and Ennio Plaiano, "Sweet Charity" is a funny and poignant look at the romantic missteps of dance hall hostess Charity Hope Valentine.

Among the Mr. Wrongs who capture Charity's heart is Oscar, an accountant who falls in love with Charity and then leaves her. It is an unusual story progression for a musical comedy, but one endorsed by Oscar's alter ego. "Oscar is a very shy person. Meeting Charity changes him, but he comes to his senses when it turns out she is not who she said she was and is instead a dance hall girl. Oscar dumps Charity when he realizes he can't handle what she does for a living," explains O'Hare. "I'm Oscar's advocate, even when the audience is mad at him for leaving Charity, because the decision he makes is an honest one."

Oscar may leave Charity, but O'Hare is loyal to Applegate, whose work in the role -originated in 1966 by Gwen Verdon and played in the 1969 feature film by Shirley MacLaine - has so far earned the "Married With Children" actress decidedly mixed reviews on the road. "There are very few people who can play the role of Charity and Christina is one of them. She has all the show's big numbers ('Big Spender,' 'If My Friends Could See Me Now,' 'Baby, Dream Your Dream') and she handles them very well."

Applegate may spend more time at center stage, but O'Hare — who won a 2003 Tony Award for his pitch-perfect portrayal of an accountant in Richard Greenberg's "Take Me Out" — is happy to share the spotlight. "I don't mind playing another accountant. It is an improvement over the serial killers that I've played on 'Law & Order' on television and in 'Assasins' on Broadway," the 42 year old says with a laugh.

(At press time, it was announced that Christina Applegate will miss the Boston engagement of "Sweet Charity" after breaking her foot during a performance in Chicago. Broadway veteran Charlotte D'Amboise will replace her in Boston, although Applegate is expected to resume the role by the time show opens in New York next month.)

"Sweet Charity" will have a pre-Broadway run at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, March 18-27. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com.

Idle hands in NYC

Python funnyman tells us what makes the Big Apple Spamtastic

Eric Idle's "The Greedy Bastard Diary: A Comic Tour of America" (HarperCollins, $23.95), a "confessional travel book" based on his 49-city Greedy Bastard tour in 2003, hit bookstores this week. His "Monty Python's Spamalot," a musical based on "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," officially opens on Broadway tonight at the Schubert Theatre.

Los Angeles-based Idle, the third-tallest member of Monty Python, talked by phone with Herald Travel Editor Fran Golden about traveling to New York and more. (The following has been edited.)

Q: When you fly into New York what's the first thing you do?

A: Hope your driver's there, otherwise you're dead, you know, you're trying to avoid all the Third World people trying to sell you limousine rides.

Q: In your book ("The Greedy Bastard Diary") you show a fondness for the Ritz-Carlton New York, Central Park. Is that your hotel of choice?

A: I wish. Right now I'm stuck in a Broadway hotel because I like to be walking distance from the theater, you know, nip in and out. I like to be on 44th Street, a block from the theater.

Q: So you're in the heart of it? A: I'm in the heart of it, absolutely. The great thing about New York is you can't get anywhere. Even if you're in a car, it's just to go the wrong way up the wrong block across two or three different streets in a different direction, all coming back down to put yourself off on the other way. I walk a lot there. Pedestrianism is the only possible way. I'm a bit terrified of going below ground so I have never figured out the subway.

Q: Got any favorite New York restaurants?

A: Orso (322 W. 46th St.), they're very nice. And there is Doge (142 W. 44th St.), they are very nice to me. Angus McIndoe (258 W. 44th St.), opposite the theater, which is nice for after the show.

Q: What are some of your other favorite things to do in the Big Apple?

A: Central Park South has always been my preferred destination. It's lovely to look over the park. It's nice to walk through the park, even if they're not filling it with orange staples (a reference to Christo's recent installation). I have an idea — I'd put some trees in— (it) would be nice. What was the question? Shopping, I like book shopping. I like going to Barney's for bits of clothing. I like lunch at Barney's, it's very nice. I love Madison and Lexington. I love walking up and down there shopping. That's good fun.

Q: So you're a shopper?

A: I'm a trainee shopper, yes, I'm not a professional at all. I do like to exploit my metrosexuality when I'm in New York.

Q: What are some recent purchases?

A: The things I like to buy are things I don't have to try on. I like socks and I like hats and sweaters and things. That to me is the best.

Q: Do you hit the comedy clubs?

A: Never. I'm not interested in comedy much. That's what I do. I like sitting around in the hotel playing guitar. I must always have my tea with me. I have a list of small things I have to travel with. Good music always, good smells (like scented candles) and good tea. You can make a hotel room very much feel like home if you have the lights properly and your music on. I must always have a CD player. Hotels tend to have them nowadays. So I bring my CDs, which is fabulous.

Q: What sort of CDs?

A: Classical mainly. A little bit of jazz for the evenings.

Q: When you're in New York do you people-watch?

A: Yes, I mean I like the street life. I like wandering around. I do like that a lot. I like being able to go to MOMA (Museum of Modern Art) to have tea and look at the art. That's very pleasant. And the fact is there are lots of movies and art galleries and there's lots to do. But because I've been working so hard I haven't really done as much as I might.

Q: Where's the Holy Grail in New York?

A: The Holy Grail's whatever you want really. I mean there's a Holy Grail of art. It's a metaphor. There's a Holy Grail of books. Well, there's probably a Holy Grail of bad restaurants. A Holy Grail of Trump buildings.

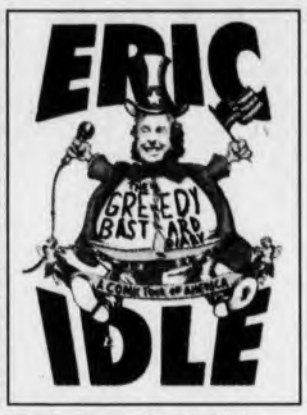
Q: Do you love New York?

A: I met my wife there. I was married there. It's not a place I aspire to live at the moment because I like the sun to shine and a garden and flowers and a little bit more nature than you get in New York.

Q: What do you remember about performing in Boston?

A: I've always enjoyed Boston as a city. And we get great audiences because of the colleges. It was like the best show we did. We closed our 2001 tour in Boston. They went completely nuts. This time we played a really decrepit theater, The Morpheum, the Mausoleum theater.

Q: What's your prediction for "Spamalot"?



A: Well, it's sort of unstoppable at the moment. But I don't say that without trepidation and fingers crossed. But the reports, they're going completely nuts.

Q: Is this the year of Eric Idle?

A: Well, it seems to be the weekend of Eric Idle anyway. I've just had a lot of stuff open. That's the way it happens in show business. It all opens at once and so I'll go away and hide for a little while and carry on with my life.

Feeling fenced in by seawall plans

Safety may trump beauty

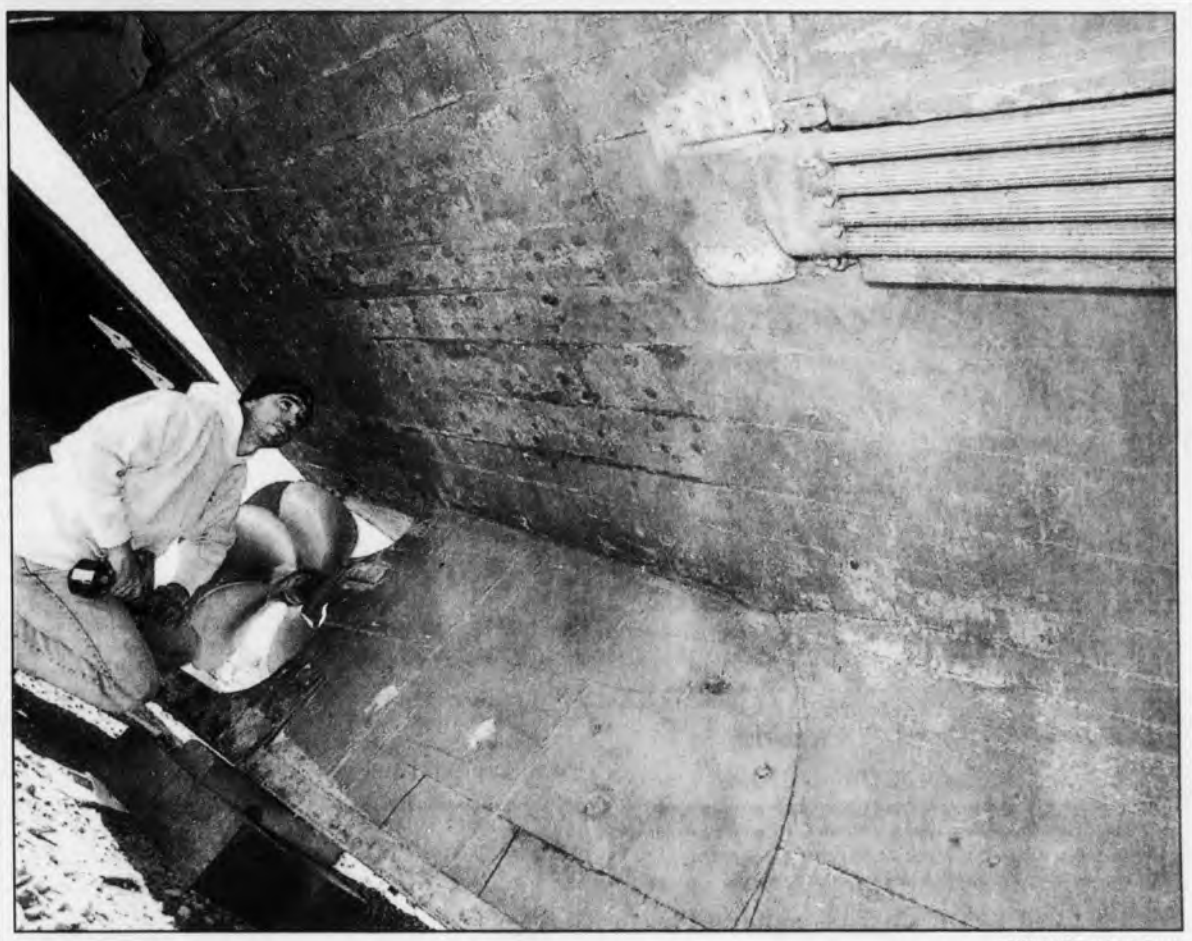
By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The airy, white, split-rail wooden fence along the harbor could soon be relegated to the annals of Cohasset history.

Its departure, however, won't be without considerable wailing about the loss of small-town character and potential view obstruction that its more up-to-date and safer replacement would engender.

Christine Player, project manager with Vine Associates, which is designing the "harbor seawallscape," got another dose of town quirkiness at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting. She was put literally on the "hot seat" to explain fence treatment that would enhance safety but be different from the existing, beloved fence.

This was Player's second visit in recent months. At the board's Dec. 22 meeting, selectmen asked her to return with modifications to the fence and sidewalk design.



Building Commissioner Bob Egan was also on hand Tuesday to help explain state building codes and deliver the unwelcome news a replacement fence needs to comply.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis announced in no uncertain terms the town should not fool around with safety issues regarding fences. He said now that its contracted engineer has explained the current fence is unsafe, the town can no longer plead ignorance and has opened itself up to liability

"This is inconsistent with what most people like to see around the harbor."
— Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan

The state requires fences with a drop of more than four feet to be at least 42 inches high and spacing between vertical rails be no more than four inches. The town fence is much shorter and has horizontal rails. The state doesn't like horizontal rails because they create a ladder effect. In other words, a child could climb up a

Post Prom Party gets go-ahead at middle-high school

Pending update for school board

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The good news is plans are moving forward for a post prom party at the middle-high school this spring and it should be a lot safer for some student participants than last year's event.

The school department and parent organizers are now on the same page, so to speak, when it comes to the potential for alcohol abuse among the teenagers, who could either arrive under the influence or try to drink during the night-long celebration.

Students and their parents will be required to sign a responsibility contract so both will be accountable, explained Lynn Durkin of the Post Prom Committee.

While at this point the use of breathalyzers has been ruled out, a police presence has not. Organizers will hire a police detail throughout the event that runs from midnight to 5 a.m.

"I want to see changes made, this is very important that this event comes off without a hitch."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, school committee

If chaperones determine there is an issue with students, they will be asked to leave and their parents will be called, Durkin said.

The school committee agreed to allow the use of school facilities for the May 27 event pending an update from the Post Prom Committee in early April. After the prom, seniors arrive via a trolley at the high school at midnight.

Event organizers are also looking at a plan requiring that no student drive to the event – a proposal that won high marks from CHS Principal Jack DeLorenzo.

"Eliminating cars completely is an excellent idea," DeLorenzo said at last week's school committee meeting.

The school committee has been cool to continuing to allow the Post Prom Party, now in its ninth year, at the middle-high school following alarming reports that last year's event included student drinking and rowdiness.

Last year's seniors found a way to sneak alcohol into the school beforehand. During the day, while the school was kept open to allow underclassmen to view the decorations, some students apparently hid alcohol in lockers and in the plants, and some had alcohol taped to their legs when the came to the party, according to reports.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy, who served as a chaperone for last year's Post Prom Party, said the experience has made her rethink whether the school should host

Navy veteran lived life on the water

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Howard Gleason was always a man of the sea. Growing up in Cohasset surrounded by ocean, he spent many happy summer days sailing with his friends and taking part in water activities at the Cohasset Yacht Club. While coasting along the shores of his hometown, Gleason gained the experience that would one day lead him to pursue a career in the United States Navy, where he served as a lieutenant during World War II.

Gleason was born in 1922 to parents Hollis and Emily Gleason. One of four children, he lived at 38 Atlantic Ave. with brothers Edward and Herbert and sister Eleanor.

Eleanor remembers how her brother always had an affinity for the ocean. She recalled the year her brother, along with boyhood pals David Place, Dave Ketchum, and Bill Binnian bought an old 34-foot sloop for $400, which they spent the entire summer refurbishing. She recalled how proud they were of the boat, and how they used it constantly. Place said he remembers when the boat was finished, the three sailed it all the way down to Mt. Desert Island in Maine.

But when summer was over, Gleason was a student at Derby Academy in Hingham, as was Place. The two would sometimes ride their bikes up the newly constructed Route 3A to school, which Pace recalls was quite an adventure for elementary school boys. Eleanor remembers she would take the Village revitalization resurfaces

Asphalt sidewalks seen as cost saver

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

With so much going on in Cohasset, not the least of which are the override, sewer issues and the April 2 annual Town Meeting – selectmen hope townspeople will find some time for the village revitalization project.

They plan to hold a public hearing within the next few weeks to air revised plans for the downtown area whose improvement designs have been in the works for upwards of a decade.

The $1.8 million project is being paid for through grants, not local property taxes. But streetscape improvements have been sidetracked over the years due to disagreement over how much and exactly what should be done to revitalize the village area.

As the clock is ticking on the state PWED grant (Public Works Economic Development) that expires May 30, there's a renewed sense of urgency in the selectmen's office at Town Hall to finalize plans for the project. It's not clear if the town could apply for another extension on the grant, which was awarded in 2001.

To that end, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who also sits on the Downtown Revitalization Review Committee, told his fellow board members Tuesday, there isn't enough money to install concrete sidewalks, as planned.

Potential 'home rule' petition percolates over sewer access

Could allow Cook to hookup

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The town could be on the verge of taking control of its future as far as sewers are concerned.

During a two-hour-long "Cook Estate Working Group" meeting Tuesday, a plan surfaced by which Cohasset could ask for a Home Rule Petition – or special legislation – that would allow the town to set its own rules when it comes to doling out sewer capacity.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis explained that currently if the town opts to sewer the proposed Cook Estate, it's opening itself up to litigation because Cook is outside the Central Sewer District. Other projects, which are also outside the district, are ahead of it in the proverbial sewer line.

Sewering Cook today also runs the risk of having to include other property owners along the new sewer main that would have the ability to connect by right. So the town would have to look at the totality of the geographic area in which the project is located.

"The general laws of the commonwealth set up a series of mandates and regulations and those have consequences for the town," DeRensis explained. In other words, the town cannot do "spot sewering," he said.

"We can't say, 'we're only going to take care of Mrs. McGillicuddy' when others with the pipe in front of their house have the right to connect."

He further noted it's not that the town could not hook up Cook but the real question is at what price and what consequences.

But the answer to the town's dilemma could lie in special legislation modeled after Sturbridge, which enacted new sewer bylaws to give it control of what gets sewered. The legislation also provided that municipality with the ability to reserve capacity for the future.

Essentially special legislation would allow Cohasset to pick and choose what gets sewered, as determined by Town Meeting, and it would all be perfectly legal, according to DeRensis.

The issue is significant for Cohasset, which is trying to construct affordable age-restricted housing for it senior citizens on the Cook Estate property off the top of Sohier Street behind Cohasset Plaza. The clock is also ticking on the project. The heirs to the property have given the town until April 30 to show significant progress.

"The general laws of the commonwealth set up a series of mandates and regulations and those have consequences for the town."
— Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

The Cook project hit a roadblock when it was determined the 95-units could not be accommodated with an on-site system, as initially planned when the project won Town Meeting approval.

Cook developers, Northland Residential Company, have proposed a "hybrid" wastewater proposal, using an on-site system for the market-rate units and hooking the affordable units up to the sewer.

That proposal didn't get high marks from DeRensis or Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz because it would still open the door to Cedarmere and Avalon.

Cedarmere is a multi-unit, seniors-only housing project planned off Beechwood Street; and Avalon is a 200-unit apartment complex planned off Rte. 3A.

All three – Cook, Cedarmere and Avalon – would include some affordable housing. The Sewer commission has denied Cedarmere and Avalon sewer capacity.

The legislation would give the town a variance from state law so it would not have to sewer on a first-come, first-serve basis. The bylaw would also create sewer districts with strict boundaries and the only way to create a new district or change an existing one would be at Town Meeting.

DeRensis said the towns of Chelmsford and Provincetown were able to get variances. He explained the state is willing to award variances because it recognizes towns are under pressure from development and it wants to promote "smart growth."

Town Manager Bill Griffin asked if the town did everything as described and the legislation was adopted, then it redrew the district to include Cook Estate – would the town be protected from litigation.

"Yes," DeRensis said. "The General Court (state Legislature) is immune to lawsuits."

He said the special legislation would enable the town to put an end to its "sewer wars" and bring peace, order and structure.

The Cook Working Group talked about the possibility of calling a special Town Meeting to pass the bylaw. It's too late to include the proposal on the April 2 annual Town Meeting Warrant.

The town might also be able to enact a temporary bylaw until the special Act passes.

The committee grappled with the complexities of the issue and decided it needed another meeting before presenting this proposal to selectmen.

In addition to Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Ronnie McMorris, Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, Margy Charles and Dave Fulton of the Senior Housing Committee, Town Manager Griffin and Town Counsel DeRensis are on the Cook Estate Working Group. When appointed, the group was charged with finding alternate solutions to enable the 95 unit project to move forward, as well other potential solutions for allowing senior housing to be built on the site. Town officials agree that seniors need more housing options in Cohasset.

Flash back: Voters at the 2003 special Fall Town Meeting allocated $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre parcel of Cook-owned property, located off Sohier Street, and the property was then marketed to developers along with the town's nine adjoining acres. The town-owned 9.8-acre parcel had been eyed for senior housing for years but access was a problem. With the purchase of the Cook estate, access could be gained off Sohier Street. The Cook Estate development falls under the town's Senior Overlay District Bylaw that permits higher-density housing than would otherwise be allowed and requires the development include a percentage of affordable housing.

Safety issues on seawall fence take precedence fence with horizontal rails, presenting a safety hazard. In Cohasset's case, that child could end up in the harbor.

The fence is taking center stage because the seawall and walkway that run along the harbor from the Atlantica parking lot to the Mill River Marine Boatyard site need to be refurbished.

Pedestrians heavily traverse the walkway along the top of the stone seawall, which has begun to fall apart. Temporary repairs were made to the seawall in the 1990s but more needs to be done. Past Town Meetings appropriated a total of $40,000 for studies and preliminary engineering and design; last fall's Dec. 6 special Town Meeting appropriated $600,000 for final engineering, design and repair.

Player's plans for an ornamental rail fence made of galvanized steel were met with objections at the selectmen's meeting.

"This is inconsistent with what most people like to see around the harbor," Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said.

Player presented fence alternatives that do not meet code at the request of selectmen. DeRensis said those have to be off the table.

"You cannot put anything up on public property that does not meet code, that's the end of it," he said.

DeRensis recalled representing a young man who fell over a 36-inch fence and he collected $4.2 million in damages. Injuries the man sustained caused him to be a paraplegic.

"The reason is the human body has a pivot point," he said. "If the fence is too low, a person goes head first."

Sullivan asked why the town could not just replace the existing fence with a similar fence, to which DeRensis responded the existing fence is "an accident ready to happen."

Charles Humphreys, an attorney who was in the audience, suggested the town seek a variance from the building code, not for the height – which the state views as critical — but for the minimum distance between the rails.

Richard Brooks of Nichols Road suggested clear, plastic Lexan sheets be used that would not obstruct the view.

Richard DeLima of Summer Street challenged whether the existing fence is in fact unsafe.

In addition to investigating fence treatments, selectmen directed Player during their Dec. 22 meeting to modify the plans. They wanted her to reduce the width of the sidewalk to accommodate better parking, investigate using sloped granite curbing, and eliminate the cobble/brick buffer strip between the roadway and sidewalk to better accommodate parking. She presented plans Tuesday incorporating all those changes.

Much of Tuesday's discussion also centered on the "seawall concrete cap" that would run along the edge of the sidewalk nearest the harbor. The elevated cap is seen as a safety feature. Since the December meeting, Parker reduced the cap from 12 inches to six, but in a majority vote Tuesday selectmen opted for a "flush cap" that would be level with the sidewalk.

The elimination of the raised cap doesn't increase the total height of the fence from the ground up because the building code requirement would include the cap. In other words, with a six-inch raised cap, the fence – which is installed on top of the cap – would be 36 inches, with a flush cap, the fence itself is 42 inches. However, the distance from the ground to the top of the fence doesn't change in either case.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said a steel fence would be a "dramatic change" to the area.

Humphreys, who lives off Atlantic Avenue, described it as a "jailhouse look."

Selectmen reached a consensus that more community feedback is needed to ensure the town is comfortable with a fence design.

Player is going to return with three alternates, one of which meets state codes, and two of which would need variances from the state code. Of the two needing variances, one would have vertical rails wider than four inches and the other would have horizontal rails.

The Cohasset Mariner wins prestigious newspaper award

The Cohasset Mariner was honored with a Publick Occurrences award from the New England Newspaper Association for the paper's in-depth coverage last year of the Cohasset police department.

The award, presented last Friday in Boston, is named after the first newspaper published in the American Colonies. The paper was shut down by the royal governor of Boston more than 300 years ago, after only one issue.

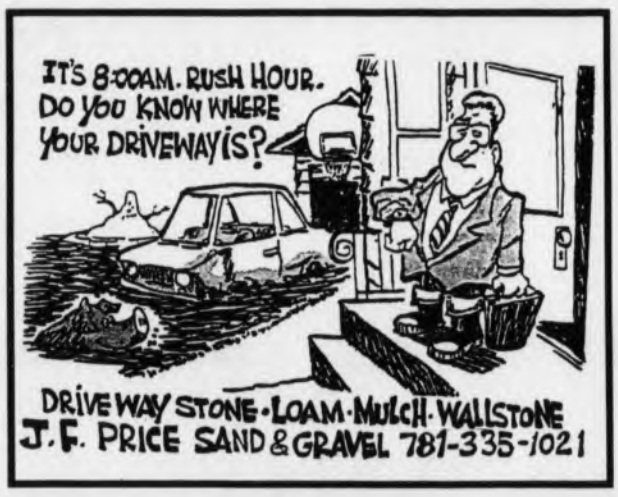
The award, presented last Friday in Boston, is named after the first newspaper published in the American Colonies.

The Mariner was among 10 papers from New England selected to receive this prestigious award for "superior achievement" in reporting on a particular subject. Other papers honored with the award included the Providence Journal, The Lawrence Eagle Tribute and the Springfield Republican.

The judges, all Neiman fellows at Harvard University, said they were impressed by the breadth of coverage. "Publick Occurrences award is being given to the editor of the Cohasset Mariner for an exhaustive series of stories on the abuse of power by a local police chief and town manager. In this case, the editor also was reporter, and following up on a tip regarding two suspended police officers, uncovered a trail of mishandled arrests, nepotism and acts of retribution at the highest levels of local government."

"At times, these were not popular stories to be writing about and we took our hits, but we knew something wasn't quite adding up when the two officers were suspended," said Mark Skala, the paper's editor in chief. "Mary Ford's persistence paid off and readers were given fair and balanced accounts of what happened. The public's right to know has to come first."

Other members of the staff, including reporter Samantha Brown, photographer Robin Chan and cartoonist Jim Hamilton all contributed to the body of work.



The awards luncheon was part of the newspaper association's annual convention.

Post Prom Party gets go-ahead at Cohasset middle-high school

the event.

At last week's school committee meeting, MacCarthy continued to stress a "zero-tolerance" policy at the event is critical. "I'm concerned that certain pieces are not in place yet," she said, adding she realizes the Post Prom Committee is working hard and has had to "jump through more hoops than in past years."

"But I want to see changes made, this is very important that this event comes off without a hitch."

In a telephone interview Tuesday, MacCarthy said there are still some loose ends that need to be tied up before she could give final approval.

For example, regarding police details, MacCarthy says she wants to have a clear idea of how many police officers will be there and for how long. She also wants assurances that the chaperones are properly trained as to what their responsibilities are and what steps they need to follow if a problem arises.

MacCarthy supports the use of a breathalyzer, although there are no plans to use the device at this year's Post Prom Party. While supporting the use of breathalyzers at school-related events, police do not feel it is their role to administer the test.

Supt., of Schools Denise Walsh said at last week's meeting the schools have not established procedures on how a breathalyzer would be used or how test results would be handled.

School committee members expressed some concern about how to handle requests from students who want to leave the Post Prom Party early. Chairman Rick Shea described the hours from 3-5 a.m. as the "witching hour" when students are tired and want to go home. The consensus at the meeting, however, was the event should not end early for safety reasons.

Durkin of the post prom committee said there will be more entertainment and activities to keep the students occupied during those hours. The committee is also asking other towns, which have similar events, for ideas.

She also explained the committee would work closely with this year's chaperones to ensure they understand the guidelines, which will be very clear.

Durkin said the committee also surveyed seniors to gauge their reaction to the contract. She said 70 percent don't have a problem with it. Some students are frustrated and feel they should be treated with respect and more trust in that they would follow the rules without needing a contract, she said.

She praised the school administrators, who are the ones who get the blame and negative feedback when things go awry, even when the event is not a school-sponsored one.

DeLorenzo, who has been very wary of allowing the event to take place at the school again this year, wished the Post Prom effort the best.

"This sounds really organized," DeLorenzo said about the plans. "I love the kids and hope everything goes well."

Potential exists for student breathalyzer in Cohasset

Device is used in other towns

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At this stage, Cohasset hasn't opted to join other area high schools like those in Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell in administering breathalyzers to students entering school-related functions to determine if they are under the influence of alcohol.

The issue surfaced in January and again last week during discussions about the annual Post Prom Party, an event during which students are "locked in" at the high school following the prom for a night full of planned activities intended to keep them safe.

Post prom and/or post graduation night-long events have grown in popularity in many towns over the past decade as a way to prevent the drinking that is often seen as a rite of passage for teenagers during graduation time.

While the Post Prom Party, which is privately funded and organized by parents, is not a school-sponsored function, it does involve students and is being held at the high school with school committee's approval.

'It is something that would ensure zero tolerance and a safe environment."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, school committee

Last year's Post Prom Party in Cohasset was marked by student drunkenness and rowdiness – resulting in the school committee reconsidering whether the school department should provide the venue for the event.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said administering a breathalyzer test to each student as he or she arrives is the best and fairest way to ensure "zero tolerance," which is what the event is supposed to promote. She does not think use of a breathalyzer should be ruled out in the future, although it won't be implemented this prom season.

'It is something that would ensure zero tolerance and a safe environment," MacCarthy said. "As a parent, I would find it helpful to have that worry off my shoulders. Prom night for parents can be an unnerving time."

MacCarthy says if a breathalyzer is used, it should be administered to each student that way there is no judgment call. "If a student hasn't been drinking then they would have nothing to worry about."

Police Chief James Hussey said the police think a breathalyzer can be a good deterrent at school activities, but it has to be administered by someone other than police officers.

"Breathalyzers at school functions are not administered to enforce criminal law, but to ensure safety at a school activity," Hussey explained. "Using police officers in that role can send the wrong message. It's not a criminal action."

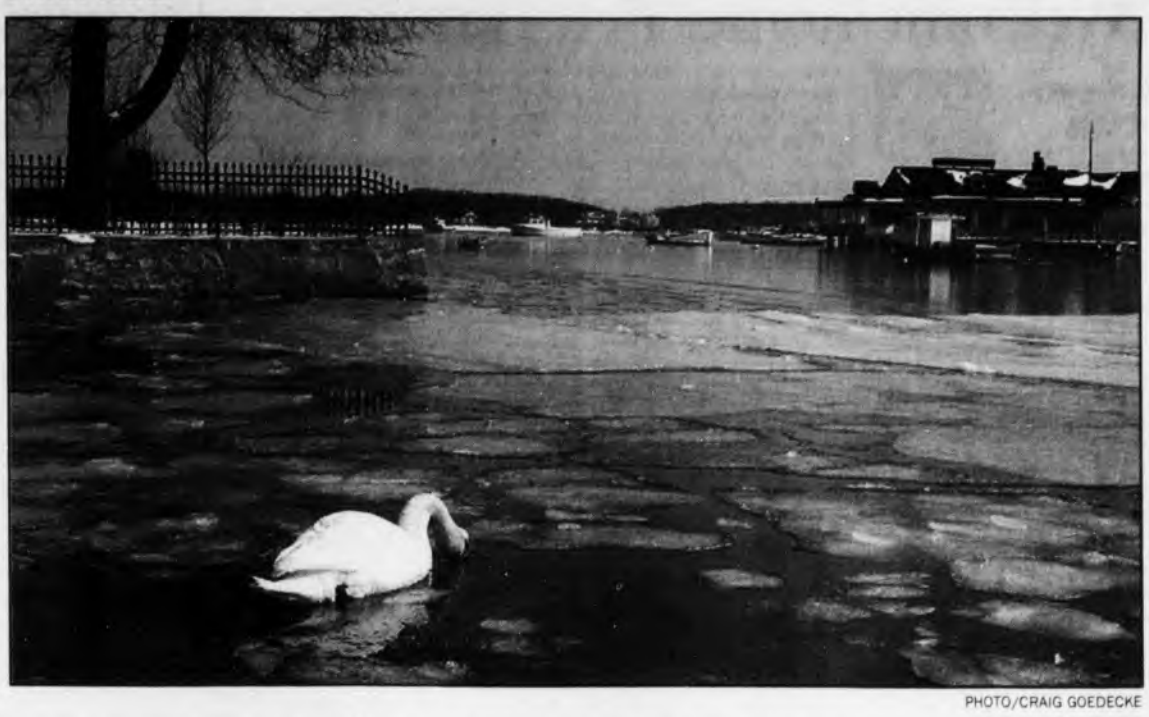
Hussey said officers would be there to help contact the parents of a child, who is found to be under the influence of alcohol, and would even escort the student home to parents if necessary.

He explained the police union brought to his attention how breathalyzers are handled in other towns . "They were more appropriately administered by school administrators or those sponsoring the event," he said.



Hussey said the student breathalyzer has a pass/fail and does not take a blood alcohol measurement like the one administered to people suspected of drunk driving. He would support the use of a breathalyzer at school-related events.

"I think anyone who heard about the problem in Belmont last week when several kids were rushed to the hospital with alcohol poisoning at a school dance would think having a breathalyzer could be a good thing," he said.

Hingham High Principal Paula Girouard McCann said Hingham has a student breathalyzer, which has been used on occasion.

"All students who buy tickets to a dance must sign a form which includes this statement: 'Students and parents should be aware that breathalyzer tests may be given at all dances. Students who refuse to take a breathalyzer test will be removed from the dance and released to a parent. The school will impose appropriate disciplinary action,'" Girouard McCann said.

Sharing memories of 25 years in Costa Rica

Author grew up in Cohasset

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Roberta Hayes left the New England coastal shores of Cohasset in 1970 and headed for a land of "La Rotunda, La Virgen de los Angeles and Rats, Bats, Cucas and Ghosts." That seemingly mystical, storybook land was and is the very real Central American republic of Costa Rica.

"Such is Life in the Tropics" actually began as an autobiographical feature that Hayes wrote for a Milton Academy publication for her 40th high school reunion in 1996.

What brought Hayes to this new tropical home was her then half-dozen-year-old marriage to Ernesto Macaya, a Costa Rican native who was also a classmate of Hayes' at Milton Academy in Massachusetts in the mid 1950s, and by the 70s a board of directors member for the national oil refinery back home.

La Rotunda, La Virgen de los Angeles and Rats, Bats, Cucas and Ghosts are just a few of the many intriguing, enchanting icons of Tico (Costa Rican) culture that Hayes has discovered in 25 years of off-and-on, multiple location residency in Costa Rica.

They are also the titles of three chapters, or anecdotes, from Hayes' recently published book, "Such is Life in the Tropics — 25 Years in Costa Rica," a collection of 40 anecdotes offering the author's prized memoirs of her life in Costa Rica — the discoveries, challenges, adaptations and spiritual growth of more than two decades experience.

"Since Costa Rica is now so popular as a tourist resort I wanted people to also know about the nature, sincere people, and spiritual dimension, angels and witchcraft, in this third world," said Hayes from her current Costa Rican home in Escazu, a rural village southwest of the urban metro area of San Jose.

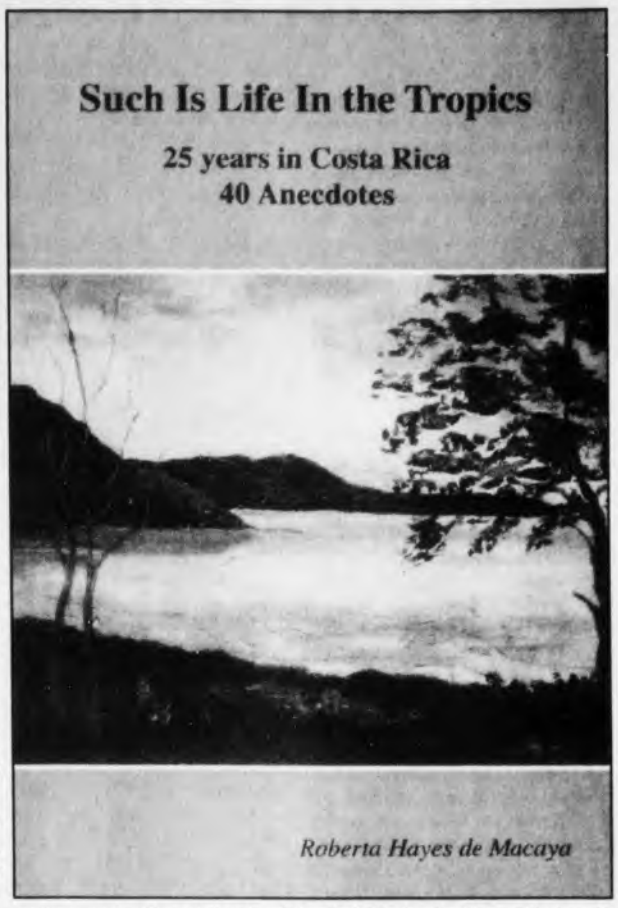
Hayes, 66, whose name appears on the book as Roberta Hayes de Macaya, was born in Boston and grew up in Cohasset in the 40s and 50s. She spent some of her grade school years at Cohasset's Ripley Road School, then later attended Hingham's Derby Academy before moving on to Milton Academy for high school. In 1960, she graduated from Smith College with a B.A. in French Literature after spending her junior year in Paris.

Hayes' husband, Ernesto Macaya, graduated with her from Milton Academy in 1956, then later earned a B.S. from MIT four years later. The couple were married in 1963.

"Such is Life in the Tropics" actually began as an autobiographical feature that Hayes wrote for a Milton Academy publication for her 40th high school reunion in 1996. No latecomer to the writing field, the author has a strong literary background, having been an editor for the Derby Academy newspaper, Derby News, as far back as grade school, and published in Queen of All Hearts, a New York State magazine devoted to stories about the Blessed Virgin Mary, among other publications.

"Can't remember if the others were Rosebud magazine, Ploughshares, or Story (all or some) a while ago," Hayes mused.

The author's quarter-century



Roberta Hayes de Macaya and her husband Ernesto.

Costa Rican journey takes the reader through a series of family residences, from the seaport town of Puntarenas, then on to San Jose, beachside gatherings on the Pacific coast resort of Cuajiniquil, and an eventual permanent abode in Escazu. Understandably, Hayes' recollections sometimes revel in the tropical splendor of Costa Rica, describing palm-laden beaches, lush back-country roads, tranquil seaside hikes and lavish celebrations of feasts and dancing with keen, eye-for-detail observation.

La Rotunda is what Hayes describes as the heart of the Barrio Jimenez neighborhood where the family lived in San Jose, a brick column and grass island quadrangle in the street that was "the rendezvous place for planning most activities for all ages in our barrio." La Virgen de los Angeles is the statue of a black virgin atop the basilica in Cartago, the patroness and center of all Costa Rican culture which "every Costa Rican considers a personal protectress of his country and way of life."

Hayes does not paint everything with a rose-colored view. She describes the poverty, prostitution and permeable disease of inner-village Puntarenas. Another anecdote recalls a New Year's Eve beach party in 1984, when the Sandinista-Contra war in neighboring Nicaragua sometimes spilled over into Costa Rica, and a camouflaged, machine-gun armed contra soldier wandering into the party's view. What follows is a tense moment alleviated by an extended welcoming hand.

But for the most part, Hayes' memoirs reveal her spiritual nature, and offer spiritual uplift to the reader.

Said Hayes, "The most valued part of my life in Costa Rica has been to live surrounded by nature with my friends the bobo bird and the midnight owl outside my bedroom window. I'm hoping perhaps readers of the book will feel the inspiration of lush rain forests and the azure seas, or the ever present angels, always coaxing, helping us, just beneath the fabric of our daily lives."

"Such is Life in the Tropics" is available locally at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza.

CP Harvey Jazz concert and workshop

The CP Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund and the Cohasset Middle High School announce the third annual jazz workshop and concert on April 6 at 7:30 p.m.

The concert will be held at the Gallery of the Cohasset Middle High School. Concert tickets are $8 for students and $15 for adults. All proceeds go to the CP Harvey Scholarship Fund. Call 781-383-4205 for reservations.

The 2005 event features the Bobby Gallegos Quartet. Trumpet player Bobby Gallegos is an Air Force veteran that played in Air Force Bands and then performed at Disney World for 14 years. He is a music educator at local school districts and the Berklee College of Music. Guitar player Ron Bosse is a Berklee graduate and has performed at Tanglewood, Symphony Hall and the Boston Globe Jazz Festival. Rob Egan, also a Berklee alum, is the Quartet's drummer. Rob has toured the US & Europe. Irvin Dhimo is the bass player and learned the jazz of John Coltrane, Charlie Parker and Bill Evans from Yiotus Kiourtsoglu. Irvin is a Berklee Graduate.

The Quartet will hold a workshop for members of the Cohasset Jazz Ensemble. The Cohasset Jazz Ensemble was formed in 2002 and is led by music director Stephanie Hoskin.

Following the workshop the Bobby Gallegos Quartet and the Cohasset Jazz Ensemble will perform for Cohasset residents at a gala concert. In past years, the Ensemble gave explosive performances that kept toes taping and launched spontaneous dancing.

The CP Harvey Memorial Jazz Award will be presented to the student with the best performance.

The CP Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund was established in 2002 by the sons of CP Harvey in loving memory of their father. Its mission is to promote jazz in Cohasset Schools.

Asphalt sidewalks seen as cost saver in village project ranging from brick to concrete (poured or pavers) to asphalt has been the subject of considerable debate in recent years. Everyone seems to want something attractive and safe, but now achieving economies may be the driver behind what material is finally used.

Dormitzer said there is roughly $1.35 million in grants remaining for the project which includes about $1.2 million of the $1.5 million PWED grant and the $165,900 transportation grant for the "St. Stephen's sidewalk" at the foot of the ledge outcropping at the top of South Main Street. The town has spent upwards of $300,000 in design fees. It hired Waterfield Design Group for the project and the company has submitted several "redesigns" ranging from bump-outs at corners and crosswalks to no bumpouts, depending on direction from selectmen.

The "village" project spans from attorney Richard Henderson's office on South Main Street, to the South Shore Community Center, down Depot Court to Pleasant Street; and also includes Brook Street, and Elm Street from Brook to S. Main streets.

Last winter when the town put the project out to bid, only one company responded, Northern Construction Services, whose bid came in about $89,000 too high. Although 14 companies took out bid packages, only Northern actually provided an offer.

The dearth of interested bidders and the price prompted selectmen to revisit the issue.

"The right thing to do is get this job done," Dormitzer said Tuesday.

For the project to be completed using the remaining funds, Dormitzer – with the blessing of the Downtown Revitalization Review Committee – suggested making the sidewalk material asphalt.

Other cost savers include:

- Making the Elm Street improvements and the Red Lion Inn stonewall alternates, meaning they would only be done if funds allow;
- Instead of crosswalks with speed bumps and pavers; use pressed concrete and eliminate the traffic bump;
- Eliminate the bump-out on S. Main Street opposite the town pump;
- Eliminate the bollards (thick posts) at the town pump and pocket park at corner of S. Main and Depot Court;
- Do not modify the pump site in front of Cohasset Hardware except on the Elm Street side to provide a handicap ramp; shorten the crosswalk so it intercepts Elm Street where the old fence and granite end;
- Use brick for the small pocket parks to be created at the intersection of Elm and S. Main streets and at Depot Court
- Coordinate work at Depot Court and Pleasant Street with the MBTA so that there is no gap between the parking lot and intersection.

Dormitzer said $70,000 could be saved by switching from concrete to asphalt for the sidewalks and $42,000 by not improving Elm Street, except for installing a sidewalk on the Fleming's side of the street.

He asked his fellow board members to vote these changes and authorize Town Manager Bill Griffin to re-bid the project and then have a public hearing on the issue.

But Selectman Ronnie McMorris took umbrage with the new scope of the plans because she said they go against the wishes of the town. McMorris said considerable time was spent developing and redoing the plans, and going over each aspect in excruciating detail. She described Dormitzer's proposal as wiping out pedestrian safety improvements which are critical.

"The sidewalks, speed bumps, pocket parks, modifying the pump site are all being thrown out," she said. "One person's vision is being presented to us."

George McGoldrick of the Village Revitalization Review Committee said the committee looked at the budget and made some cuts, he disputed that changes would compromise public safety.

But McMorris said community wide input on the issue needs to be sought before she could agree to significant changes in village improvement plans.

"The downtown belongs to the community," she said.

Agnes McCann, who was in the audience, agreed with McMorris. She said using asphalt for sidewalks does not save money in the long run because it doesn't last. She said the wishes of November 2003 special Town Meeting that opted for concrete sidewalks needed to be adhered to.

But Dormitzer pointed out the Town Meeting vote was not binding because voters approved a "concept."

McMorris asked that whatever changes selectmen voted on be brought to a special Town Meeting, but her motion failed for lack of a second.

Instead the board opted to hold a public hearing on the village changes and "see where they go from there," Chairman Michael Sullivan said. The vote was 4-1 with McMorris opposed.

Flashback: State transportation officials awarded a $1.5 million PWED grant to Cohasset in September 2001 in a special ceremony on the Town Common. The MBTA had agreed to write a letter supporting the town's PWED application as part of its Greenbush mitigation agreement with the town. Although the MBTA letter gave the town's application a boost, the money would be the town's to spend regardless of whether the train project became a reality. In 2001, the fate of the controversial railroad project was still up in the air. The grant also left it up to Cohasset how to use the money for village improvements. PWED grants are awarded for projects the spur economic development.*

Navy veteran lived life on the water

train from Cohasset station to Derby every day.

When the snow started to fall, Pace said Gleason could always be found skiing. Even in the 1930s, before Mt. Washington had a ski lift, Gleason could always be found on the slopes.

During his high school years, Gleason attended boarding school at the Kent School in Connecticut. Although he was many miles away, distance couldn't quell the love he felt for his high school sweetheart Betty Stearns, who grew up on Jerusalem Road.

After graduating from high school, Gleason went on to study at Harvard College, where he participated in the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) program. Gleason enjoyed his naval training tremendously and sped up his courses to enable him to graduate early and enter the Navy. However, after graduation, he made his love for Stearns official, when they were married in October 1943.

While at Harvard, Gleason had an experience that would forever change his life, when a Naval Submarine Corps recruiter spoke to the cadets, sparking his interest in underwater submersion. After enlisting, Gleason was assigned to the USS Submarine "Trigger" in November 1944.

Gleason began his career aboard the submarine as the Officer Captain of the gun crew. He then received a promotion and became the Communications and Commissary Officer in February 1945. However, on its second to last mission, while on patrol near the Ryukyu Archipelago in the South Pacific, Trigger was presumed lost after a lengthy lapse in communication. Gleason and 88 fellow crewmates paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom March 27, 1945. Gleason was just 22 years old.

Eleanor remembers it was well into the spring before the Navy notified the family Gleason and his submarine were missing. Her two other brothers and her husband, John Bleakie, were also away at war, and she had moved back home to Atlantic Avenue to be with her parents.

Eleanor said she remembers sitting in the gardens with her mother one afternoon when a telegram arrived with the news of Howard. Fearful it would aid the "Japanese propaganda machine", the family was forbidden from telling anyone the submarine was lost.

On Memorial Day 1948, the town of Cohasset dedicated the extension of Margin Street to Gleason, calling it Howard Gleason Road. He was the last Cohasset man to die during World War II. Shortly after the war ended, Norman Todd died from the effects of radiation exposure from the atomic bomb that was dropped on Nagasaki. His was among the first Marine units to enter the city.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Howard Gleason or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveterans-memorial.com.

Squares named after fallen servicemen

Howard Gleason is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset. The town lost seven other men during World War II, who have all been memorialized with squares and/or roads in town including:

- Allen A. Buffum: Beechwood St. & So. Main Street
- Robert E. Jason: Road at the Common
- William B. Long: Road at the Common
- Norman Todd: Norman Todd Road & Beechwood St.
- Perry H. Johnson: Beach St. & Atlantic Ave.
- David H. Parker: King St. & Beechwood St.
- Everett F. Studley: Jerusalem Rd. & Hull St. West's Corner

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

Roughly 498 men and women from Cohasset served during World War II from 1941 until the war was declared over in December 1946. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women from the "Greatest Generation" by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor. A book of Cohasset servicemen's names was presented to the National Monuments Commission at the dedication of the WWII Memorial, on May 29, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

Thinking outside the box

Cohasset has the opportunity to file for special legislation, dubbed a Home Rule Petition, that would give the town control over its sewer system.

As it stands now, the town is subject to state development laws that prohibit "spot sewering."

In other words, as Town Counsel Paul DeRensis says, the town can't help Mrs. McGillicuddy without also hooking up everyone else in the neighborhood.

However, the state recognizes towns are facing considerable development pressures and has allowed municipalities to enact their own bylaws through special legislation giving them more control.

The Cook Estate Working Group grappled with this possibility at its meeting Tuesday. The committee, essentially a brainstorming group, is charged with looking at ways to keep the Cook senior house project on track even if some aspects of the proposal have to be modified.

We don't claim to fully understand the complexities of state law and special legislation. But we felt during Tuesday's working group meeting that an opportunity presented itself that has not fully been explored yet holds considerable promise for the town..

For decades Cohasset was able to control development through its lack of an adequate municipal sewer system. Town acreage was off limits to development because with the town's rocky ledge – there was not a ton of good soil out there that could accommodate on-site septic systems.

But Cohasset's world has changed. The town must solve its existing wastewater problems including finding solutions for neighborhoods with failing septic systems. Hence the growth of the sewer system in the mid-1990s with expansion of the Central Sewer District and addition of a North Cohasset Sewer District.

There are still other areas that need sewering, most notable are the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods. That sewer project and others – and how to pay for them – are the subject of a public meeting on Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Town Hall auditorium. The public meeting will provide a primer on Town Meeting warrant articles that will set the stage for several sewer projects.

We think the potential of special legislation is significant, not because it would change town plans to sewer existing homes, but because it could allow the town to use any excess capacity as it sees fit for projects like the Cook Estate without the threat of lawsuits.

Although the Home Rule Petition isn't the focus of Saturday's session, it will undoubtedly come up. The town may have to call a special Town Meeting to start the ball rolling for special legislation because there is not time to get it on the April 2 warrant.

But in any case we urge you to attend Saturday's meeting to better understand how the town plans to proceed sewer-wise. The ultimate decision on several articles will be up to the April 2 Town Meeting, where we hope you can cast an informed vote.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Class sizes are soaring

TO THE EDITOR:

To those who say an override is not necessary, I would invite you to visit any one of the Cohasset schools. Did you know that some class sizes at the Deer Hill and the Middle School are well over 25 and pushing 30? Did you know that the Community Service class at the High School currently has 41 students? That some Physical Education classes at the High School are close to 50 students? 50 students!!

I receive notices from my children's teachers every year, begging for tissues, paper towels and cleaning supplies for the classrooms. The kindergarten (with very large classes this year as well) has lost 50percent of its weekly Physical Education time and 100 percent of its Computer classes. I am no financial wizard, but clearly this is not a budget full of fluff.

Some have made mention of targeting the teachers' salaries and/or benefit packages for cuts. Did you know that many teachers' families are eligible for affordable housing? It's true, even for veteran teachers. Did you know that the dental insurance premiums are out of reach, there is no vision benefit and that health premiums take over 16 percent of every other paycheck? It's true, even for veteran teachers. Imagine how that percentage soars for newer teachers. Teachers can never hope to make what similarly educated professionals in other fields make at an entry level. Shadow any public school teacher (especially those who have these enormous classes) and you will find determined, dedicated, passionate professionals who work many hours and days above what they are actually paid for. Obviously, the teacher compensation package is not a legitimate target for cuts.

When you consider skyrocketing special education costs, an increasing burden of federal unfunded mandates and the consistently decreasing state aid, it's a miracle that the requested override is not significantly bigger. The School Committee has done its job; the requested budget is as bare-bones as it can get. No one wants higher taxes. And while many are feeling the strain of the current local and global financial situations, no one should want to balance the budget at the expense of the people who can least afford to shoulder the town's burden: our children and our teachers. I urge you to vote yes for the override.

Sewer progress lauded

TO THE EDITOR:

Since the overwhelming vote at December's Town Meeting to start cooperating with the Attorney General and DEP to avoid imminent fines and sanctions and commit, after 25 years of procrastination, to sewer the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue areas to end the fecal coliform pollution of those neighborhoods and coastal waters, tremendous effort has been made by the sewer commissioners and their professional engineers to respect and implement the will of the voters and the State's Court mandates.

Detailed engineering has been completed, allowing quite accurate cost estimates to be finished and the sewer commission has done a superb, professional job in preparing the Warrant Articles for voters at the April 2 Town Meeting. These Articles allow the voters to determine the funding method although, under the options, the new recipients of the sewer expansion will, via assessed "betterments", absorb the majority of the costs which, per usual, are spread over 20 years to minimize the payments. These betterments will not commence until the 2009-2010 period as sewers become operational. The eventual increased value of the homes, due to being sewer connected and with the pollution ended, will more than offset the betterments charges. Residences with new, Title 5 compliant septic systems may be able to "opt out" of connection if they so judge.

With the experienced assistance of new Town Manager Bill Griffin, given the expansion operational target date of mid-2009, which has been approved by the State/DEP, the financial cost to the general taxpayer, if any, will be quite minor for the next several years and, again, if any, very modest thereafter. This is a voter decision.

A majority of the selectmen are on the verge of approving the articles, as presented by the sewer commissioners, with hearings now in progress. This "milestone", positive turning point for our Town should take place at next Tuesday's Selectmen's Meeting, March 28, starting at 7 p.m.. Residents are encouraged to attend the meeting at Town Hall, if at all possible, or watch the proceedings on Cable TV—Channel 10. Your attendance is encouraged to help "guide" the resolution of any last minute glitches.

A round of applause will be merited for all these Town Officials once the Selectmen endorse these articles for presentation to the voters at the April 2nd Town Meeting.

Preservation that really matters

TO THE EDITOR:

Preserving a scrap of industrial junk like the railroad turntable may be an excess of reverence for things past, but on the other hand the resurgence of interest in preserving what is of historic significance is a good thing.

But even more important is preserving the record of those people who have improved the quality of life in Cohasset over the years.

Maybe we should have a sort of a Trajan's column on the common, or a massive illuminated book of golden deeds in the library, to commemorate those whose vision and drive have resulted in the many institutions that make this town a better place.

Those who earned our enduring thanks for establishing our Community Center, Arts Center, Sailing Club, Center for Coastal Studies, Historical Society, Youth organizations and dozens of others, should be remembered.

For example, Joe McElroy, whose vision and drive rescued the decrepit and soon-to-be-demolished lightkeeper's house and converted it into the popular Bancroft Hall. Not only did he do almost all the fundraising, but he coalesced and directed a diverse group of fellow good citizens who designed, deconstructed and reconstructed the facility, and established its modus operandi.

That's a fairly recent example, but there are many others. Regrettably, those whose public service occurred some time ago are forgotten, and should not be. The fact that only the few examples listed above came easily to mind illustrates the need to be reminded of those to whom we are indebted.

HEALTH NOTES

Fair wastewater solutions for all

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Two weeks ago, Health Board member Rob Lawrence and I went before selectmen to explain our plans for revising the Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan. Selectmen strongly recommended that the article containing a request for an appropriation for the plan be withdrawn from this year's Town Meeting Warrant.

After listening to their various comments, it became apparent that there was insufficient information about how many septic system owners would choose to join the plan and what the condition of their systems might be. As a result, there would be no way to calculate the Town's potential indebtedness for repair costs. When they put it that way, one has to agree. After all what competent organization signs up to purchase something before they know how much it costs?

There are those who claim that sewers should be supplied to everybody as a matter of right. This argument flies in the face of reason. If population density is insufficient, sewers are more costly than septic systems and given the fact that sewers are not as good environmentally as properly managed on-site treatment, they offer no benefit to large areas of Cohasset. This observation is particularly true when infiltration and inflow is considered in flood plain areas.

Myths and facts about the school budget

COMMENTARY

RICK SHEA

I would like to dispel some myths regarding the finances of the Cohasset Schools.

• Myth # 1: The municipal side of the budget "is going backwards", but the schools "are adding positions and programs" for FY 06.

The facts: Total salaries for the municipal side of the proposed FY'06 budget are increasing $195,080, or 3.53 percent. Total salaries for the schools are increasing by $69,881 or 0.76 percent. The municipal budget is very tight with a net decrease of two positions, but the schools have been budgeted just as tightly, with a net decrease of five positions.

We are proposing to add an equivalent of nine positions, but we have cut 14 positions and have increased fees. We are adding five classroom teachers to maintain class sizes (two were funded by the community this year). We are reallocating more support to the Middle School (now almost 400 students). We have had to add bus drivers. The cost of these additions has been more than offset by eliminating 14 support positions and by increasing fees. The only "program" that is being "added" is an optional full-day kindergarten program, whose tuitions will provide a net contribution to the budget.

• Myth # 2: The schools' finances are "in disarray".

The facts: Three areas have driven up the schools' costs over the past four years, (1) out of district special education (SPED) tuitions, (2) facilities costs, particularly utility rates which have more than doubled, and (3) transportation costs, due to contracted SPED transportation, increased enrollment (six buses vs. four buses) and fuel costs. Excluding these three items, costs per student are flat from FY 05 to FY 06 ($6,428 to $6,433) and, over the past four years, these costs per student have increased less than 2 percent, or an average of less than one half percent per year ($6,310 in FY 2002 to $6,433 in FY 2006). Controllable costs have been tightly controlled by this school committee.

Controllable costs have been tightly controlled by this school committee.

• Myth # 3: There has been "inadequate explanation" for the projected increase of $518,000 in SPED tuitions for FY 06.

The facts: The budget analysis prepared by Superintendent Walsh, which has been available at every school committee meeting since December 2004, contains a detailed schedule of projected SPED tuition costs by student by school for FY 06 for each of the projected 28 students with out of district placements.

• Myth # 4: The increased cost of the schools over the past 20 years is due to teacher salaries going from "lower mid to upper" when compared with other South Shore towns.

The facts: Based on figures available on the state Department of Education's web site, when comparing the average cost per teacher for Cohasset with 14 other South Shore school districts, Cohasset was ninth in FY 1998 and 12th in FY 2003.

• Myth # 5: The additional funds being requested by the schools for FY 05 are for "separation costs" and "unbudgeted tuition reimbursements".

The facts: The additional funds are being requested to primarily cover out of district tuitions and utilities. The superintendent noted early in the fiscal year that the FY 05 budget could be underfunded by as much as $500,000, excluding SPED tuitions. We took aggressive action to cut nine support positions, to not fill open positions and to increase user fees. In her report to the school committee on March 17 outlining the current FY05 projection, the superintendent reported that SPED tuitions may require an additional $110,000 and utility costs, due to continued rate increases, may require an additional $80,000. This is the basis for the FY05 request. Dr. Walsh projected that, in aggregate, FY05 salaries should be within budget. On the municipal side, the Town Manager has requested $261,000 to cover FY05 shortfalls in several departments including police and fire overtime and legal expenses.

If you have any questions at all regarding the schools' finances, or if you would like to receive a copy of the many detailed schedules we have made available, please contact me directly at: rshea@momentapharma.com.

These are difficult choices regarding the quality of our Town services and the education of our children. It is important that our decisions be based on accurate information.

Some thoughts on Cook Estate

COMMENTARY

KAREN QUIGLEY

Last week's Mariner was full of information and opinion on the Cook Estate development project. Having attended virtually all (public) meetings held on the subject, here are some thoughts:

• This project was fast-tracked and brought to Town Meeting vote before due diligence was properly done. Now, faced with the consequences of leaping before looking, some at Town Hall insist on pursuing this project as originally constituted rejecting out of hand any alternatives that may save the project. Why? Have they invested too much of their political capital, or too much of our economic capital?

• The overwhelming yea vote at Town Meeting was based on three factors: - it would not cost the town anything; - it would result in a net profit of $925,000; - it would not impact the sewer capacity Not one of these terms has been met.

• Documented associated costs are nearing $250,000. With legal fees unaccounted for, and no information available from Town Hall as to other accrued costs, this figure could easily be $300,000.

These expenses significantly lower our profit. Does the town need the money? Absolutely! But this is no gift. This figure represents the sale price of a parcel of town-owned property appraised at $1,010,000 when bundled with the Cook Estate. $1,010,000 reduced to $625,000. That's what happens when politicians get in the land development business.

• The true value of this land is not monetary. It acts as a buffer zone to protect Peppermint Brook from pollution. Since we voted at Town Meeting to authorize the Water Department to invest millions of dollars purchasing land to protect our drinking water, why are we selling this land we already own, that is already protecting our drinking water? Makes no sense to me. Especially at a bargain basement price.

This project was fast-tracked and brought to Town Meeting vote before due diligence was properly done.

• As for the projected $425,000 annual tax revenue, what0s the impact on town services? Specifically our already strained school system. If 50 Cohasset seniors move to Cook, 50 young couples will buy their homes. (This would happen anyway through attrition but not within a compressed time frame.) 50 young couples with just one child times the $8,600 per child it currently takes to educate a child in Cohasset equals $430,000. Even taking into account the tax revenue generated by the single family homes, it's still a virtual wash. And, what if these young families have two or more children? What if all 95 units are bought by Cohasset residents?

• In June 2004, Jack Dawley stated that Northland would not reduce the number of units and use an onsite septic system because their engineers determined the soils would fail in a very short period of time. Northland would not leave the unit owners in such an untenable situation. Now, in direct contradiction, Northland is proposing an onsite system for a reduced number of units is viable. Both these scenarios cannot be true. Which are we to believe? And if the former is correct, when the latter fails what then? Town sewer, that0s what.

• The other half of this proposal involves hooking the affordable units up to town sewer. Our Sewer Commission maintains there isn't available capacity, and has refused access to other developers. Town Counsel has advised us that any amount of effluent from Cook opens up a pandora's box in regard to the denied developers. The domino effect will take affect and these other developments will be sewered. No impact on sewer?

• If the wastewater from these developments is sent to Hull, it puts the Sewer Commission in a position of having to make premature decisions about wastewater solutions. For example, what are the unintended consequences of having a large number of Cohasset homes dependent on Hull sewer? Haven't we already proved haste makes waste?

• We are told our seniors are being forced to leave Cohasset because there is no affordable senior housing. Let's be honest. The reason our seniors, and people of all ages and of fixed or moderate income, are being forced to sell their homes is because of rising tax rates and a never-ending series of Prop. 2-1/2 overrides.

Is affordable (emphasis on affordable) senior housing important. Without a doubt. But what we really need is for Town Hall to get the spending under control, stop the tax increases, and practice fiscal responsibility. Then we can all stay in Cohasset.

'I love Fenway Park — every glorious inch of it'

OVER THE FENCE

CINDY MCMANUS

Sing me no more sad songs about winter. I don't care what it looks like outside. Hope springs eternal simply because we are Red Sox fans and opening day is right around the corner.

Better yet: As you read this, the owners of the Red Sox are busy making plans to keep Fenway Park right where it belongs. The rumors have swirled for years that the oldest and smallest ballpark in the major leagues was headed for the wrecking ball; thankfully we have in John Henry & Co. an ownership group just quirky enough to keep the park as is, ignoring the warnings of impending financial ruin uttered by the corporate bean counters. Thankfully they understand as well as any fan of baseball that you can't put a price on history.

So in the spirit of all things spring, I hope you understand what I mean when I say that I love Fenway Park; every glorious inch of it, every scar on its aging hide, every crooked nook and impossibly angled cranny of the most intimate and wondrous park in baseball history.

And I love it most of all because taking a seat in Fenway today is, and always will be, like taking a seat there for the very first time.

My father introduced me to what John Updike called "The Lyrical Little Bandbox of a Ballpark," taking me to ballgames with the sole intention of schooling his eldest child in the fine art of the long ball, and the reflex mechanics of the double play; taking every opportunity between plays to point out the fielding intellect of the flinty and vaunted Yaz, a man who used to maximum advantage each and every geometric impossibility imposed on every square inch of the kingdom he called Left Field.

And together we would marvel at the pinpoint precision of Tony Conigliaro, a man whom I instinctively understood had been given a gift from God that allowed him to routinely rock physics back on its heels game after thrilling game.

I remember sitting with my dad, eating warm bags of peanuts while Sherm Feller asked 30,000 of us Ladies and Gentlemen, Boys and Girls to Please Rise While We Sing Our National Anthem. We bought pennants to wave and hats to wear together, and we were always sure after every game we attended, that we had just gotten to share the best day that ever was.

At the time I remember thinking that there was no place on earth that I would rather be than at Fenway Park with my kid brother watching baseball on a sunny summer afternoon, sharing the best day there ever was.

As I got older there were the home games attended every Sunday with my (then) true love, as rabid a Red Sox fanatic as I. We would always take whatever seats the old man in the ticket booth offered in the final minutes before game time, sometimes sneaking down 10 or 20 rows to escape the long shadows thrown over parts of the park in the afternoon; but mostly happily staking out a prime spot in the bleachers, right behind the bullpen, slathering on the oil to better develop those now-forbidden suntans.

That was the golden age of The Rooster and Freddy Lynn and Pudge and Looo-ieee—and, my goodness, what fun it was to watch them play.

He and I would take turns seeing who could scream the loudest, clap the hardest, and stomp the wooden benches for the noisiest effect. But as hard we tried, we could never outdo the collective roar of the crowd as its voice whooped and soared with the rise and the fall of the team's fortunes on any given day.

We would always leave, hoarse, sunburned, spent—and positive that we had just spent the best day that ever was.

Then there are the grown-up memories of taking my little brother to the park on Sunny Saturday afternoons, leading him by the hand out of the damp and smelly tunnels winding through Fenway's underbelly, and up into the light of the stunning green that was the field. Right there, close enough to touch: Turf like tufted Turkish carpet woven from one continuous, dazzling strand of emerald colored yarn, all lush and — how do they keep it so green? — explaining to my wide-eyed sib that Joe Mooney took his work very seriously, so much so that he, and anyone who ever sat in the stands could point to it with the certainty that this was not mere groundskeeping: This was art.

The air was redolent with the exclamatory flourishes of John Kiley's organ, the park packed to the tippy-top with the sounds of cheers, of leather hitting leather, the smack of ball connecting with bat; and the smell of Fenway Franks sinuously intertwining with the aroma of mustard-covered pretzels and drippy ice cream sandwiches.

At the time I remember thinking that there was no place on earth that I would rather be than at Fenway Park with my kid brother watching baseball on a sunny summer afternoon, sharing the best day there ever was. I try not to mind that my visits have been less frequent as of late, try hard not to believe that the last time I visited the park was with my (now) true love; and that my 10-year-old daughter came along for the game hitching a ride in my tummy.

She is old enough now for her introduction to the sport of baseball and for lessons in the myth and mechanics that make up the game as played in Fenway Park.

We'll ignore the Jumbotron, the sour stench under the stands, the corporate ads, the luxury boxes and the fact that the seats that once comfortably accommodated my 20-year-old fanny seem to have shrunk more than a little bit.

We will sit together in the stands, heads together, splitting one of those syrupy-sweet grandstand Cokes and I will impart the lessons I have learned and the love I have developed for the game, all filtered and diffused through the prism of timelessness that is Fenway Park.

Because more than anything, I want her to know what it is like to spend the best day that ever was.

When baseball had something to laugh about

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

There used to be a bar on Hancock Street in North Quincy called the Rathskellar.

The Red Sox used to have a third baseman named Jim Tabor.

They came together frequently, the gin mill and the ball player, so frequently, in fact, that whenever Sox Manager Joe Cronin needed his third baseman, the first place he'd look was the Rathskellar. Or so the story goes.

Once, the Red Sox are said to have hired a couple of private detectives to trail him and keep him out of trouble but wily old Jim maneuvered them into the men's room and locked the door and went about his business, which involved another bar.

Alcohol and not the steroids was the drug of choice of another baseball generation only its users weren't summoned to testify in Washington. They were just good for laughs.

An interviewer once asked him how he could hit so well if he was half in the bag each time he went to the plate.

Back in the days when the A's were in Philadelphia, they had a pitcher named, for good reason, "Rube" Waddell, who liked a taste now and then (mostly now). His manager, Connie Mack, decided to teach him a lesson.

He got a glass of water and a glass of whiskey and two worms. He dropped one of the worms in the water. The worm thrived. The dropped the other worm into the whiskey. The worm curled up and died.

"What do you think of that?" he asked.

"Well," said Rube, "it's nice to know if I keep in drinking I'll never have worms."

And they all laughed.

One of the great outfielders of the 1920s and 30s was Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who made little effort to keep his taste for the sauce a secret.

His teammate, Dick Bartell, related in his biography how Paul used to keep a pint of whiskey in an ice chest in the dugout and take a swig on it each time before he went to bat.

An interviewer once asked him how he could hit so well if he was half in the bag each time he went to the plate.

"I'll tell you," he said. "I see three baseballs. I pick out the one in the middle and hit it as hard as I can."

And they all laughed.

Rabbit Maranville was a shortstop for the Boston Braves when he partied on Scotch with a champagne chaser only to face a 10-inning game the next day with the mother of all hangovers. The score was tied in the 10th when he came to bat.

"I saw the pitcher wind up and I started to swing at his motion when ball and bat met and it sailed over the left field fence," he recalled. A teammate had to remind him to run. "I never did see the ball I hit."

And they all laughed.

Another early day pitcher named Bugs Raymond featured in his repertoire a spitball that danced and did other amazing tricks on the way to the plate.

"He didn't have to spit on the ball," they said. "He just breathed on it and the ball came up to the plate drunk."

They really laughed at that one.

I guess they didn't have time to call for a congressional investigation of that drug use in baseball. They were too busy laughing.

HEALTH NOTES

Fair wastewater solutions for all

Historically, increasing population density comes with a cost. The greater the number of people living close together, the more complex and expensive it becomes to provide services for them – and the more sophisticated become the systems for providing those services.

There are those who claim that sewers should be supplied to everybody as a matter of right. This argument flies in the face of reason.

Sewers are clearly superior when population density is high and the use of on-site systems is a threat to a water supply. Sometimes, when septic systems are near ponds there may be a flow of nutrients into those ponds from the groundwater. When ponds such as Lily Pond are used for drinking water, prudence and State regulations, mandate introduction of disinfection additives which may react with the otherwise perfectly harmless nutrients added to the water by nature as well as septic systems. It's at this point that large scale wastewater treatment may be necessary.

Large wastewater treatment plants can clean water to near perfect quality; perhaps 10 times as pure as needed to meet drinking-water standards. It doesn't taste very good, because small quantities of added elements such as oxygen, sodium and others enhance the taste of pure water. But such systems are extremely costly to build and operate. Generally, well managed towns opt for on-site systems because of the lower cost, and when population density reaches some trigger figure, sewer systems are considered, and their location is based factors of cost and need, well tempered by geology.

Such are the issues now facing the Town. However, there is one cause for optimism. Selectman Rob Spofford has offered to work with the board of health to seek a solution for the inequity of having the Town's septic system owners pay two separate wastewater costs: those for upgrading and maintaining their own system, and also that portion of the Town's taxes which goes to support the cost of sewer expansion.

The question of equitable treatment for all of the Town's citizens has long been a goal of the board of health. State income tax relief has long been available for septic upgrades for individual homes. We will now seek other means for proving relief .

The board plans to meet with Rob Spofford and others near the problem to develop a system which is fair and represents the lowest cost and best technical solution to the wastewater dilemma for Cohasset. We will ask the sewer department to include in the forthcoming feasibility study proposed for this year's Warrant, provisions for assessing the use of on-site systems where sewers are uneconomical. Further we will work with the water department in an effort to better define the real threats from nutrients and eutrophication in the water supply, and hopefully establish a plan for upgrading homes in Beechwood and other sections of Town with septic problems.

One way you can help with this process is to vote at the Town meeting to eliminate the subsidy given to sewer owners by paying for half their betterments. The Town can no longer afford such luxuries, and — since septic owners have no such subsidy, the system is, at it's heart, unfair.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Meet Debbie Shadd

Voters are welcome to meet Selectman Candidate Debbie Shadd and discuss the issues that the Selectmen will face in the coming years at a reception to be held at the home of Catherine Davis and Don Trisler, 100 Pond St. # 24, on Sunday, April 3 from 3-5 p.m.

At a recent reception, Debbie stressed the need for budgeting to be approached from a town-wide perspective: "Real estate taxes, water bills, sewer bills, fees for Recreation Department programs, user fees for school programs- these all come out of the same taxpayer pocket. Rate increases in any of these areas affect the taxpayer's attitude towards the Town's operating budget, which funds our essential Town services. Good communication between all Town departments, and between those departments and residents, is essential. People need to understand the budgets behind the bills they pay."

Reception for Vanderweil

Voters are invited to meet and share ideas with selectman candidate Gary Vanderweil at a reception on April 3 from 4-6 p.m. at the home of Maria and Paul Kennedy, 220 Jerusalem Road. Sara and Gabriel Gomez will be co-hosting the event.

At a recent gathering, Gary discussed sewering, which he believes "should be prioritized based on the town's environmental needs, not on which developer gets in line first or threatens the biggest lawsuit." Gary served on the sewer commission for nearly 20 years.

Anyone who would like to sport a lawn sign in support of Gary or who can volunteer a little time on election day, April 9, please call campaign manager Wig Pierson at 383-6940.

Jenkins sees savings

School committee candidate Lee Jenkins stated classroom positions should be the "absolute last option" in making budget cuts, not the first. She expressed these sentiments during a question and answer session following a campaign reception attended by 50 plus people held at the Cohasset Library.

"With just the summary budget data that has been provided, I've identified several areas which can be trimmed or corrected," Jenkins said. "Those areas are: cell phone fees, lunch deficits, bus maintenance and health care costs. There could be as much as $150K in savings in these areas which could be recovered for classroom use.

"It is important to have a fiscally responsible board that is keeping its eyes on the bottom line at all times so that money is not needlessly diverted from the educational budget."

For more information on her campaign call Lee at 781-383-0024, email: lee198@dream-com.net or contact campaign manager, Edythe Ford at 781-383-1648.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMEN

For the selectman candidates: For years Cohasset had a private attorney as Town Counsel and not a large firm. Has the switch saved money and provided needed special legal expertise? Or is it time to revisit the issue?

SELECTMAN/Fred Koed

I first saw how demanding the position of Town Counsel is while serving on the Advisory Board in the 1980s. Unfortunately, the days are over when the Town's legal work can be done by a small local firm. The many legal specializations needed to defend the Town's interests argue against a return to the small firm model.

It is time to bid out, in a Request For Proposals (RFP) process, town counsel services. We need to determine if the market for such services can deliver a better cost structure for our legal work. Currently, routine services are provided at a fixed annual rate. The real expense drivers are for attorneys engaged in specialized areas such as personnel, sewer negotiations, and zoning enforcement. The RFP needs to be a tool that helps us better manage such work.

We need to improve the way opinions of counsel can inform policies set by all Town boards. Counsel has issued several opinions about the critical linkage between sewer and developmental policies, for example. All too often however, these decisions are not made available to residents, nor even to other officials outside of the selectmen's office. At some point, we need to stop throwing the cloak of secrecy so universally over the product of Counsel's work. Such an effort will help us both improve decision making, and save tax dollars. How much better, for example, would the true interest of the Town have been served — and tax dollars saved — if there had been open debate about police disciplinary procedures?

I am absolutely against the idea of securing an additional counsel reporting to the selectmen on sewer matters. Particularly when budgets are so tight, there is no reason to second guess the Sewer Commission nor Counsel's clear determinations made to date.

SELECTMAN/ Debbie Shadd

Cohasset spends too much on lawyers and litigation. Over the last three fiscal years, the Town spent $248,502 in fiscal year 2002; $250,244 in fiscal year 2003; and $378,797 in fiscal year 2004. Last year, we spent money for lawyers on police disciplinary hearings which were eventually abandoned. Almost $178,000 was spent on these and other labor-related matters. Our own water commission sued the Zoning Board of Appeals, creating legal costs for the Town on both sides of the dispute. Disagreement between our building inspector and the ZBA created significant legal costs for the Town in the Jerusalem Lane dispute. The end result of all these cases is that our legal expenditures in FY 2004 were more than 50 percent higher than in FY 2003. This type of escalation cannot continue.

The problem, however, is not the retainer relationship with current town counsel or the use of a Boston law firm rather than a local attorney. The town's retainer relationship with Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C. has remained steady since FY 2002 at $54,000 per year. Moreover, using a firm as town counsel provides the town with a breadth of experience and knowledge in many substantive legal areas. If a private attorney were hired instead, outside counsel with expertise in a particular area might have to be hired more often, driving costs up. Given the increasing complexity of legal issues facing the town, the expertise a larger firm can provide is necessary and valuable.

The high value of property in Cohasset makes us a target for litigation. Still, we must work to gain better control over our legal budget by reducing the continuing cycle of litigation. Getting all Town boards on the same page and all Selectmen committed to cost containment in this area would be a good start.

SELECTMAN/ Gary Vanderweil

During my 20 years on the Sewer Commission, I was heavily involved on both sides of this issue. For the first half of my tenure the town used a "Private Attorney," and for the second half it used a "Large Firm." I prefer the Large Firm. The billing rates negotiated by the town for such a Large Firm are not too different than those for a Private Attorney. So the issue boils down more to one of performance than of cost.

Concerning performance, I found that the Private Attorney was slower — we had longer response times for our assignments. Since all town work had to go through a single attorney, a bottleneck often developed. Our legal requests got stacked in line behind those of other town departments. With the Large Firm, more legal resources are immediately at hand, and the work gets distributed to other partners, resulting in quicker turnaround times.

Furthermore, when we had a Private Attorney, whenever special expertise or a large volume of work was required, a Special Counsel would be appointed, almost always at a higher hourly billing rate. In effect, the totality of Private Attorney plus Special Counsels at any given time was collectively the size of a Large Firm, but a good deal more disjointed. On the other hand, with a single Large Firm, most of the special expertise resides within the firm and is available at the lower rate schedule agreed to by the firm.

For these reasons, I would opt for the Large Firm approach. I might add parenthetically, that as a Sewer Commissioner, I was pleased with the legal advise obtained from the town's present firm, Deutsch Williams, and I personally am not motivated to seek alternatives.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the school committee candidates: How will you, as a school committee member, ensure that the "best and brightest" teacher workforce is recruited, nurtured, and retained given the town's current fiscal landscape, teacher contract negotiations, and community demands for excellence?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Pam Wilson

Attracting and retaining the "best and brightest" teacher workforce is fundamental to meeting our town's educational requirements. A major role of the school committee is to ensure that we have the proper programs in place and support of the town to make Cohasset schools a desirable place for teachers to work.

I believe that the key attributes necessary to attracting and retaining the best teachers are: community support; academic and extra-curricular performance, compensation, advancement, training and professional development. Based on my observations, there are opportunities to build upon our existing programs.

As a school committee member, I believe that it is our responsibility to provide clear and supportive communication with our teachers. This will help demonstrate our community's commitment to our educators. In addition, we must look for creative ways to provide our teachers with ongoing, additional training and professional development. Faculty must be encouraged to share knowledge and new ideas as we grow in this area of professional development and expand our existing mentor programs. It is essential that all of our training programs are both effective and up to date.

We must develop stronger partnerships across the school workforce as well as across the entire community. We must plan and use resources effectively, while continually improving services.

Monitoring and maintaining these high performance levels in our schools, as well as consistently striving for higher standards, will enhance Cohasset's desirability to prospective teachers. As a community, if we can deliver on these attributes, then the Cohasset school system will become a model for teachers to aspire toward. All of these efforts will allow us to make further important gains, achieving our goals and benefiting our students in our schools in the years ahead. To attract and retain the best we must first offer the best.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ 1-YEAR/Lee Jenkins

No school committee member under Ed Reform can have any direct impact on hiring anyone but the superintendent of schools. The decision lies with the principals for hiring their individual school staffs

Cohasset is in the same perilous financial boat as are so many other towns in the Commonwealth. We are all looking for the same work force to lead our children to excellence.

I would suggest recruiting techniques other than help wanted ads be utilized. We should be in contact with placement offices at the top universities and have a virtual promotional film prepared on DVD to market our school. This can be done in-house at little expense.

We are in a unique position, being a small affluent community with a very supportive parent base and an impressive number of students who go on to higher learning. Our new 'campus' configuration lends us an air of an academy rather than a public school system. There are procedures we can utilize that will also positively enhance the professional environment in the classroom to make teaching in our new state of the art schools as attractive to teachers as possible

Our current union contract has more room for professional growth than other districts. In the last three years we have added extra columns and steps which enable a teacher to be rewarded for continuing education. It is s a tremendous selling point and indicates our dedication to excellence.

As a school committee member my top priority is to maintain as much money in the classroom as possible. If teachers know that I am looking at the budget in a fiscally responsible manner and consider cutting their jobs as the absolute last option, it will make for a better work environment.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 3-YEAR/Alfred Slanetz

The most important determinant of success in education is the quality of teachers and curriculum. We are fortunate to have many excellent teachers in Cohasset but need to do more to reinforce and develop a culture of respect and support for great teachers.

A great teacher is someone who is not only knowledgeable and competent but is on fire with excitement for the subject, takes the time to know each child and their way of learning, celebrates the strengths and talents in each child, encourages curiosity, points out not just what's wrong, but also what's right, and accepts only each child's personal best.

I believe that teachers really do want to know their students and personalize teaching in smaller classes. They want time to thoughtfully upgrade curriculum and teaching practices. They want more emphasis on thinking, communication skills, in-depth learning and richer curriculum.

The key to implementing these upgrades in a cost-effective way is the teacher contract negotiation: 70 percent of the School Budget is governed by the teacher union contract. In each of the last three years under the current contract, salaries increased by an average of $360,000 per year- enough to hire 8-to-10 new teachers and, over two or three years, bring our class sizes to optimal levels. In the current contract negotiation, we should negotiate a significant compromise in the raise and, in exchange, commit to hire additional teachers, schedule weekly time for development of curriculum and teaching methods, and introduce an incentive structure to encourage great teaching. If teachers are willing to partner with the School Committee, we can mutually enact significant positive change in educational philosophy, curriculum, teaching practices and learning environment to achieve a culture of respect, support and continual improvement that makes Cohasset exciting, dynamic and empowering for teachers and students alike.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For the school committee candidates: Counting Osgood and renovations and additions to Deer Hill and the middle-high school, the town has $50 million invested in new or renovated school buildings, yet the perception out there is the buildings are just for the kids and are only open during the school year. What type of programs could you propose to allow senior citizens and others to benefit from the school facilities?

For the selectman candidates: Does the town need to reestablish the personnel committee and/or hire a human resources professional? In other words, where does a Town Hall employee go with a problem if she or he doesn't feel comfortable bringing the issue up with his or her boss, the Town Manager?

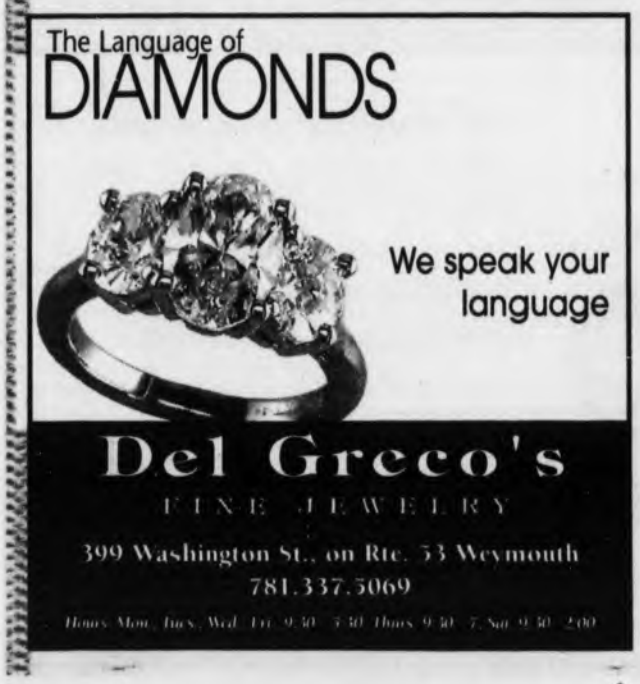
Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.



The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

A new wave

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team missed their third trip to the state sections in four years by less than a point.

With a number of talented underclassmen set to return next year, there is a good chance the team won't miss out next season.

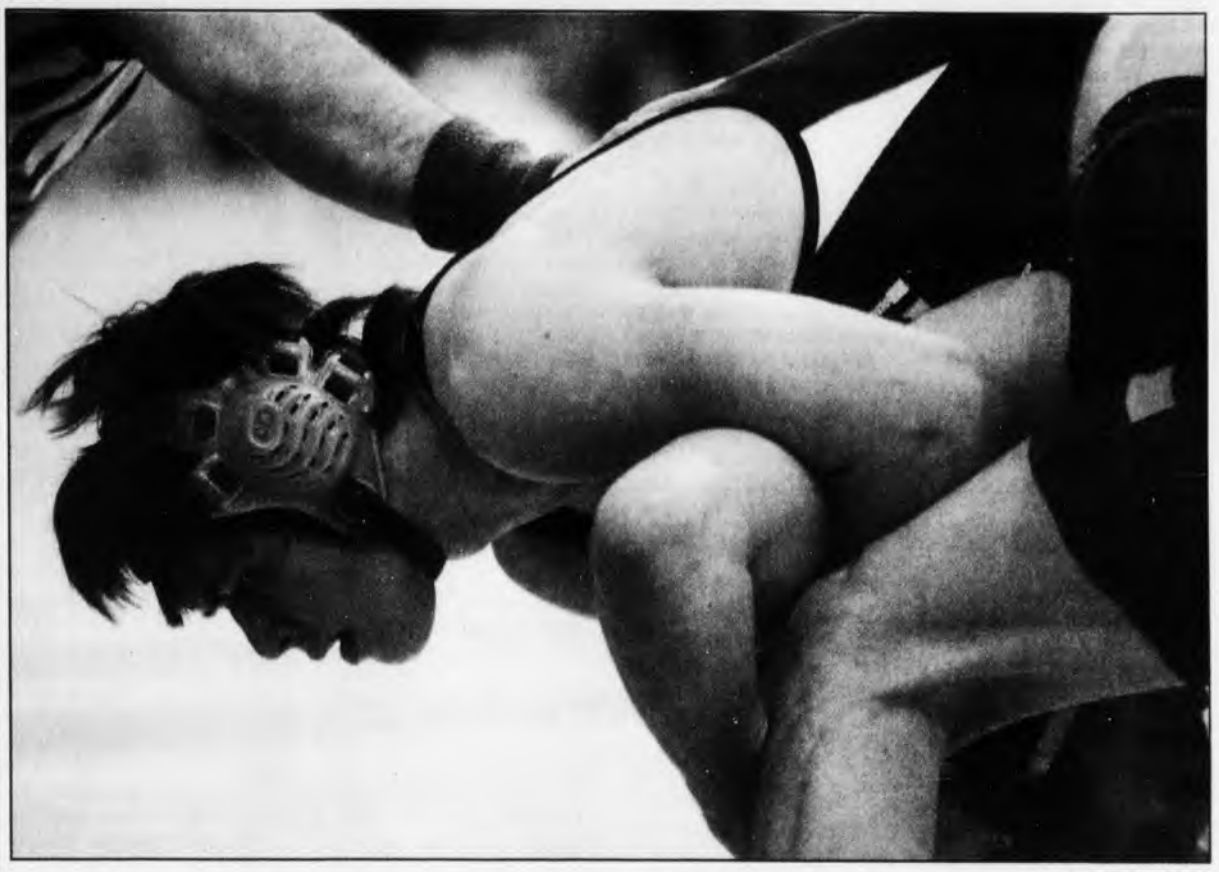
The team is, of course, losing their two all-around performers, Cohasset senior Nancy Durkin and Norwell senior Samantha Rosen. Both scored high enough to qualify for the state individuals meet, and with scores consistently in the 32-34 range, will be hard to replace.

There are many underclassmen returning, however, who will be looking to step up into even more important roles with the team next year.

One is Cohasset junior Lisa Spirito, who was a Cranberry League All-Star this season (Durkin was the team's other all-star from Cohasset High School). Spirito performed in the floor exercise, bars and beam this year, usually scoring at least in the high 7's and getting as high as 8.5 on the floor over the course of the season.

Erin Kelly, a junior from Norwell, is another athlete who should figure prominently in next season's line-up. Kelly was another gymnast who participated in multiple events, including floor, beam and bars. With scores ranging from the low 7's to the low 8's, Kelly could be a contender for one of those open all-around spots.

Another Norwell junior, CJ Himberg, will also be in the mix next season. Himberg was one of many gymnasts who earned the praise of coach Kara Connerty for their contributions to the team. She was consistently one of the team's top scorers on the beam with marks in the high 7's.



Corinna Durham of Cohasset placed for her team in the vault and floor, with the vault being her best event.

Kate Carpenter and Kiersten Shontz were two other gymnasts who earned solid marks this season and will be back for next year.

Senior Joe Kehoe, a state champion in the 160-pound weight class, is one of six seniors graduating from the Cohasset wrestling squad.

Talent in abundance

Cohasset wrestling a story of success in 2005

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

There is one word to describe Cohasset wrestling this year: phenomenal.

With six athletes competing at the All-States, the Skippers were loaded from top to bottom.

The result, as we all know by now, was the team's first state title in the history of the program.

For the team's six seniors - co-captains Matt Casey and Jonathan Littauer, Joe Kehoe, Kevin Dinsmore, Colin Regan and Matt Baroudi - their high school grappling careers could not have ended any better.

The six started their career with the goal of winning that state championship as a team, and led by the efforts of Kehoe, they did it.

The 160-pound senior went a remarkable 45-2 this year, winning the Div. 3 state individual title at that weight class. Kehoe made the finals of the All-States, where he lost to Franklin's CJ Colace (who beat everyone he faced this year on his way to a New England championship). This remarkable season came on the heels of a 140-pound state title last year.

Casey and Baroudi easily could have been state champions as well had it not been for injuries. Baroudi, a 215-pound state champion last year, advanced all the way to the 189-pound championship match of the states, and was ahead in the third period before being forced to forfeit due to an injury.

For the team's six seniors - co-captains Matt Casey and Jonathan Littauer, Joe Kehoe, Kevin Dinsmore, Colin Regan and Matt Baroudi - their high school grappling careers could not have ended any better.

Littauer and Dinsmore finished fifth and sixth, respectively, in the states, both after excelling on the soccer pitch in the fall (Dinsmore was a Mariner All-Scholastic). Littauer did so in the 119-pound class and was able to compete in the All-States as an alternate.

One of the highlights to Dinsmore's season was a win in the BC High match, his former school. Regan also had a solid season, winning more than two-thirds of his matches.

That is a lot of talent going the way of caps and gowns right there, but several underclassmen are more than capable of keeping Cohasset in the land of prominence. Leading the way in that category are juniors David McKenna and Shane Dorian, both of whom were also state champions.

Sixers' comeback falls short in playoff loss to Norwell

Another miracle comeback was not in the cards for the Cohasset Sixth Grade Girls Travel basketball team, as they dropped an 18-12 decision to Norwell in the quarterfinal round of the South Shore League playoffs Friday evening, March 11, at Carver.

A disastrous first half for the Sixers, their worst of the season, would prove too much for the Blue & White to overcome. Cohasset fell behind 14-2 in the first 15 minutes of play before a bucket by Kate French made it 14-4 at the intermission.

It was not that so much that the Sixers were playing poorly, as it was that Norwell was hitting shots from all over the court against a tight Cohasset 2-3 zone defense. On the other end of the floor, Cohasset had ample opportunities to score, but it proved to be one of those nights when their shots simply were not falling.

The second half proved to be another ballgame altogether, however. The Blue and White's miracle win at the buzzer the week before against Rockland proved to the Cohasset girls the truth of the saying that, "It's never over 'til it's over."

The Sixers stuck to their game plan to get the ball inside and it soon began to pay off. The forward line of Emma Musto, Lindsay Davis, Carli Haggerty, and French all hit for baskets and Cohasset methodically began to climb out of its hole.

Meanwhile, the Cohasset defense tightened and Norwell no longer was hitting the shots which had earned it a big lead. With less than five minutes to play, Norwell had scored just one bucket in the entire half and the Sixers had closed the gap to 16-12.

The momentum clearly had swung to Cohasset's side and Norwell was on the run. French then almost made it a two-point game, but her shot off the backboard did one of those tantalizing "three-quarters around the rim and out" spins which left fans and players alike on both sides in a state of frenzy.

That would prove to be the apogee of the Cohasset comeback. A minute later a Norwell girl who was about to be trapped by two Cohasset defenders tossed

SIGNS OF SPRING

FILE PHOTO

The spring sports season is almost upon us, and that means, among other things, lacrosse. Aidan Buick (15) and his Skipper teammates started practicing this week. Next week, the Mariner will begin to preview the spring sports season.

COASTAL STARS

Mite C1

The Coastal Stars Mite C1 team beat the Brewins 5-2 Saturday morning in Bridgewater.

Once again Tyler McKinnon was outstanding in goal, taking many shots but only allowing two to go in. Jake Moore was excellent keeping the pressure on in the Brewins' end with the help of Davis Cronin and Ben Swim. Sean Feeney and Daniel Cronin were awesome in defense.

Cam Mastrangelo was on fire, scoring once and adding an assist to his record, (Cheerios was behind it). Joe Deyeso was a powerhouse adding to the tally with two goals. James Dietrich, Joe Proctor, and Chris Bertone were all excellent and skated great.

Liam Manning, Jack Conlon and Hugh Healey moved the puck well and kept the attack on the Brewins. Tommy Prendergast and Jack Shaw were outstanding on defense. Tommy had a goal and an assist. Conlon had a great goal after having many shots stopped.

The Mites had a great outing and are looking forward to the next game. They are now 1-0-1 in the playoffs after a 1-1 tie last week against Cape Cod.

Mite C3

With a sustained offensive attack, solid defense and a stellar performance by net-minder Conner Lemieux, the Coastal Stars Mite C-3 notched a key playoff win on Saturday morning against the Cape Cod team at Gallo Arena in Bourne.

It didn't take long for the Stars offense to kick into high gear. Early in the first period, Russell Santos threaded a laser pass to Paul Parker in the slot. Parker made no mistake burying the shot to give the Stars a 1-0 lead.

Just a few minutes later, defenseman Gunnar McKenzie fired a pass to Will Cole in the slot. Cole got off a great shot, but Cape Cod goaltender Derek Gibson was able to get a pad on it and send it just wide of the far post.

The offensive pressure from the Stars continued throughout the first period. The pressure reached a fever pitch with the line of Parker, Santos and Jimmy Farren buzzing around the offensive zone. The Stars just missed going up 2-0 when Santos rang a wrist shot off the post.

Just minutes after surviving this onslaught, a Cape Cod forward slipped behind the defense for a breakaway and tied the game at 1-1.

Undaunted, the Stars quickly returned to the offensive pressure and showed Cape Cod's Gibson plenty of rubber for the remainder of the first period and into the second. With the Stars' defensive corps of Dominic Calapa, Matt McQuillan, Michael O'Brien, Jack Kaetzer, Derek McDermott and McKenzie prowling the blue line, the Cape Cod team was never able to mount much of an offensive attack. What attack they did manage to muster was quickly squelched by the solid play of Lemieux.

Finally, midway through the second period, Kyle Bowman solved the Cape Cod goalie. After a slick move through the slot he fired a shot to the high right corner, lighting the lamp and giving the stars the 2-1 lead.

Having regained the lead, the offense continued with the hustling line of Nick Barnhard, Patrick Cullen and Brian Neuls applying aggressive forechecking. At one point early in the third period, Cullen stole the puck from a Cape Cod forward in front of the net, but just couldn't get a handle on the puck to bury an insurance goal.

In the waning seconds of the second period, Cole sent Matt Boudreau in on a breakaway, but despite a great shot by Boudreau, Gibson was again up to the challenge. For the remainder of the game the Stars pelted the Cape Cod goalie with shots. Farren, Parker and Bowman each made spectacular full-sheet rushes, but could not score some breathing room for the Stars.

In the end, the tallies by Parker and Bowman would be all the Stars would need as Lemieux and the defense made the two goals stand up and gave the Stars their first playoff victory of the year.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team is really clicking as they wind up their regular season play.

Last Sunday they defeated the Taunton Brewins by a score of 8-1. Most of the goals came from the team's scoring machines, James Daley and Andrew Tautkus. Daley had four goals and Tautkus had a hat trick.

Only a couple minutes into the first period, forward Tommy Coyne made a beautiful centering pass to Andrew Tautkus which Tautkus one-timed into the left-hand corner of the net, giving the Stars an early 1-0 lead. Tautkus grabbed the puck off the next face-off and drove to the net, burying the puck behind the netminder for his second.

Daley took the ice and whipped two powerful shots in the net in one shift, putting the Stars up by four. At the end of the period, Stars goalie Max Hemingway stopped a Brewins shot, but the Brewins picked up the rebound and got their one and only goal of the game. Andrew Tautkus wasn't finished, sneaking in his third goal before the end of the period.

The Stars came into the second period with a 5-1 lead. Daley lifted a wrister, giving the Stars a 6-1 lead. Hemingway stole the show in the second when he made an unbelievable save, absolutely robbing a Hawk on a break-away.

The Stars would get their 7th goal, when defenseman RJ Neuls skated out of his own territory and fired a blinding shot from the blue line, netting his second goal of the season. Daley scored his fourth of the game off a beautiful backhanded pass from linemate Mike McPartlin.

After an uneventful third period, the Stars skated away with the 8-1 win. The Stars team plays their final regular season game this weekend. The competitive passing and shooting skills of forwards Andrew and Matt Tautkus, Ryan Melia, Daley, Seamus Feeney, Liam Rose, McPartlin and Coyne have been the key to putting the C-4 team ahead on the scoreboard.

Coach Tautkus is relying on his "brick wall" defenders – Tristan Wiggin, Nicholas Craig, RJ Neuls and Jonathan Gardner to help the team finish the season strong.

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 hockey team won its fifth game in a row on Sunday beating a good Brockton team 6-1 at Asiaf arena in Brockton. The Stars were led by Andrew Kuppens who scored two goals and set the tone of the game with some aggressive offensive play.

The Stars got off to a nice start in the first period displaying good fore checking and keeping the play in the Brockton zone. Derek Benson opened the scoring with the first of his two goals with a one timer off the rebound of a Kyle Bowman shot.

At the start of the second period, the Stars line of Jack McNeil, Kuppens, Brian Mathews, Shaelyn Tobin, and Robert Bothwell moved the puck well in the Brockton zone. After a Mathews shot, Kuppens took the rebound and lifted the puck over the Brockton goalkeeper making it 2-0.

Later in the period, Andrew scored his second goal of the game taking a feed from Seamus Ryan and beating the goalie to the short side just as the buzzer sounded ending the shift. The Stars made it four to nothing on the last shift of the period, when Benson took the puck from behind the net and scored a rap around goal.

At the start of the third period, Bowman took a pass from Benson right off the face-off and scored on a one timer to the five hole. The Stars kept the pressure on throughout the period and received solid play from Mathew Johnson, Harry Sheldon and Seamus Ryan, who were all over the ice.

Chris Phillips, as usual, was a rock in goal. The final goal of the game was Stars prettiest goal of the year. Jo Jo Carbone stole the puck at center ice and skated around a Brockton defender with a pretty spin move and then fed Mckenzie in stride. Gunnar finished off the play with a blistering wrist shot beating the goal tender to the far side.

The Stars will look to make it six in a row when they face off Friday against the Seahawks in Hingham.

Coghlan-Cusack Marathon Golf Classic

In its decade of existence, the Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic has become a staple on the local scene, kicking off the golfing season each spring with a celebrity-studded gala two days after the Boston Marathon.

The event has raised over $270,000 for Our Lady's Hospital for Sick Children, and its organizers are looking forward to the biggest and best edition yet on April 20.

The 10th annual installment of the ECNC Classic is scheduled for South Shore Country Club in Hingham that day, with a noontime shotgun start followed by an awards banquet. This year's tournament will be dedicated to the late Jim Hannan, a charter member of the ECNC committee, who passed away earlier this month.

Over the years, celebrities from both sides of the Atlantic have participated in the ECNC tournament - Eamonn Coghlan and Neil Cusack themselves; entertainers Finbar Furey and Niall Toibin; former Red Sox pitchers Bill Lee and Luis Tiant and manager Joe Morgan; present and former Patriots like Adam Vinatieri, Babe Parilli, Larry Eisenhauer, and Gino Cappelletti; boxers Gerry Cooney, Micky Ward and Dana Rosenblatt; former Celtics Jo Jo White and Ernie DiGregorio; ex-Bruins Ken Hodge, Johnny McKenzie, Rick Middleton and Johnny Bucyk; and a host of New England Revolution players and coaches from Frank Stapleton to Taylor Twellman, along with radio and television personalities Steve Burton and John Dennis.

Speakers and entertainers at the post-tournament dinner have included former heavyweight champion George Foreman, Delores Keane, and John McDermott.

The Eamonn Coghlan-Neil Cusack Marathon Golf Classic -- named for the former world mile record-holder and the only Irish winner of the Boston Marathon (in 1974) - is sponsored by Foxwoods Resort Casino, Honey Dew Donuts, United Liquors, the New England Revolution, Magner's Irish Cider, New Balance Athletic Shoes, Galway Irish Crystal, Kerr Printing, and Tuohy Sports and Entertainment, in association with the Aisling Gallery of Hingham.

Although a sold-out field is anticipated again this year, a few spots (at $150 per player or $600 per team) remain available. For information contact the ECNC Classic c/o Aisling Gallery, 229 Lincoln Street, Hingham MA 02043, e-mail ECNCClassic@aol.com or telephone (781) 773-1097.

Cohasset's Corinna Durham was a solid performer on the floor and vault this season, and is one of several talented athletes returning to next year's team.

Patriot League wrap up

The three Patriot League squads closed out the regular season in Cohasset against Halifax two weeks ago.

The Sixers had several offensive chances early, but couldn't convert. Robert Jones got the party started, finding Anders Goetz for two and then took it to the hoop himself.

Derek Youngman forced Halifax to turnover the ball and found Gabe Seksay underneath for a basket. This was vintage Sixer action. Big men Seksay and Eric Wasel continued to convert offensive second and third chances. Jones penetrated the key to the left and drew the defense with him and Ben Campbell hit his trademark outside shot to give Cohasset a commanding lead at the half.

A rejuvenated Halifax squad came back in the second half and closed the lead to three points, but the Sixers regrouped and used all of their skill and talent to secure the win. Robbie Hill, Mike Monaco, Drew Cobin, Jack Carrier and Sam Richardson played great team ball.

Coach Seksay said "The whole team played big. We needed them to and they delivered, everyone delivered."

In summing up the season, as they head to the playoffs, Coach Campbell said that their success is due to the fact that "they played like a team all year and continued to share the ball and that is the key to their success."

The 7th graders finished the season on a winning note, easily handling the Halifax squad.

Dana Valentine started the action in the low post with power moves to score. Will Wise hit a great three point shot. Robby McCunney converted a steal and went the distance for a bucket. Johnny Maher ripped down a few rebounds and began the fast break. With a little less than 3 minutes left in the half, Cohasset found themselves with a comfortable 21-9 lead.

The second half saw some sloppy play as the visitors became desperate. Cohasset fought back by diving on the floor and going for loose balls. Brendan Doonan was in the thick of things. He split the lane and grabbed a rebound for a score and was fouled. He converted the foul shot. Doonan played with a high level of intensity.

Chris Brown, Valentine and Taylor McQuade controlled the boards on both ends of the court. Eamon Davis, Wise, Kevin O'Connell and Jeff Charles alternated in the back court. Valentine was the high scorer with ten followed by McCunney with eight. John Kearney went 3-for-4 at the charity stripe late in the second half, ensuring the win over playoff bound Halifax.

Coach Davis said, "I'm proud of the way the boys came together as a team over the last few games. Their actions bode well for next year."

The Eights found themselves in an early hole against Halifax. Despite several offensive chances, the ball neglected to find the net for the home town boys in the beginning of the game.

Dan Martin was very strong under the boards for Cohasset on both ends of the court. Nick Simonds got it going for his team with an outside jumper for three points.

Adam Berger went the distance for two and missed, but somehow managed his own board and then nailed the layup. Marcus Charles has emerged in the last several games as a scrappy, smart, heads up play maker. He found teammate Martin down low for the score.

At the half, the boys were down considerably. Halifax didn't let up despite an almost insurmountable lead. But the boys in blue, slowly, and with nothing but grit and determination, gave it their all. They left it all on the court. A Nick Savage rebound, a Martin blocked shot, an Evan Richardson outside jumper, an Owen Landon steal, a Lenny Brown feed, a Mike Fithian rebound, a Danny Brady steal began to ever so slowly shift some momentum the hometown way. Halifax had to call a timeout.

The Cohasset intensity increased. The fans got in the game. But the clock was ticking.

At the final buzzer, Halifax won.

Coach Richardson commented, "it's been a long season for the boys, some of whom have never really played organized, competitive basketball. But to see Nick Savage take it to the hoop, or Nick Simonds hit a three pointer means we did something right. With off season work and commitment, these boys have the potential for a strong high school team."

All hail Danny

IN THIS CORNER

ROBERT SLAGER

Egg on your face shouldn't smell this sweet. Filet of crow can't possibly go down so easily.

I was wrong, Danny. I was wrong and I admit it. I always saw you as the fifth wheel on the great Celtic teams of the 1980s. You were the annoying little brother jumping up and down, screaming "Can I play? Can I play?" You were the guy that Tree Rollins bit. You were the other guy from Wham.

When you came back to this once glorious franchise as general manager, I tore into each one of your seemingly random decisions like they were the last slice of pizza. You claimed to see something no one else did, and I mocked you for your arrogance. You were never one of the "Big Three." Heck, you weren't even D.J., a Hall of Famer without a plaque. You were just Danny Ainge, a weak-hitting former infielder who rode the coattails off your basketball teammates to three world championships.

For your first trick, you essentially traded Antoine Walker, an all-star forward, to Dallas for an oft-injured, non-rebounding backup center named Raef LaFrentz. Then you sent solid-citizen Eric Williams to Cleveland for Ricky Davis, a guy who once intentionally missed a lay-up so he could get a rebound and a triple-double. Oh, then you sent your starting point guard, Chucky Atkins, and a serviceable big man in Chris Mihm to the Lakers for a fading Hall of Famer point guard, Gary Payton, who seemed somewhat uninterested in finishing his days with a rebuilding team.

The roster carousel spun so quickly it left me dizzy and just a wee bit nauseous. You seemed so determined to prove your worth as a Celtic that you were willing to take the entire franchise down with you.

I was wrong, Danny. You are a genius.

You saw a team much closer to contention that any of us. You recognized the potential of rookies Tony Allen, Al Jefferson and Donte West when only the die-hard fans knew who they were. You saw Davis as a terrific complement to Paul Pierce. You envisioned LaFrentz using his long-range touch to open the middle for a team of slashers. You hired a former coach of the year who has earned the respect of his players. My gosh, you even convinced Payton he could win a title without needing to be a superstar anymore.

But most of all you saw the nomadic path the Walker took after you sent him packing and you realized the time was right to bring him back home. Remember how you once said he wasn't a winner? Well, you were brave enough to admit you were wrong, and general managers like to do that almost as much as sportswriters do.

The trade gave the Celtics the offense balance they were clearly lacking. No longer is Walker the shoot-first, deflect-questions-later forward he was earlier in his career. Now he rebounds, defends, moves the ball around and even ventures inside to give the C's a valuable post presence. All this for end-of-the-road Tom Gugliotta, nonentity Michael Stewart and a draft pick.

The best part of all is that Payton, who was part of the trade, refused to sign with Atlanta and came back to Boston even though playoff-caliber teams such as Dallas and Sacramento wanted him badly.

Brilliant.

Payton's reason for choosing Boston was simple - he saw what Ainge had seen all along. The Celtics are much closer to a title than most people think I didn't believe that until last Friday night in Houston. The nagging question surrounding the Celtics has concernd their ability to handle teams with a big center, such as Yao Ming. The Celtics may lack a dominating interior presence on both sides of the ball, but after watching them blow out the red-hot Rockets, teams should be more concerned with how to guard the multifaceted Boston attack.

In the Eastern Conference, there are really only two other dangerous teams. The defending champion Detroit Pistons can't be overlooked because of their experience, balance and coaching. But the Pistons have to play their grind-it-out style to win. When the Celtics and Pistons faced off two weeks ago in that double-overtime thriller, the C's were able to push it up court just enough to escape with the victory. If LaFrentz and Mark Blount can consistently draw Ben Wallace away from the paint with their perimeter shooting, the C's have a chance.

Of course, Miami remains the hottest team in basketball and the mountain that Boston must ultimately climb. We all know about Shaq, but a team without a dominating big man like the Celtics can afford to send O'Neal and his brink-layer touch to the line over and over again. The key will be slowing Dwyane Wade down. The second-year player has emerged as a tremendous all-around threat who seems to get better by the game.

The Magic are a little like Hakeem's Rockets of the mid-90s. They have surrounded a dominant post player with terrific three-point shooters and a multitalented hybrid point/shooting guard in the Clyde Drexler mold. They may not be pretty to watch, but Miami should remain very tough to beat. Pierce will need to statistically neutralize Wade for the Celtics to have a shot.

If the Celtics could somehow get past the Magic, they can beat anybody in the league. Phoenix and Seattle will be exposed by the Spurs in the West. As great as Duncan is, and as well as Tony Parker has been playing, the Celtics could have a chance because of their depth and energy off the bench.

It certainly won't be an easy road. But the Celtics are playing as well as any team north of Miami right now. That's a staggering statement considering where this team was last year.

So take a bow, Danny. You deserve it. You've given Celtic fans a reason to believe again.

You've even made humble pie taste good.

Dorian won his state title match in exciting 5-3 fashion, and made it to the championship match of the All-States before bowing out to Central Catholic's Bob Murray. The junior, a transfer from Duxbury, won over 40 matches this year and should again be a star next year.

McKenna dominated the state tournament, including a convincing victory in the final. He also should be a force next year, whether it again be in the 145-pound class or higher.

Sophomore Nick Cambi, also a starting offensive lineman on the football, had a solid season bouncing between the 189- and 215-pound weight classes. He won a couple matches in the state tournament, and with some improvement over the off-season, could be a contender for a state title next season.

Five more wrestlers will juniors George Miller, John Keniley and Jake Watts (who finished in the top-six at the Marshfield tournament), sophomores Ryan McLellan, Gannon Dorian, Tim Toomey and Adam Smith, and freshman Steve Hurlbut.

Sixers' comeback falls short in playoff loss to Norwell

up a "heave" (as opposed to a shot) from just inside the three point line which swished through to make it a six point game.

The big shot took the wind out of the Sixers' comeback sails and provided Norwell with an extra margin of comfort which prevailed to the end. The scorebook showed that free throw shooting proved to be the Sixers' Achilles heel once again, as happened on many other occasions this season. The Blue and White went 0-for-10 at the line, compared to 2-for-6 for Norwell.

Although the Sixers' season did not end as well as they would have liked, the Blue and White girls certainly proved that they belonged in the South Shore League.

The Sixers carried a lead at least to the half against every team in the league. Indeed, they took eventual sixth grade division champ Duxbury to triple overtime two weeks earlier in the regular season before succumbing in a battle of free throws at the end.

All in all, it was a highly-satisfying and enjoyable year for the Cohasset girls, all of whom already are itching to get back into South Shore League action next season.

Girls travel hoop program wraps up season with pizza party

The girls travel basketball program for grades 5-8 put the finishing touch on a successful season of basketball with a pizza party Tuesday evening, which was attended by about 80 people consisting of the girls in grades 6-8 and members of their families. (The fifth grade girls held a party of their own previously.)

The travel coaches gave a brief talk and then introduced their players individually, each of whom was presented with an outdoor basketball both to recognize their dedication to the travel program over the past five months and to encourage them to play as much as possible during the summer and off-season.

The break-up event was especially poignant for Coach Matt Salerno and his eighth grade girls, as it marked their "graduation" from the travel program and a look ahead to their high school careers.

Cohasset girls varsity hoop coach John Levangie made a special appearance as guest speaker, and he urged all of the girls to work as hard as they can to become better ballplayers. Levangie cited CHS star Casey Anderson as an example of "someone not only with great talent, but who also rates as one of the top three hardest workers I ever have coached in my career.

"The key to success," LeVangie said, "is simple: Work harder than your opponents."

Eighth grade coach and girls travel coordinator Matt Salerno, who served as emcee for the evening's festivities, concluded by congratulating all of the girls for their accomplishments and thanked their parents for the sacrifices they make on behalf of their daughters' athletic aspirations.

He also expressed special thanks, echoed by all of the coaches and players, for the support and assistance throughout the season of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters; Asst. Principal Michael Gill of the Middle-High School; Principal Keith Gauley of the Deer Hill School; Principal Janet Sheehan of the Osgood School; Athletic Director Ron Ford; and the custodial staffs of the schools.

First year players and players that did not play last year must bring a copy (originals will not be accepted) of their birth certificate that the league will keep on file.

A reunion of sorts took place at the girls travel team pizza party when present CHS girls head hoop coach, and former CHS boys head coach, John LeVangie (center) got together with two of his former star players and the co-captains from his outstanding 1978-79 Cohasset High boys team, Paul Farren (left) and Matt Salerno (right). That team ranks as one of the finest in Skipper hoop annals, having finished with a 20-5 record and a trip to the sectional finals of the state tourney. The passage of 25 years has brought the men full circle, with Farren's daughter, Kayla, and Salerno's daughter, Carly, ready to join LeVangie's girls basketball program next year when they enter CHS as freshmen. Matt Salerno has been a coach with the girls travel hoop program for the past four years and Farren was the coach of the fifth grade girls team this year, of which his daughter Ally was a member.

WORSHIP NOTES

St. Stephen's Church Easter celebration

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, will celebrate the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service on Saturday, March 26 at 7:30 p.m. The theme of the worship will be "Easter and the Environment." Jesus' Easter resurrection is an act whereby God reconciles all things to himself. To follow the risen Christ means to see dignity and interconnection in all that exists – ocean and stones, earth and air, plants and people, all creation. Following the worship, Colette Wood, Chair of the Diocesan Committee on Faith and the Environment, will lead a discussion on "God's Earth is Sacred."

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, March 27 will be at 8 and 10 a.m. with choir and brass. The worship tells the story of women, followers of Jesus, at the empty tomb enjoined to "go and tell" Christ is risen.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church on Maundy Thursday,March 24, at 7 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following worship there will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time – breads, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits, and milk and honey!

Good Friday worship begins at noon on March 25 with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book service begins at 1 p.m. A service for children takes place at 2:30 p.m. and ends the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross.

For more information, please call the church office, 781-383-1083, or email: somara@ststephenscohasset.org

The featured speaker will be William E. Brumback, conservation director of the New England Wildflower Society who conducted the survey on behalf of the Gulf Association. Brumback has titled his talk, "Gulf River Estuary—The Beauty and the Beast."

On four separate days during the growing season last summer, Mr. Brumback and a colleague from the society covered the length and breadth of the estuary by canoe and on foot, including upland areas, to compile a complete inventory of all vascular plant species occurring within the survey area. The appendix to his 38-page report lists 217 species of trees, shrubs and herbacious plants growing in the area; 18 of them are identified as "invasive" and two as "likely invasive."

CHECK INTO LITERACY WITH THE VERIZON READS "HOMETOWN HEROES" CONTEST

Imagine your life if you couldn't read - couldn't enjoy a book, read a newspaper, or understand life-saving emergency instructions on a sign. That's a daily struggle for many people. Fortunately, there are people out there who are dedicated to helping everyone learn the joy of reading and we'd like your help in finding them and giving them the recognition that they deserve.

Interview someone in your community that you feel has worked hard to help others with literacy education. Ask them why they believe that literacy for all is important and what they are trying to do to make that a reality. Then, in 500 words or less, tell us why you think they should be considered for this honor. Fifteen Literacy Heroes from communities throughout Massachusetts will be chosen to receive a $1,000 grant to further a literacy effort in their community.

MAIL YOUR SUBMISSIONS TO:
Literacy Heroes Contest, Massachusetts Literacy Foundation
One Herald Square, Boston, MA 02118
or email: MLF@bostonherald.com

★ Entries must be received by April 8, 2005.
★ Please include contact information for BOTH you and your nominee as well as the name of the school/organization if applicable.
★ Essay writers will each receive a $50 gift certificate to Barnes & Noble.

This contest is provided through a partnership between the Massachusetts Literacy Foundation and Verizon Reads as part of the Massachusetts Reads event. Verizon residential telephone customers can contribute one dollar a month for literacy by checking the box on their local phone bill. Jazz musicians featured in Cohasset concert

In a rare Cohasset appearance, Billy Novick and Guy Van Duser will play for a Jazz Coffeehouse at the Parish House across from First Parish Church in Cohasset on Saturday, April 2 at 8 p.m. The well-loved jazz-swing musicians will perform their soulful, elegant musical wizardry for Cohasset and the surrounding community. Wine, coffee and desserts will be available in an intimate setting for those hearing these musicians who will be in Cohasset for the first time in some time.

Novick and Van Duser have performed as a duo for nearly three decades. They are frequent guests of "Prairie Home Companion" and "All Things Considered" and have played on numerous TV and film soundtracks.

Novick began playing clarinet at age eight and the sax at 15. In his early days, he toured with David Bromberg, Leon Redbone, Jonathan Edwards and Martha and the Vandellas. He met the innovative guitar player Van Duser in 1976 and they began a flourishing, decades-long collaboration that has included nine recordings, including the award-winning "The New Pennywhistle Album."

While this duo frequently plays music deeply rooted in classic jazz, their sound is vital and contemporary, fresh and original. They have mastered an enormous inventory of arrangements from Gershwin, Ellington and Jelly Roll Morton to their own originals. Their relaxed, personal style makes for an evening of swing and fun.

Tickets are $12 each and wine, coffee and desserts will be available at a suggested contribution of $3 each. The performance will begin at 8 p.m. in the Parish House of First Parish Church, 23 Main St., Cohasset. To reserve tickets, call First Parish in Cohasset at 781-383-1100. Call soon—this will sell out.

Musicians Guy Van Duser and Billy Novick will give a rare performance April 2 at First Parish Church, Parish House, in Cohasset.

Cut-a-thon helps in breast cancer fight

Adrian Morris Salon raises $16K

By Mary Jane Hanron
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Pink Balloons swayed in the twilight on Ripley Road Sunday evening as a reception at Adrian Morris Salon raised funds to fight breast cancer. Guests attending the event shared stories of courage and hope as they mingled at this poignant social gathering.

Earlier that day, Morris and several salon professionals had offered haircuts to the community for a donation to The Susan G. Komen Foundation. In a matter of hours, thousands of dollars were raised from customers of all ages who flocked to the salon for this worthy cause.

Donations continued at the evening function during which a silent auction and raffle were made possible by the gifts of local and regional businesses and residents. The atmosphere of the evening was warm and generous as volunteers, guests, cancer survivors and supporters united in this labor of love. Encouragement for those recently finished with treatment as well as support for survivors of many years flowed throughout conversations of caring and kindness.

According to Morris, breast cancer is a charity fervently supported by the company. The inspiration for this event had come from the battle faced by his friend, Karen Petrillo of Hull. Though unable to be present at the affair, Petrillo was recognized by photos and collages that adorned the salon. A poster containing messages for Petrillo was signed by attendees. This collection of thoughts and good wishes was to be framed compliments of Christopher Gallery prior to being delivered to her.

"This disease has such a devastating impact on the lives of so many women," Morris said. "I am so grateful to all in the community who have come together to make this day possible. I feel strongly that we must help to fight for a cure. My business is about women and beauty, and cancer has such an overwhelming and distressing effect in so many ways. If it were not for so many great women there would be no need for businesses like mine. I have much admiration for the courage and strength displayed by those who fight breast cancer."

Morris stated that a Foundation in Karen's honor would be established and fundraising efforts would continue.

"We hope to provide assistance for the daily needs of those afflicted in our community. Beauty products, gas money for trips to daily radiation appointments, babysitting and home delivered meals are a few examples of the basic needs that arise during the duration of cancer treatment. We feel helping with these essentials will be a valuable contribution," he said.

More than $16,000 was raised during the weekend event and contributions continue to arrive daily. A check from the salon will be presented to the Massachusetts representative of the Komen Foundation next Monday evening.

"AIRPLANE EAR"

Travelers who have colds or anatomy that makes them more vulnerable to pressure changes inside the cabin of an airplane may suffer pain and even temporary hearing loss from "airplane ear." Barotrauma, or barotitis media, is caused by unequal pressure between a person's middle ear and the pressure in the airplane cabin. Normally, the eustachian tube, which connects the middle ear to the back of the throat, equalizes the pressure. When the tube is blocked due to congestion or other causes, the unequal pressure creates a vacuum, stretching the eardrum. These pressure changes are usually felt most intensely during landings, at which time the eardrum is pulled inward. The eardrum may also not vibrate normally, which impairs hearing.

If you would like to learn how to safeguard your hearing from hazards of all kinds, we invite you to ask the people who know, the people who have your best interests at heart - the people at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. We provide hearing health care in a friendly, comfortable atmosphere. There's no reason to put it off any longer - you have everything to gain and nothing to lose. We offer FREE hearing evaluations, FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. If pain from "airplane ear" persists, or if your ears feel blocked, see a physician to determine if you have an infection or injury that requires treatment.

If Fellini directed cruises ...

Costa Atlantica brings a little Italy to the Caribbean

By J.M. LAWRENCE

ABOARD THE COSTA ATLANTICA — Vying for the title of Mr. Pizza on this Italian cruise ship, Nino Mannone of Everett donned a "Godfather"-style getup with dark glasses and cigar. He danced the tarantella with his niece, sang "O Sole Mio" and executed a tabletop belly flop on his pizza dough. He won.

Covered in flour from a food fight with fellow contestants and staff, Mannone hugged his wife and announced, "We're having a great time." We, as it turned out, meant 38 members of the Mannone family on this trip.

This is cruising Italian style. One day you're eating pasta off gilded Versace plates and sipping Prosecco Spumante, another day, you're laughing until you find yourself saying "mamma mia" in the middle of the Caribbean. Who knew la dolce vita included pratfalls?

We set sail from Fort Lauderdale with plenty of buon viaggios. I was lured by the prospect of an international crowd, Italian lessons and the chance to swim with the stingrays off Grand Cayman.

Christened in 2000 by Italian film legend Federico Fellini's buxom blonde star Claudia Cardinale, the Costa Atlantica has a classic ocean liner design with a signature yellow smokestack in tribute to the Costa family's beginnings in the olive oil trade 145 years ago. (The cruise line is now owned by Carnival.)

Inside the ship, it's Vegas-meets-Venice. A soaring atrium spotlights glass elevators traveling between 10 passenger decks named for Fellini films ("La Dolce Vita," "Intervista," "L'Europeo," etc.). Hand-blown Murano glass decorates every corner. There's a sculpture in the ship's disco, Dante's Inferno, featuring a cadre of glass devils cavorting amid strategically placed flames. Classic nudes stand next to slot machines in the casino.

Fun and games aboard the Costa Atlantica.

Fellini's aura fills the corridors. Life-size black-and-white photos from paparazzi of the '50s and '60s decorate one level: Marcello Mastroianni driving a sports car; Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton looking young and glamorous; Natalie Wood in the rain; Fellini walking up the Via Veneto in Rome.

The Atlantica is one of 10 Costa ships sailing the Caribbean and Europe. The ship spends winters alternating weekly between ports in the eastern and western Caribbean, with summer and fall spent visiting Russia, Egypt, Greece and Turkey.

The Italian aspects take Caribbean cruising to another level. We got a taste of Europe, while visiting Cozumel, Ocho Rios in Jamaica and Grand Cayman. The ship's Caffe Florian, a replica of the famous 18th century Venice cafe, was a favorite spot. Passengers can sink into red velvet banquettes and sip cappuccino while a pianist plays Brahms on a baby grand. And did I hear "Puppy Love?"

Announcements are made in Italian, French, German and English. The line's Caribbean cruises draw 80 percent North American passengers and 20 percent European, while the line's European trips flip-flop those demographics.

The Atlantica's 1,057 cabins are decorated in corals and light woods with Jacuzzi tubs in the suites. Spring for an ocean view, even if you can afford only an obstructed one. It's well worth it. On my veranda one morning, I sipped coffee as the azzuro mare drifted by and the misty hills of Cuba lingered in the distance. Now that's a vacation.

Cuisine on the Atlantica unfortunately is hit or miss. The hits, not suprisingly, all involved pasta, while other entrees during formal meals were never too memorable. The ship's specialty dining venue, Club Atlantica, however, lived up to its billing with strip steaks, Lyonnaise potatoes and wine decanted in formal style (cover charge $23 per person).

The ship's fitness center didn't draw much of a crowd besides the dancers and other performers who live on board. Too bad. The gym is at the front of the ship with treadmills facing into the wind behind a wall of windows, creating a view unparalled by any gym on land. In the spa, daily specials were offered. I scored an hourlong classic Swedish massage for $70.

Theme nights on the Atlantica turn the ship into an Italian street festival, including the night that Nino was king and an outrageous Roman Bacchanal on the last evening when passengers were furnished with bed sheets and toga-tying instructions. One guy wrote on his sheet, "My grandma went to Pompeii and all I got was this toga."

Decked out in our Roman togs, we filled the Caruso Theater to rate other passengers in a talent show. The contestant risked being "fed to the lion" — a guy in a fur suit — or winning a trip to the midnight buffet. A Bulgarian passenger won over the crowd with a stunning Puccini number. Nino "Mr. Pizza" Mannone sang "La Bamba" and narrowly made it to the prosciutto.

"When people can have a good laugh and feel they are welcomed, that's when they're having a good time," said cruise director Max Bertolotto, a Genova native who doffed his custom-made suit one night to pick up a guitar and play a serviceable Stevie Ray Vaughn tribute in the ship's Corrallo lounge.

Late at night, the best television was a rebroadcast from the ship's theater of the cruise director's version of the "Newlywed Game." A couple married 55 years recounted "making whoopie" on a relative's floor because the bed was too squeaky.

A man from Wisconsin was asked to name his favorite condiment. "Trojans," he replied, and looked bewildered by the laughter. His wife said mustard.

Cruises aboard the Costa Atlantica are from $599 in the Caribbean and $1,189 in Europe, per person, double occupancy. Discounts may be available.

Come on down!

Town Meeting gets underway Saturday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Does a $12 million sewer expansion get your attention?

How about a $400,000 override to balance the proposed $32 million operating budget?

BE THERE!

What: Town Meeting
When: 10 a.m., Saturday
Where: Sullivan Gymnasium at CMHS
What's up: Voting the budget, water & sewer projects, and bylaw changes

Do you think new, large homes in Cohasset are ruining the town's character?

These issues and more are on Saturday's agenda when the annual Town Meeting will convene at 10 a.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at the middle-high school.

With another override vote on the table as well as requests to fund water and sewer projects — money is at the heart of many of the major issues.

Town Meeting will cast votes on 21 articles, or items of business, detailed in the Town Warrant, which was mailed to all households. Extra warrants will be available Saturday.

Town Meeting will begin promptly at 10 a.m. and business will be conducted until 1 p.m., at which point there will be a break for lunch. The meeting will resume at 2 p.m. and will run until 5 p.m., unless it is determined by the Moderator George Marlette that business can be completed by 6 p.m.

In the event the meeting must carry over to a second night, it will resume Monday night at 7 p.m.

A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before Town Meeting can get underway. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting by the moderator, the presence of a quorum is presumed to continue unless it is challenged and a count shows a quorum is not present. Without a quorum, Town Meeting will be adjourned.

Articles are slated to be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant, although there has been some question of whether the water department articles should be moved up.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said Water

Spring to race Sunday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's time for the rubber to hit the road as walkers and runners will lace up their sneakers for a good cause during the 29th annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea and the first Fran Coffey Memorial Walk.

Sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, both events will take place Sunday, April 3. The walk will begin at 10 a.m. and will cover about three miles, and the Road Race will begin at 1 p.m. and will cover a roughly six-mile stretch. A portion of both courses will overlook the beautiful Cohasset seascape, and roads will be closed to traffic while they are taking place.

Pre-registration is already underway, but those who have not yet signed up still have time. Those interested in participating in either the race or walk should make their way to the South Shore Community Center on North Main Street either Saturday, April 2 from 9 a.m. until noon, or on the day of the race from 9 a.m. until noon — don't forget Daylight Savings time. Registration is $20 and all proceeds will be donated to various projects the Rotary Club supports.

Although the weather is difficult to predict during springtime in New England, Road Race Coordinator Brad Goodwin said

Sewer plans go before voters

'Big gorilla' article is $12M

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If last Saturday was a dress rehearsal then this Saturday's performance should go off without a hitch.

Although the audience was small perhaps due to the holiday weekend, members of the sewer commission and their consulting engineer took center stage as they walked through a series of four articles – or items of business – that are before Town Meeting during a well advertised, public forum Saturday morning.

The issue is significant because — the expansion of and access to — the sewer system that have dominated the news so far in 2005 show no signs of abating. Homeowners in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue areas have been the most passionate about the need to connect and have been serving as watchdogs to ensure any existing, excess capacity does not go to new developments.

The sewer commission's plans, if approved, would ultimately connect existing homes in designated priority areas to the sewer by both expanding Cohasset's treatment plant and through buying additional capacity from Hull. Priority areas are those which are either causing pollution of water bodies through failed septic systems or have the potential to do so.

How to pay for the new sewer districts will also be before Town Meeting voters. In the past, taxpayers have subsidized the North and Central sewer projects 50 percent, meaning the users pay 50 percent of the cost of betterments with the other half covered through a Prop. 2-1/2 debt exclusion that adds to everyone's property taxes.

Here is a snapshot of the sewer articles [Town Moderator George Marlette will take up each article in the warrant in order. There are 21articles in all].

- Article 11 - $100,000 to update the sewer commission's 1997 Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan to prioritize wastewater management solutions including the potential of satellite treatment plants and expanding the town's inter-municipal agreement with Hull.

The money for these studies, expected to take 12 months, would come out of the general town revenue and not the sewer

Sewers at a glance:

- Betterment costs per EDU in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Ave. sewer district would be roughly $27,400 or $13,200 if voters agree on a 50 percent subsidy
- Homeowners would have to pay for a grinder pump and the cost of installing the pipe from the house to the street estimated at $12,000 to $20,000 depending on the distance. Grinder pumps run about $3,500
- Gravity sewers would not be used because of the ledge in the area making them prohibitively expensive because of the depth in the ground the pipe installation would require.
- Cohasset currently has a 30-year agreement with Hull for 80,000 gallons per day. North Cohasset (near Straits Pond) is connected to Hull which could be expanded to include Rust Way, Deep Run and portions of Jerusalem Road

Town goes for another override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The way things are going the 'O' in Cohasset – could stand for override.

The small town of roughly 7,000 hasn't shied away from Prop. 2-1/2 override votes, whether they be for schools, sewer projects, or to make up a deficit in the operating budget.

Will this year's voters say "enough is enough" or will a majority say, overrides are a fact of life and the town can't live without them?

Saturday's annual Town Meeting may hold the answer. It could set the stage for another override ballot vote – solely for the school budget – at a special election on a date to be determined. Or Town Meeting could say "no" and ask town officials to cut the fiscal 2006 budget.

This year, a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override is being presented, which must first pass muster with

Name: Ray Kasperowicz

Occupation: CPA and chairman of the sewer commission

Best day of your life: I'm looking forward to it.

Best vacation: I've taken so few, so they're all great. Even six days in Maine fog is fine by me.

Favorite season: Sailing season – late May until Columbus Day.

Favorite holiday: Presidents Day – it makes no demands.

Favorite junk food: Anything from the Hostess food group with toxic creme filling in multiple units.

Favorite book: "A Parliament of Whores: A Lone Humorist Attempts to Explain the Entire U.S. Government," by P.J. O'Rourke.

Best movie: Chinatown.

Best TV show: Special Report with Brit Hume.

Best radio show: John Batchlor 10 p.m.-1 a.m., Mon.-Fri., 680 AM.

Pet peeve: Politicians who preach that "the rich" should pay more taxes while their wives file cheaper Pennsylvania returns rather than Massachusetts returns.

Most embarrassing moment: In high school I was given sheet music for piano accompaniment of a trumpet solo. I didn't realize the sheet music had to be transposed to match the trumpet. We never thought of practicing together. After a few bars, I knew something very bad was happening. So I stopped, and let the trumpet go on its own. I calmly pretended that the 200 people in the audience didn't notice me or at least that they shouldn't expect me to do anything sitting there.

Goal: Stay out of diapers as long as possible.

Person you'd most like to meet: Wonder Woman – in costume, of course.

Ray Kasperowicz

Biggest worry: That the sewer commission can gain full confidence in our Interon grinder pumps.

Best part of Cohasset: Sandy Beach when the water temperature is 65 degrees.

Those without sewer could see financial relief in future

But plan is tabled until the fall TM

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There are two types of homes in Cohasset: those that are on town sewer and those that aren't.

However, all property owners – whether connected to sewers or not – are subsidizing those in the North Cohasset Sewer District and in the expanded Central Sewer District.

Under the so-called "50-50," all taxpayers are footing half the bill for the cost of the North and Central projects. That means many homeowners are currently helping to pay for a service they currently do not have and may never get.

To that end, the Board of Health is floating plans for a new onsite wastewater management program, which could provide property owners whose homes won't be sewered with a 50 percent taxpayer subsidy to maintain and upgrade their septic systems.

The proposal, which would ask for an appropriation of $3 million to get the program underway, was slated to come before the April 2 annual Town Meeting. However, selectmen suggested the article be postponed to allow time for the financial aspects of the plan to be worked out, and the health board agreed to withdraw it. However, the health board will make a preliminary presentation at Saturday's Town Meeting to educate voters about the program. The wastewater plan would require a Prop. 2-1/2 debt exclusion.

In a nutshell, residents whose homes are on septic systems would be eligible to enroll and would pay an annual user fee of potentially $1,000 going into the onsite wastewater management fund. The town — through the fund — would be responsible for paying for all routine maintenance for onsite systems, such as regular pumping.

"Everyone needs a solution. I've been paying for a sewer I'm never going to see, and I'm not so trusting there will be a solution for me."
— Tom Callahan, Hillside Drive

In addition, if a system fails, the town would use the money in the fund to pick up half the cost of an upgrade, which averages roughly $35,000 in Cohasset. The $3 million "seed money" would be used to help pay for any necessary repairs to systems at the outset of the program.

While Selectman Rob Spofford agrees with the concept, he said there is currently no way to know how many homeowners would participate or what the town's liability would be. There are roughly 1,100 homes with septic systems in town, which is approximately 40 percent of the total households in Cohasset.

"I cannot make the assumption no one's going to join," Spofford said. "I have to assume everyone will." Assuming systems will cost roughly $30,000 to upgrade, "you've got a $30 million liability," he said.

Tom Callahan, who worked with the health board to draft the article, said the question is one of equality. He said because property owners in the North and Central Cohasset districts were provided sewer connections subsidized 50 percent by the town, offering a program which would provide the same for owners with septic systems, like himself, adds an element of fairness.

"There is an economic unfairness for septic-system owners, and a financial hit that is difficult for some people in town to deal with," he said. Callahan added the town is on its way to spending $12 million to sewer Little Harbor, and therefore, $3 million to begin a program for septic system maintenance is appropriate. He noted many homes with septic systems are in close proximity to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply.

"Everyone needs a solution. I've been paying for a sewer I'm never going to see, and I'm not so trusting there will be a solution for me," said Callahan.

But Spofford said the proposal needs to be flushed out more.

"The financials of this have not been thought through," he said. "We have zero money, but you want to start a program, no questions asked?

"You're asking the town to get into the insurance business. Are we prepared to do that?" asked Spofford.

Spofford suggested the article be brought back in the fall but said the health board should make a presentation on the floor of Town Meeting about the program.

In an interview after the meeting, health board chairman Steve Bobo said he is happy to do more work on the wastewater management plan.

"There are a number of people who have lots of money sense, including Rob Spofford," Bobo said. "I'm amazed at the ideas which have been forthcoming."

Bobo hopes to form a new committee after Town Meeting to provide policy, technical, and financial advice on the program.

Second attempt

By the way of background, Bobo said in 2000, the town approved a first version of a Comprehensive On-Site Wastewater Management Plan, but no one signed up.

However, with the formation of the wastewater committee, which includes Bobo and health agent Joseph Godzik Sewer Commission Chairman Raymond Kasperowicz, and residents John Cavanaro, Joseph Godzik, Jim Dedes, Jeff Moy, Ann Swanborg, and Vicky Neaves, years of reports have been reviewed to find a way to manage wastewater more effectively. The committee has been working with Callahan, a former selectman and conservation commissioner, on revamping the Wastewater Management Plan.

Callahan has said the previous plan — approved by the Department of Environmental Protection — did not attract participants because in order to join, the homeowner would have had to pass a Title 5 inspection. If the septic system failed the inspection, the homeowner would then be forced to make the upgrade even if the current septic system was still in working order. Title 5 is the state environmental code governing septic systems.

With the new proposal, residents could join regardless of the status of their system.

enterprise fund because the updated plan would benefit new, not existing sewer users, sewer commission chairman Ray Kasperowicz said. The cost would be spread out over roughly five years starting in fiscal 2007.

• Article 12 - Dubbed the "big gorilla" article that seeks $12 million to expand the capacity of Cohasset's sewer treatment plant to accommodate the estimated 150,000 gallons per day of additional wastewater flow from roughly 440 EDUs (Equivalent Dwelling Units) in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods. [Some homes may be condos or have more than one family, hence the EDUs].

The $12 million would cover permitting costs, modifications to the plant itself within its current footprint, and installing pipes in the streets; it does not include running the pipe from the house to the street. That cost would be covered by the user. Homeowners would also have to pay for the grinder pumps which the sewer commission would buy in bulk that would be installed on their property. Homeowners can choose a grinder pump that is buried in the ground or another model that can be installed in the basement.

The sewer commission said it has a "high level of confidence" with the $12 million figure ($1.4 million of that would pay for upgrading the plant itself) because 90 percent of the design work has been done. That work was paid for through prior Town Meeting authorizations over roughly the past four years.

The money would be paid back through betterment fees. Initially, there would be some financial impact starting in fiscal 2007 because betterments cannot be assessed until the sewer system is installed and working. Betterments will be the same for each EDU regardless and do not vary with frontage.

Sewer commissioner John Beck said the additional fresh water from the out-fall pipe into the harbor from the sewer plant expansion would not hurt the lobster industry. He said the additional amount – translating into two-tenths of one percent of the tidal flux – is negligible given the body of water and flow that exists there.

The sewer commission is adamant that only existing homes would be able to connect to the sewer and will not be installing studs at vacant lots.

• Article 13 — Seeks $1.2 million to expand the North Cohasset Sewer District to serve roughly 39 EDUs along portions of Jerusalem Road, Rust Way and Deep Run which would be connected to Hull. The money would be repaid through betterments once the system is functional.

• Article 14 — Seeks to share the cost of Articles 12 & 13 on a 50/50 basis., with half covered by user betterments and half by the general tax base. If passed, the funding would also require a debt exclusion override vote. The impact on the tax rate is estimated at 16 cents per $1,000 of valuation (two cents for Deep Run & Rust Way and 14 cents for Little Harbor).

Plans are to install sewers for both the expanded North Cohasset district and Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue at the same time with services complete by the fall of 2010.

Town Meeting gets underway at 10 a.m., Saturday (April 2) at the middle-high school.

voters at the tomorrow's (Saturday) Town Meeting and again at the ballot box. Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year. Voters can raise that tax cap through a majority vote at the ballot box.

If the override passes, it would be the fifth operating budget override approved since 1999 and the 12th since 1988.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained if the override passes, the tax levy as a whole will be 9.7 percent, 2 percent of which comes from new growth, which is charged to new construction. That means the average taxpayer will see an increase of 7.9 percent on their tax bills.

The override will account for about 1.8 percent of the total increase, and would add 19 cents to the tax rate, or roughly $126 for the owner of a $670,000 home — the average home value in Cohasset.

The average homeowner with a $670,000 home will pay $6,998 in taxes for fiscal 2005, based on a tax rate of $10.44 per $1,000. If the $400,000 override passes, it will be an additional 1.81 percent increase, or roughly $126 for the average homeowner, bringing that homeowner's total tax bill up to $7,550, a 7.89 percent increase from fiscal 2005. For fiscal 2006, the tax rate will increase to $11.27 per $1,000, or 82 cents including the override.

The tax rate also includes the built-in 2-1/2 percent increase, which will add $167 to the average bill, there will be a debt exclusion tax rate increase of 3.7 percent, or roughly $259 for the average bill. A Community Preservation Act surcharge is added to the total bill, which is equal to 1.5 percent.

It has been said this year's override would be the eighth in eight years. However, there has been a mix of both debt exclusion overrides and general operating budget overrides over the years, and it is important for voters to know the difference.

Debt exclusion overrides are passed by a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting and a majority vote at the ballot box. Debt exclusions are uses solely to cover special projects, such as sewer construction and school renovations., and their taxes go away when the debt is paid off.

Cohasset passed debt exclusions in May 1997, December 1998, and April 1999 specifically for sewer construction, totaling $24,363,600. In December 1999 and April 2000, debt exclusions were also passed for the school renovations for a total of $42,440,000.

Operating budget overrides permanently increase taxes, and since 1997, the town has passed four. In May of 1999, an operating budget override of $380,000 was passed. That year, voters had an option of three different overrides to vote on and both the $612,895 and $509,554 figures failed. Last spring, the town passed a $400,000 override which subsidized the school budget.

The override being proposed this year is a general override for the operating budget.

Commissioner John McNabb is concerned his department's article (number 18) to increase water rates could be too far back on the agenda, where maintaining a quorum becomes more of a challenge. If a quorum is not present and a vote cannot be taken, it could affect the department's being able to operate moving forward. Sullivan said he would meet with the Marlette to discuss the problem, and said Town Meeting will likely be given the option to vote on whether it approves moving the water-rate article.

Social Service League sponsors talk April 8

The Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a talk for parents of 11 to 15 year olds at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library about inappropriate sexual behavior and the problems these behaviors can cause. The program is geared toward parents of both boys and girls and will offer them the tools to minimize the discomfort and embarrassment these conversations can sometimes cause.

The talk will be led by Alan Jacobson, Psy. D., the Director of Outpatient Services at Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health. He is a Licensed Psychologist and Certified School Psychologist. He holds a clinical appointment at McLean Hospital and has worked in Community Mental Health on the South Shore for 15 years.

The program is free and open to all. For information, call the League Office at 781-383-0771.

Special education case costs expelled from school budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectmen are backing the school committee's decision to reduce its fiscal 2006 budget request by $240,000, leaving Town Meeting to decide whether it can handle a $400,000 override two years in a row.

However, there will be two tiers of approval necessary for the override to move forward: an affirmative Town Meeting vote, followed by a ballot vote, to be conducted during a special election.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said the committee feels there will be more community support for a lower number.

The school committee will take out $195,000, which it hopes it will not be required to pay for two special education cases currently in litigation. Shea said $185,000 would pay one-time tuition costs for a student that will soon turn 22 years old, and therefore will not be the responsibility of the school district in 2006. There is also a guardianship issue, as a local attorney has been awarded legal responsibility for the student, which requires the district to pay for that student's education even though the student has never lived in Cohasset. Shea said he has been in touch with state Rep. Garrett Bradley about the matter, and he is optimistic a solution can be found with the Department of Education.

A second $10,000 case is also in litigation, and the schools have been splitting the cost of that student with the Department of Mental Health, even though that student does not live in town.

Shea said he was told by the school department's attorney, "There is a reasonable chance the town will win." However, there is always the chance it will not, which is why he said the option of cutting the $195,000 is "not without risk." If the town loses and is required to pay for the two students, the money would likely come out of the stabilization fund as a one-time cost.

But cutting $195,000 only brings down the override request to $445,000, meaning the school department needs to cut an additional $45,000 from its budget. The school committee was not sure where those cuts would come from at the time the Mariner went to press. However, there could be some more shifting in the budget even before the $45,000 is made up. Joe McDonald, Supt. Denise Walsh's interim financial consultant, said the current amount budgeted for salaries is too low and won't cover the cost.

If the override passes, the School Committee will receive the entire $400,000 sum, but if it doesn't pass, Shea said it will be up to the town to decide how the reductions are dealt with and where the cuts are going to come from.

"If it decides they are all going to come out of the school budget, it's clear where the money will come from," he said. Shea said the cost to run the facilities must be paid for, the schools cannot turn off the lights or heat and they cannot stop maintaining the buildings. Schools also have an obligation to transport students to and from school, and special education costs are mandated, which only leaves salaries.

The school committee met with the advisory committee and board of selectmen Monday, March 28 during a budget summit, and discussed the possibility of bringing down the override request. After the meeting adjourned, the school committee met in a separate session and voted on its final budget figure. Shea presented that number to the board of selectmen Tuesday, March 29, and the board voted in support.

However, during the budget summit, Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee said her committee would like to understand what the implication of further reductions to the school department budget would look like. She said she would like to see what the budget would look like with a $200,000 override request, or what it would look like if an override doesn't pass and it is required to make up the entire amount.

To date, the school department has whittled down its proposed fiscal 2006 budget by:

- cutting $40,000 in maintenance — to be covered on the town's side of the budget
- cutting $40,000 in supplies and materials — hopefully to be taken care of by Cohasset Educational Foundation funding
- cutting $30,000 in athletics — hopefully to be supported by local boosters clubs
- not hiring a new math teacher for $45,000
- not purchasing new math books for $6,000 which would have been used in that teacher's class
- cutting three instructional aides for $51,000.

If the override passes at Town Meeting, selectmen will call a special election and vote to put the override on the special election ballot. A special election could cost the town between $3,000 and $5,000.

Budget is bound to draw a crowd

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Voters probably won't want to be late for Saturday's Town Meeting which will being promptly at 10 a.m.

That's because "Article 3" asks them to accept the Town Manager's roughly $31.8 million, proposed fiscal 2006 operating budget.

Town Moderator George Marlette takes the articles up in order. Articles 1 & 2, which ask voters to accept reports of town officials and committees, are unlikely to generate debate.

But hold onto your seatbelts when Article 3 comes up. That's because balancing the budget will require a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override approved at Town Meeting and later at the ballot box during a special election. (See related story).

Override questions ask voters to raise their taxes beyond the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year.

voters at the tomorrow's (Saturday) Town Meeting and again at the ballot box. Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year. Voters can raise that tax cap through a majority vote at the ballot box.

If the override passes, it would be the fifth operating budget override approved since 1999 and the 12th since 1988.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained if the override passes, the tax levy as a whole will be 9.7 percent, 2 percent of which comes from new growth, which is charged to new construction. That means the average taxpayer will see an increase of 7.9 percent on their tax bills.

The override will account for about 1.8 percent of the total increase, and would add 19 cents to the tax rate, or roughly $126 for the owner of a $670,000 home — the average home value in Cohasset.

The average homeowner with a $670,000 home will pay $6,998 in taxes for fiscal 2005, based on a tax rate of $10.44 per $1,000. If the $400,000 override passes, it will be an additional 1.81 percent increase, or roughly $126 for the average homeowner, bringing that homeowner's total tax bill up to $7,550, a 7.89 percent increase from fiscal 2005. For fiscal 2006, the tax rate will increase to $11.27 per $1,000, or 82 cents including the override.

The tax rate also includes the built-in 2-1/2 percent increase, which will add $167 to the average bill, there will be a debt exclusion tax rate increase of 3.7 percent, or roughly $259 for the average bill. A Community Preservation Act surcharge is added to the total bill, which is equal to 1.5 percent.

It has been said this year's override would be the eighth in eight years. However, there has been a mix of both debt exclusion overrides and general operating budget overrides over the years, and it is important for voters to know the difference.

Debt exclusion overrides are passed by a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting and a majority vote at the ballot box. Debt exclusions are uses solely to cover special projects, such as sewer construction and school renovations., and their taxes go away when the debt is paid off.

Cohasset passed debt exclusions in May 1997, December 1998, and April 1999 specifically for sewer construction, totaling $24,363,600. In December 1999 and April 2000, debt exclusions were also passed for the school renovations for a total of $42,440,000.

Operating budget overrides permanently increase taxes, and since 1997, the town has passed four. In May of 1999, an operating budget override of $380,000 was passed. That year, voters had an option of three different overrides to vote on and both the $612,895 and $509,554 figures failed. Last spring, the town passed a $400,000 override which subsidized the school budget.

The override being proposed this year is a general override for the operating budget.

Special education case costs expelled from school budget

Town Moderator George Marlette takes the articles up in order. Articles 1 & 2, which ask voters to accept reports of town officials and committees, are unlikely to generate debate.

But hold onto your seatbelts when Article 3 comes up. That's because balancing the budget will require a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override approved at Town Meeting and later at the ballot box during a special election. (See related story).

Override questions ask voters to raise their taxes beyond the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year.

To the Citizens of Cohasset

Please be aware of the extremely NEGATIVE IMPACT ARTICLE 8 will have on your PROPERTY if passed at the April 2 Annual Town Meeting

ONLY 10 Citizens have submitted a Citizens' Petition for this new zoning bylaw.

These 10 citizens have their own agenda which will have a negative impact on the Value of commercial and residential properties in Cohasset, Mass.

1. No Trees, Soil, Topsoil, Subsoil, Gravel or Ledge may be removed from your property without a SPECIAL PERMIT from the planning board for most new and renovation construction projects including areas for reserve septic systems.

2. The amount of monies for legal and engineering and time involved to receive a SPECIAL PERMIT from the planning board will be a very costly and lengthy process for most construction projects in Cohasset.

3. The provisions of this new bylaw are very confusing and ambiguous as to Applicability, Standards and Exemption of this proposed bylaw.

Do you want to get a special permit from the planning board to build on your own land?

From left, Richard Jensen of Weymouth, John King of Weymouth, and Sarah deLima of Cohasset, are on stage in "Company" through April. Tickets, priced at $24-$28 are now available at The Company Theatre box-office, located at 30 Accord Park in Norwell, online at www.companytheatre.com, and by calling 781-871-2787.

'Company' brings Cohasset's Sarah deLima full circle

Local actress stars in musical

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Stephen Sondheim's 1970 musical "Company" is considered to have begun the modern era of musical theatre. This according to Norwell's Company Theatre, which will open its own version of the landmark Sondheim production today (Friday) beginning a run through April 24.

"Company" also began the era of live-theatre experience in America for Cohasset stage actress Sarah deLima. Raised in England, deLima remembers the original Broadway production of the show as the first U.S. theatre performance she attended in 1970, shortly after emigrating to the States following her marriage to Richard deLima, a now retired Cohasset attorney, whom she met in Rome

"This was the original, debut run of the show, with Elaine Stritch in the role of Joanne," said deLima during a break at last week's "Company" dress rehearsal. "Also with Donna McKechnie and several other up-and-coming. later-to-be-famous actors and actresses of the time."

Thirty-five years later, deLima has stepped into Elaine Stritch's shoes and the role of Joanne in this newest community theatre take on "Company," which attempts to semi-update the Sondheim play for the current era

"Company," with music and lyrics by Sondheim and based on a book by George Furth, concerns the relationships between Robert, a single man who is celebrating his 35th birthday, and the five married couples who are his best friends. The show was groundbreaking in its time for not only its blend of musical and romantic comedy settings but also its use of ensemble cast interplay as well as a script of short, chronologically interchangeable scenes

The contemporary themes of marriage, commitment, friendship and love are touched upon by the cast of quirky characters as well as some memorable original songs by Sondheim, including "Side By Side By Side," "You Could Drive A Person Crazy" and "Being Alive."

"Company" opened on Broadway at the Alvin Theatre in 1970 and starred Dean Jones, Barbara Barrie, Charles Kimbrough, and Elaine Stritch. It went on to win that year's New York Drama Critics Circle Award and the Tony Award for Best Musical

"Joanne is a New York socialite character who believes she is very worldly wise in matters of love and commitment. She seems very hard-bitten on the outside, but then shows that she's not quite as hard and tough from a more close-up view," deLima said.

The daughter of English missionaries, deLima, 57, was born Sarah Boulton in India. She grew up in England and is a graduate of The Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London.

Marrying and moving to the U.S., deLima lived first in Akron, Ohio, then in Wellesley, Mass., before settling in Cohasset, where she has remained for 32 years. The mother of four describes herself as a proud U.S. citizen.

Begun in England, deLima's stage acting career has carried on steadily during her three-and-a-half decades in the States. In New England, her credits include appearances productions of "H.M.S. Pinafore", "The Shaughraun", and "A Christmas Carol" at the Huntington and Wilbur Theatres. She has also appeared at The American Repertory Theatre, Wheelock Family Theatre, The Lyric Stage Company and Turtle Lane Playhouse in Boston, The Zeiterion Theatre in New Bedford, and Hackmatack Playhouse in Berwick, Maine.

Some of deLima's favorite roles have included Mrs. Lovett in "Sweeney Todd" and Arlene in "Baby". Also, Mother Superior and Sister Hubert in a 1998 Company Theatre production of "Nunsense", Lady Bracknell in "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Ruth in "Pirates of Penzance". She has been recently seen as Aunt Kate in "James Joyce's The Dead" at The Huntington Theatre.

deLima mentions that all four of her children, Caroline, Kate, Jane and Jonathan, ages 19 to 34, have performed in past Company Theatre productions. Most recently last summer, when daughter Caroline took on the role of Mae West in the Theatre presentation of "Dirty Blonde."

Last fall, Sarah and Caroline performed together for the first time in the American Standard Theatre production of "Strike Up the Band." The Company Theatre has also announced that it will be sending two theatre-goers to a Red Sox game this year at Friday's opening of "Company." Anyone who "steps up to the plate" and purchases a pair of tickets to Opening Night will automatically be entered into a drawing to win a pair of tickets to a Red Sox game in 2005

Tickets can be purchased at the box-office located at 30 Accord Park in Norwell, Ma, by phone at 781-871-2787, and online at www.companytheatre.com

Spiritual healing is subject of Cohasset talk

Marian English of Colorado Springs is coming to the South Shore for talk titled "Spiritual Healing is for Today." She will speak at the Paul Pratt Public Library on Ripley Road, on Tuesday evening, April 5, at 7:30 p.m.

A former jazz pianist and radio DJ, English has devoted the past 20 years to counseling, comforting, and healing on a spiritual basis. Her work is based on concepts from the book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. English speaks across North American explaining how ideas in this book can be applied to any problem, large or small. She also uses this book as a text for teaching classes on spiritual healing.

During her talk in Cohasset, she plans to make very clear that the healing Jesus practiced over 2000 years ago is still completely possible today. She says, "This healing is not old-fashioned, out-moded, or naïve, but vibrant, alive, possible, and practical. It is not only safe for ourselves, but can help to heal a very troubled world." Her talk will include present-day examples of spiritual healing along with ideas to help those interested in bringing this healing into their own experience.

Marian English

English has been described as a "dynamic storyteller, engaging her audiences with humor, insight, and encouragement." Everyone is invited to attend.

Responsible Leadership

Dear Voter,

Cohasset means a lot to me, and I would like to preserve its character for future generations. To do this, our goals must be: to be good stewards of Cohasset's natural and man-made environments, to maintain its size as a small town, and to strive for housing and tax affordability to retain the economic diversity of our people.

As selectman, I will never lose sight of these goals. I will advocate for implementing the town's 2004 Master Plan, a great roadmap for Cohasset that was developed with major input from we, the people.

I graduated from CHS in 1958, and obtained engineering degrees from Harvard and MIT. I have been running my own engineering firm for 38 years.

I am President of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a founding member of the Cohasset Land Foundation, and a founding member of the Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee.

I led the citizens group that obtained town support and oversaw the renovation and expansion of the town's athletic fields and tennis facilities.

I served on the Sewer Commission for twenty years.

Two of my children went through the Cohasset Schools, the third left after ninth grade.

So you can see that I am very connected to Cohasset, its environment, its institutions, and its people. I only want the best for our town. I look forward to serving you as Selectman.

Raimund G. 'Gary' Vanderweil, Jr.

Gary Vanderweil

■ Preserve Cohasset's Character
By 'character of Cohasset', I mean its natural and man-made environments, its size, and its people.

■ Affordable Housing for Residents
We need affordable ownership housing. I want our teachers, fishermen, and municipal employees to be able to own homes in town.

■ Sewering for Existing Residents
Sewering should be prioritized based on the town's environmental needs, not on which developer gets in line first or threatens the biggest law suit.

■ Implement Cohasset's New Master Plan
Our Master Plan Committee put together a plan reflecting what we the townspeople really want. Now, let's implement it.

Schools not only ones being cut

Two advisors question priorities

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While School Committee Chairman Rick Shea the town would be more likely to pass a $400,000 override than a $640,000 override, advisory committee member Pat Waters said he was not sure bringing down the override figure is a true reflection of what the town wants. "What are our priorities?" he asked. "Are the schools the last $12 million or the first?"

Waters added the town always says education is a top priority, but every year, it is the schools that face the last-minute crunch in the budget. "You don't fund everything else and not pay for your priority," he said.

Waters raised the issue during a three-way budget summit Monday with selectmen, the school committee and advisory committee.

Advisory committee member James Gilman agreed with Waters that schools seem to be the only town department under the knife.

"We haven't talked once about laying off anyone but teachers," Gilman said.

But Town Manager Bill Griffin explained the "town side" has already been cut and its budget has been presented as a balanced document.

"Maybe in the future, we won't do it that way," he said. Griffin added, cuts were made "without any fanfare," and the school and town budgets are being compared as if those town cuts never happened.

There have been roughly $680,000 in departmental cuts from the town's proposed budget:

- $8,000 from the Selectmen's office
- $1,000 in Town Manager clerical reductions
- $1,300 in Director of Finance supplies
- $6,000 from the Board of Assessors office
- $2,300 for Treasurer/Collector supplies
- $30,000 from the legal budget
- $18,000 from the Town Clerk
- $30,000 from the Town Planner allocation
- $17,000 from water purchase
- $135,000 from the police department (one officer, one seasonal officer, dog officer hours, training, capital)
- $191,000 from the fire department (one paramedic, capital, and water purchase)
- $2,300 from the harbormaster
- $48,600 from the DPW (one laborer, highway materials)
- $8,700 from the Board of Health (agent, nurse hours, supplies)
- $12,000 from the Elder Affairs office
- $575 from the veterans budget
- $33,000 from the town library
- $3,400 from pension assessments
- $15,000 from worker's compensation
- $93,000 in health insurance enrollment reductions
- $21,000 in property insurance for police and fire accident coverage

Voters to put fiscal 2005 to bed

Article six will ask Town Meeting to provide additional funding for various departmental budgets that are experiencing a shortfall in fiscal 2005. The funds are necessary to complete the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

If approved, $100,000 will be put into the Reserve Fund to cover fiscal 2005 school department expenses. That money would be added to the roughly $160,000 voters at the fall Special Town Meeting agreed to transfer into the Reserve Fund — $93,000 to cover a projected utility shortfall as well as $67,000 for underbudgeted unemployment costs — which will be dispensed by the Advisory Committee to the school department as needed. The Reserve Fund is similar to a savings account, as it is used to hold money which has been set aside to fund future items.

In addition to the Reserve Fund allocation, article six will ask Town Meeting to approve adding $100,000 to the school department budget to help offset any further costs which arise from fiscal 2005.

The $400,000 override, if passed, is for fiscal 2006.

Other departmental increases covered in article six include adding $40,000 to the Town Counsel budget. Voters will also decide whether to add $100,000 to the police department budget and $75,000 to the fire department budget to make up their respective overtime shortfalls. Town Meeting will also be asked to approve adding $30,000 to the building maintenance budget and $16,000 for unemployment expenses.

Lace up to run or walk for a good cause

there isn't much that can keep people away from this annual tradition.

"Bad weather doesn't really bother many runners," he said. In fact, he said at the beginning of this week, 500 runners had already pre-registered to be in the Road Race, 30 of which signed up in one day. "Last year we had 870 total," he said, adding many runners come out at the last minute, crossing their fingers Mother Nature will cooperate.

Fran Coffey Memorial Walk at a glance

Date: Sunday, April 3

Time: 10 a.m. (Remember Daylight Savings time)

Where: Sandy Beach

Distance: 5K (3.1 miles)

Route: From Sandy Beach down Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road, to North Main Street, to Ripley Road, to Depot Court, to South Main Street, to Elm Street, onto Margin Street, back onto Atlantic Avenue, and the walk will end at Sandy Beach.

Although many runners come from Cohasset, Goodwin said he has quite a mix of participants in terms of location. He said there are many runners who have signed up from neighboring towns such as Scituate and Marshfield, but he also has runners representing every state in New England. Last year he said he even had some participants travel all the way from California.

"They do come from all over," he said, adding some use the race to train for bigger marathons.

While the Road Race is a large part of the day, this year the Rotary Club has renamed the fun walk to honor longtime Rotary race and walk supporter, Fran Coffey. "Actually, he was more than 'just' a volunteer, Franny was one of the original supporters of the race," said Goodwin.

Goodwin said Coffey was instrumental with organizing the walk and race year after year, and after he passed away last spring, the Cohasset Rotary Club decided due to all his help and dedication, and in light of the fact that in his personal life, he embodied the Rotary motto of "service above self," the walk should serve as a memorial in his honor. The Rotary Club will donate the proceeds from the walk to two causes very dear to the Coffey family, "People in Need" at St. Patrick's in Roxbury, and the Bishop Ruocco House for Girls in Lakeville.

"There's going to be a whole different feel," said Goodwin of the walk this year, adding because it is being held in Coffey's honor, it has taken on a special purpose and he has seen a great response. "I hope it will continue to grow and be as successful as the race," he said.

Goodwin expects there could be between 200 and 400 walkers in attendance Sunday.

Year after year there are a number of people who come out to volunteer during the events as well, and Goodwin said the day wouldn't be possible without their help. He said from local businesses who donate various food and drink items to those volunteers who come out to help direct traffic or just cheer the runner on, every bit of support is appreciated. "But we could always use more," he quipped.

The Rotary Club has renamed the fun walk to honor longtime Rotary race and walk supporter, Fran Coffey.

Each year, Goodwin's brother Ronnie, owner of Goodwin Graphics in Cohasset, has printed up the Road Race t-shirts for participants, and although Brad said the design is beautiful every year, this year he said he is especially happy with the way the shirts turned out. He said they are long-sleeved with a picture of Minot's Light on the front, and the first 800 participants to register are guaranteed to receive one.

Proceeds from this year's Road Race will be used to sponsor a number of different programs the Rotary Club sponsors, including the Appalachia Service Project, the Cohasset Recreation Department, the Cohasset Elder Affairs, the American Cancer Society, the Board of Health wellness clinic, the post prom party, Habitat for Humanity, and they will help provide the annual Rotary Club scholarship.

To register to run or walk, please visit www.roadracebythesea.com or check for more information at www.coolrunning.com. Applications will also be available in Cohasset at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shop, and the South Shore Community Center. Online registration is $15, on site registration is $20 and will be held at the Community Center Saturday, April 2 from 9 a.m. until noon and Sunday April 3 from 9 a.m. until noon (remember Daylight Savings time). For race questions please call (781) 383-9030 or send an e-mail to info@roadracebythesea.com.

TO STOP POLLUTION AND HELP SOLVE COHASSET'S WASTEWATER DILEMMA, PLEASE COME TO TOWN MEETING ON SATURDAY, APRIL 2, AND VOTE 'YES' ON FOUR SEWER COMMISSION ARTICLES!

What are the articles about?

1. Creating wastewater solutions for the whole town and public financing options for septic systems AND sewers. (1 article)
2. Replacing non-Title V compliant and failing septic systems near Little Harbor and the Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road coastline with a sewer, an effective and permanent solution. These 2 articles assume all costs are paid by users.
3. Authorizing a betterment/taxes cost split similar to the ones voted for the North and Central Cohasset sewers. This separate article would allow half the cost of the sewer mains in the street and the treatment plant upgrade to be paid for by Town taxes.

Why should you support the Sewer Commission in passing these articles?

• TO STOP POLLUTION: It will stop the flow of septic system effluent containing fecal coliform and other harmful bacteria into our waterways.

• TO SETTLE THE STATE'S LAWSUIT: It will allow Cohasset to settle its outstanding legal judgment with the State and avoid fines and sanctions.

• TO FACILITATE FUNDING: It will put Cohasset higher on the priority list for low interest State loans, perhaps reducing the cost of sewer projects and certainly reducing the cost to homeowners.

• TO SECURE AMNESTY: It will pave the way for Title V septic system amnesty for residents who sell homes with non-compliant systems in areas scheduled for sewers, as long as they are not a public health risk.

EVERY VOTER FROM EVERY HOUSEHOLD WILL BE NEEDED!

Town Meeting time

We're going to see a lot of familiar faces Saturday. You know who you are: you're the Town Meeting groupies.

You've been bitten by the bug, have discovered the secret, and/or just want to see old friends.

To put it simply, Town Meeting is interesting, entertaining and even fun. The only bad part are those hard chairs and bleachers, but that matter can be resolved by bringing a cushion along.

At the risk of being run out of town due to our wet weather of late, we're actually hoping for showers tomorrow. We're hoping if the skies are gray and it's rainy outside, more Cohasset citizens might "come on down" to the Sullivan Gymnasium.

We don't think there's any chance Town Meeting will have "quorum troubles" in fact, we'd bet from 300 to 400 people will be in attendance.

It would be wonderful to double that number! Why? Because Town Meeting is where the action is. It's the town's "legislative body" that spends money and changes bylaws – both of which can affect your quality of life.

One of the best things about "open" Town Meeting, which Cohasset has, is that anyone can air their views and everyone can vote. Some towns, mostly larger ones, have representative Town Meetings where elected representatives cast the votes.

Another aspect of Town Meeting, which we really appreciate, is that complex issues are usually explained in a clear manner. Anyone who has been in Cohasset more than five minutes knows "complexities" are almost as common as "controversies" in this small seaside town.

As reporters we cover the issues week in and week out, but at Town Meeting there is often another aspect presented that we hadn't heard before which further illuminates a project or expenditure.

We sincerely hope to see more younger people at Town Meeting which is often populated by the "gray guards" – those older folks, members of the Greatest Generation, who are standing guard for our democracy to ensure that this venerable form of government continues to thrive.

These grandparents and great-grandparents know the value of a dollar and we have always found their contribution to Town Meeting to be a critical part of the governing process.

While we enjoy a healthy debate, we urge everyone to practice civility. We're one town with a lot of divergent views about everything from overrides to sewer capacity. It's important to remember however, while you may not agree with their decisions, those who sit on our boards and committees are our neighbors and fellow taxpayers.

The best way to handle an issue you feel passionately about is to speak up, make your case, and cast your vote. And the best way to make a difference is to get involved. There's a "Town Government Resource Bank" application on page 45 of the warrant. Please take a moment to fill it out and offer your time and talent to one of the appointed committees in town.

Cohasset cannot continue to thrive without creative, new ideas and boundless energy. The town needs you, and the best way to get fired up about local government is to go to Town Meeting. You won't regret it.

No search for CMHS principal needed

TO THE EDITOR:

Parents, students, alumni, friends:

I recently was informed that Jack DeLorenzo, who wishes to continue as our Middle/High School Principal is only being considered for the position if the Superintendent's search doesn't find anyone else she would like at this time. Why are we searching in the first place?

Jack has been a dedicated administrator in our schools for 19 years. During that time he has touched so many of our children and is respected by all of them. He has always been there for them. A strong disciplinarian, but fair, consistent, and always has the best interest of our children in mind.

We all appreciate the fact that no matter what the activity, a sporting event, drama, music, town activities, he is there to support our children.

We recently completed a major construction project, who worked on behalf of the school and students and staff to ensure that their needs came first, Jack DeLorenzo.

His wife has told me so many times that on weekends he has received calls from parents on behalf of their children and students who have forgotten something at school and Jack has always responded with I'll meet you there in five minutes. She also tells me how many times he has been called at all hours of the day and night from the police and others that there is a problem at school, he is dressed and out the door without question.

In speaking to a staff member recently, she had nothing but positive comments about the great way that Jack is handling his duties as principal this year. They want him to stay.

Jack, thank you for being there for three of my four children who attended Cohasset Middle/High School while you have been there, and now my grandchildren.

To our Community I ask, is this the way we are going to thank him, by letting walk out the door when he doesn't want to? I believe it is time for us to be there for him.

Please attend the School Committee Meeting at 7 p.m., April 7 in the Superintendent's suite next to Alumni Field.

Please be there or contact one of our School Committee Members: Rick Shea, Jamie Williams, Rick Flynn or Adrienne MacCarthy.

Merit pay would help good teachers

TO THE EDITOR:

I read with interest the letter of Barbara Buckley, wife of teacher Jack Buckley. By all accounts, Jack is one of the most committed teachers in our School District. He is also fairly senior. To my way of thinking, Jack would be an ideal candidate to benefit from a merit pay system. Based on the 2004 Annual Report, four teachers/administrators earned between $90,000 and $104,000(the two superintendents earned $154,974 with some vacation time accrual). Four teachers earned between $80,000 and $90,000. Twenty-three teachers earned between $70,000 and $80,000. Twenty-nine teachers earned between $60,000 and $70,000. Or, a total of 61 administrators/teachers earned greater than $60,000. Forty-three of those teachers earned more than Jack Buckley. Under a merit pay system, I suspect that Jack should be one of the highest paid teachers in the Cohasset School District.

Contract negotiations should not try to "zero-out" our teacher's pay increases for any of the next three fiscal years. Our teachers have to survive the ravages of inflation like everyone else. That means that a $600,000 override is probably insufficient because it assumes no cost of living increase.

I realize that instituting a merit pay system will have to be done over a period of years; perhaps 10. The key to its success is a fair performance evaluation system. A merit pay system should be regarded "cost neutral;" that is to say that only the very best teachers would get above average increases and only the small percentage of poor teachers would get a smaller increase that the contractual average.

Once implemented, the Jack Buckleys of the world will be paid better and the small percentage of poor teachers will be incentivized to improve their performance or find another profession. A great teacher is of inestimable value and a poor teacher can ruin a child's learning potential.

Heartfelt thanks

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of my family and me, I want to thank you, the Cohasset Community for the love and support provided to us on Saturday at our service for Shelly as well as the days that have followed.

We love her so much and the pain we are feeling has been lessened by the support that so many of you have bestowed on us. Margaux, Chris (and Shelly's sisters Cindy and Kathy), have begun our journey into new waters buoyed by your kindness. My heartfelt thanks.

Cook Estate revisited

TO THE EDITOR:

In her Commentary article about the Cook estate published March 25, Karen Quigley asserts that seniors are leaving their homes because of Cohasset taxes. Only partly true; many seniors every year are moving to senior housing because they no longer need a large house and don't want the work and expense of maintaining house and grounds. Maybe some would stay in their homes a little longer if taxes were less burdensome, but it's unwillingness to continue coping with the burden of maintaining the house that is the prime reason that eventually causes almost everyone to sell.

There may be a few, a very few, who would sell only if they could find senior housing in Cohasset, but would remain for life if selling meant having to relocate to senior housing in some other town. But to most people, the major factor in deciding between selling or staying put is their desire to escape the burdens of maintaining the house. Whether there is senior housing available (or not) in Cohasset has little effect on the number of residents who choose to sell, and has little effect on their timing of selling.

Hence it is nonsense to suggest that providing senior housing in Cohasset increases the number of school children, on the grounds that having senior housing available in Cohasset encourages seniors to sell out to younger couples with children. Seniors are selling when ready to do so, whether or not there is senior housing available in Cohasset.

Therefore, locating senior housing in Cohasset does not increase the burden on the schools. On the contrary, it helps pay for the schools because it increases the tax revenues without commensurate increased cost of services provided by the town. Letting our departing seniors find housing elsewhere deprives us of that financial advantage.

There are many other specious arguments against the Cook estate besides those that are really arguments against locating any senior housing in Cohasset. In fact the plan was a masterful compromise between many competing considerations, undone by the bad luck of finding that in-depth initial analysis of soil permeability did not confirm the preliminary findings. There was some validity to a few of the criticisms, but it was the economically feasible way to acquire senior housing on the Cook estate, rather than let it slip away for development of more "McMansions." Downsizing is smoking opium; it is unrealistic to expect the Cook trustees to subsidize it by selling this valuable real estate below market value, it is unrealistic to expect subsidy from tax revenue or donations from the public or from local organizations.

Well, focusing gleefully on the bad luck (or misjudgment) about permeability, and on the project's perceived deficiencies, instead of understanding its virtues and working constructively to preserve it, probably has doomed the hope of influencing the usage of this real estate to the town's advantage. That may be OK with those who don't favor senior housing in Cohasset. Those who do had better start seeking some other site in Cohasset.

Cohasset traffic and parking changes ...

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER AND MARK BRENNAN

In the interest of safety, the Selectmen and the MBTA determined that it was desirable to minimize the number of streets that cross the tracks of the Greenbush Commuter Rail System. In Cohasset, three crossings will be eliminated. One is at Lincoln Lane, a private lane near the Scituate line, serving one house. Alternate access will be provided for that house. The second is on the branch of Spring Street opposite the Historical Society's Pratt Building.

The last crossing is Smith Place, near the Post Office. After the railroad is restored, Smith Place will be closed just behind the Carousel antique shop. No longer will this be a short cut into the neighborhood to the southwest of the tracks. The only access will be down Pleasant Street to Cushing Road. We do not have final drawings yet from the MBTA for the area around Smith Place. As soon as we get them we will notify the abutters for their comments. We expect to see them in the next month or two.

Historically, the parking area behind the old ABB Optical building has been used as overflow parking for the various businesses around the Post Office, including the Post Office itself. The ABB Optical building has been purchased by other interests and is being utilized as a retail facility. The new owners have asked that only businesses and shopkeepers located in the 1 Pleasant Street building (now called James Brook Crossing) as well as their customers use the parking spaces on their property. So, this property is no longer available to the general public for parking. Reconfiguration of the Town Parking Lot will accommodate some of these lost spaces. There is a new temporary gravel parking lot that has been constructed across from the old Parfait building on Pleasant Street, near James Lane. This new parking lot will be enlarged and paved by the MBTA. It's parking spaces will add to those available in the main part of the Town Parking Lot.

Unlike all other commuter rail lines in Massachusetts, on the Greenbush line, horns will not be routinely sounded by the locomotives at each street crossing.

You may have heard about quad gates ...

The railroad crossing at Pleasant Street near the Town Parking Lot will be the only crossing designed with "quad gates." Quad gates are a bit more complex for the MBTA to install and maintain, but eliminate the medians dividing the road that will be used at every other crossing in Cohasset. The medians are about 4 feet wide and have 6 in. to 9 in. high granite curbs to separate the opposing lanes of traffic. Their purpose is to keep vehicles in a lane so they cannot turn and zigzag through the gates when the gates are in the down position. With quad gates there will be a total of four gates, two gates on either side of the crossing, blocking both the entering and exiting traffic lanes. Thus, it will be impossible for vehicles to zigzag into the opposite traffic lanes, since those lanes will be blocked as well. The main reason for using quad gates at the Pleasant street crossing is to narrow the width of the road by four feet through elimination the medians. Without quad gates, Pleasant Street would be four feet wider in an already tight space.

You might ask why the MBTA is going to so much trouble to control vehicle traffic at the rail crossings. To answer this question, you must keep in mind that this branch of the Old Colony Commuter Rail System is very unique. Unlike all other commuter rail lines in Massachusetts, on the Greenbush line, horns will not be routinely sounded by the locomotives at each street crossing. This is why by design, the crossings are being made more "fool proof." But, all crossings will still have flashing lights and warning bells that will sound to warn people close to the crossings.

Taking steps to prevent rabies

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Since 1992, when raccoon strain rabies first entered Massachusetts, extensive resources have been directed towards controlling this disease. Several different state agencies assist local authorities in rabies mitigation. MDPH provides guidance on the evaluation and management of human exposures to known or suspect rabid animals, but the decision to receive post-exposure prophylaxis is made by the affected individual together with his or her healthcare provider. The State Laboratory Institute (SLI) at MDPH tests animals for rabies. The Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources, Division of Animal Health, Biosecurity and Dairy Services (DAH) provides guidance on rabies in domestic animals and makes decisions about the quarantine of domestic animals. The Massachusetts Department of Fisheries, Wildlife, and Environmental Law Enforcement, Division of Fisheries and Wildlife provides guidance on the control of wildlife, including those species that commonly carry rabies.

All of these resources are available to Al Currie, our Animal Control officer. Al divides his time between Cohasset and Hingham; from 8 to 10 a.m. for Cohasset, and the rest of the time for Hingham. To report a wild or stray animal in your neighborhood, call Animal Control at 781 383-1055 Al is quite competent, reliable, helpful and informed. The best way to reach him is to leave off a note at the police station. Otherwise, there is a rather lengthy voice message procedure which will permit leaving a number.

Rabies is a serious threat to people, since contact with a rabid animal can result in transmission of the disease. A common means of transmission is for a household pet to contract the disease through contact with a rabid wild animal and then transmit the illness to the family. Such cases, although not frequent, result in the need for post exposure prophylaxis of household members; ten days of observation, and long periods of quarantine for the pet. According to Al Currie, it's necessary to continue to keep children informed about avoiding not only wild and undomesticated animals, but also pets of neighbors, etc. with which the children have little familiarity. Such animals may bite or otherwise injure children, and require medication not only for the injury, but rabies testing for the animal as well as those associated with it.

Here are some rules you and your family should use to avoid contracting rabies:

1. Have your pets vaccinated against rabies. A rabies vaccination shot will help protect your dog, cat or ferret from rabies. Make sure your pets stay up to date on their vaccination shots.
2. Do not go near wild animals. Raccoons, skunks, foxes, bats and other wild animals may be infected with rabies and should not be touched; also, domesticated pets with which you may not be familiar.
3. Stay away from stray animals. Cats and dogs that roam outdoors are more likely to be infected with rabies and may bite you. Do not try to feed or pet them.
4. Make sure that your home and yard do not attract wild animals. Keep garbage cans tightly covered. Do not leave pet food outdoors. Cap chimneys and seal places where animals can get in and hide.
5. If you are scratched or bitten by an animal...

• Wash your wound with lots of soap and water.

• TELL AN ADULT and have them call the doctor right away.

Yes vote on sewer articles is urged

COMMENTARY

RICHARD BROOKS

In December, Town Meeting voted overwhelmingly for the Selectmen and the Sewer Commission to bring the Warrant Articles for the sewering of Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue to the upcoming April 2 Town Meeting. The Sewer Commission, responsive to the voters, has done just that with four Articles that cover the priority areas to be sewered and a funding choice for the voters. The first of the four Articles is to authorize some modest funds to evaluate other areas of the Town for possible sewering.

To finish this 25-year saga and end the pollution of our coastal neighborhoods and waters, to avoid substantial fines and other sanctions that could be levied this year if the Town does not commit to make firm that our very limited sewer expansion treatment capacity is locked in for eliminating existing problems in our existing neighborhoods first and not diverted to private developers, please attend Town Meeting Saturday and vote "YES" on Articles 11, 12 and 13 and vote your choice on funding structure via Article 14.

I am pleased to report Selectmen have reviewed and evaluated Sewer Commission Articles and voted to recommended all four favorably to the voters at Town Meeting.

In way of information, the timetable, as it has been since the Town's early 2004 schedule, is for the expanded sewer system to be operational by mid to late 2009. Money will not be spent on construction until mid-2007, thus the impact on Town taxes will be quite small, if any, till fiscal 2008. Even then, regardless of how the voters vote to structure the funding, the impact on taxes could range from close to nothing to quite modest as the recipients of the sewer service will be covering the major portion of the costs via betterments, which will be spread over 20 or more years.

The benefits achieved are a certain end to the coastal pollution for all citizens of Cohasset, amnesty from Title 5 for the homes scheduled to receive the sewer service, even if the home is sold, and a substantial increase in home value due to being connected to municipal sewer. As most know, the cost currently to replace a failed or obsolete septic system can range from $35,000 to $90,000.

Patron saints of April Fool

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I'm sure you remember Lyndon Johnson and Barry Goldwater. They ran for president in 1964. Johnson won. Ah, those were the days when Democrats were Democrats.

But I'll bet you don't remember Yetta Bronstein. She ran for president in 1964, too, on a platform that included a promise to issue a postage stamp of a nude Jane Fonda "to give a little pleasure for six cents to those who can't afford Playboy magazine."

When he came home, he parked in the space, picked up the wooden fire hydrant and put it in his trunk for use the next it was needed.

Yetta, who was identified as a Bronx housewife, was totally a figament of the fertile imagination of a musician-writer named Alan Abel but real enough to be played by Alan's wife, Jeanne, in radio and television interviews. For a while, anyway.

I bring up Alan and Yetta because April Fool's Day, the day we're supposed to play tricks on our friends, is just around the corner and if there is a patron saint of tricksters its Alan Abel or maybe Hugh Troy.

Alan's the guy who invented the Society for Indecency to Naked Animals (NINA) and even managed to book SINA's President G. Clifford Prout Jr. to a gig on the "Today" show where he railed against those who allowed their pets and livestock to go about unclothed.

He even created the KKK Symphony Orchestra "to foster a kinder, gentler image of the Ku Klux Klan," and fielded several genuine applications for jobs as well a bomb threat from a far left organization.

Hugh Troy's greatest triumph came when he and four friends appeared on Fifth Avenue in New York one morning in overalls, hung out "Men Working" signs and began tearing up the street like DPW workmen everywhere.

When five o'clock, the traditional quitting time arrived, they hung out their red lanterns like DPW workmen everywhere, and left, never to return.

Troy, an illustrator of children's books by trade, also bedeviled the New York Police Department.

He purchased a bench, identical to those the city had spread around Central Park. When he spotted a policeman coming, he and a friend picked up the bench and started off with it. The cop arrested them, of course.

At the station, Hugh produced a bill of sale showing that he was the rightful owner of the bench and red-faced police had to let him and his friend go.

Hugh had a trick that would go over big in Boston right now in view of the dispute between Mayor Menino and City Councilor Kelly over methods of saving parking spaces.

Troy had a wooden fire hydrant which he kept on the curb in front of his apartment house. When he came home, he parked in the space, picked up the wooden fire hydrant and put it in his trunk for use the next it was needed.

Hugh, who was 6-foot-7 or thereabouts, used to stash quarters on building ledges that only he could reach. While talking to a friend, he would suddenly reach up and pluck a coin off the ledge and pocket it. The friend would spend the rest of the day exploring ledges.

I guess April Fool's Day ain't what it used to be.

Demolition delay and large home review are back again this year

Zoning changes are on the table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

• Article seven will be the first in a string of zoning articles, and will reintroduce the town to the Demolition Delay Bylaw. The Demolition Delay bylaw was withdrawn at last year's Annual Town Meeting, but has undergone some changes and is back for another round. If approved, the bylaw would delay, but not prohibit, the tear down of historically significant buildings, allowing some time to consider whether the building can be restored and what, if any, alternatives to demolition are available. If after the six months has expired the owner of the building chooses to tear it down, there are no regulations which prevent that from happening.

The bylaw would apply specifically to all buildings which are listed on the National Register of Historic places, the Massachusetts State Register of Historic Places, and "HT" or town of Cohasset Heritage Trail houses, as well as buildings 100 years or older that have either architectural, cultural, economic, political, or historical significance. The bylaw has been changed from encompassing buildings 50 years or older to buildings 100 years or older from last year's version.

In addition, this year's article has been presented as a zoning bylaw rather than a non-zoning bylaw, which will allow the Building Inspector to enforce it by withholding demolition permits. The bylaw only applies when an owner expresses interest in tearing down a structure.

• Article eight is a citizens' petition which deals with earth removal, land clearing and land alteration. It is meant to help regulate what can be done during residential land development. If passed, it would replace the existing Earth Removal bylaw with a broader and more comprehensive protection against potentially adverse alterations of a lot. In addition to earth removal criteria, which currently exists, there would be regulations put in place to cover filling, grading, and ledge removal. The bylaw would only come into effect during construction on vacant lots or reconstruction of existing homes.

• Article nine is a citizens' petition which would amend the Large House Site Plan Review bylaw, passed by voters at last year's Annual Town Meeting, to make it a more substantive special permit process. The large house review is triggered when construction plans for a home exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet.

As the bylaw is currently written, the planning board takes plans for large homes through a public discussion and recommendation process, which allows abutters to voice their opinion, but the process is nonbinding. The proponents of this year's petition believe the original draft of the bylaw had more "teeth," but because that draft was altered shortly before Town

Audit shows no wrongdoing

Former employee won't face any Cohasset charges

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although former Administrative Assistant to the Town Manager Nicole N. Bartlett plead guilty to embezzling money from a previous employer, results of a forensic audit have revealed she did not continue the practice in Cohasset.

Two questionable instances were uncovered during the audit, conducted by Melanson Heath & Company, PC, including two suspicious manual payroll checks totaling $464. However, after further investigation, it has been determined Bartlett was not at fault for the discrepancies.

As a result of charges which surfaced Sept. 27, 2004 that Bartlett stole more than $200,000 from the Boston Children's Museum by writing and depositing unauthorized checks, auditors have been searching the town's records for any impropriety since October.

Bartlett resigned from her position the day the charges were made public by the U.S. Attorney's Office. Bartlett plead guilty before U.S. District Judge Rya Zobel Jan. 6 to nine counts of making, possessing, and uttering forged securities. Her sentencing was slated for Thursday, March 31, after the Mariner went to press.

Two manual checks which looked as if they could be suspicious have since been investigated and there has been no criminal activity found.

Two manual checks which looked as if they could be suspicious have since been investigated and there has been no criminal activity found. One check for $169.90 was issued to an employee who had stated they had complied with instructions from Bartlett to cash the check and return the cash to her. However, it seems the employee returned a money order to Bartlett, not cash, and there is currently a tracking process underway to find where the money order went.

In addition, there was some confusion regarding a check issued to a town employee for overtime work during Town Meeting. That issue has since been resolved and Bartlett was found not to be at fault.

Police Chief James Hussey said had the matters not been cleared up, given the nature of the federal charges Bartlett stands to face and the likelihood she will serve time in jail, as well as the small amount of money involved, it would not have been in the department's best interest to pursue the matter. Any charges brought forward by the Cohasset police would not have affected her federal case.

Bartlett, a Marshfield resident, was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad, and worked in Cohasset since May 12, 2003. Auditors went back in the town's books as far as May 1, 2003 and scoured records through Sept. 30, 2004.

More budget news, more often

Articles 16 and 17 are both citizens' petitions which ask for more detailed financial information from both the town and school department on a regular basis. Article 16 asks the town and school department to provide monthly budget updates, which proponents hope will enable the town as a whole to plan for the future, enabling it to detect budget overruns earlier. Proponents believe by having budget information readily available on an ongoing basis, it will allow the town the opportunity to approach problems in a proactive rather than a reactive manner.

To add to the efforts of article 16, article 17 would ask both the town and school department to provide the town with up to date reports on enterprise and revolving funds.

TOWN MEETING BRIEFS

Water rate increase floated

Article 18 is a Water Department article which will ask the town to approve increasing water rates to provide the $4,000,000 it needs to make upgrades to the water system, which will improve the quality of tap water and allow the department to fully comply with TTHM regulations. TTHMs, also known as Total Trihalomethanes are caused by a chemical reaction when chlorine, added to water as a disinfectant, interacts with organic matter present in water. Too many TTHMs can pose a health risk after longterm exposure. The Water Department exceeded the maximum contaminant level for TTHMs in 2004, and has been working hard to keep the levels low.

If approved, the article would increase water rates — the first increase since 1997 — and the changes would take place April 15, 2005. The department estimates the rate increase will cost the average homeowner who uses 60,000 gallons (or less) of water a year roughly $65 more per year, which equals about 18 cents per day.

With the funding the department would receive from the water rate increase, it would continue its mission of acquiring land around the watershed. One parcel, which along with other parcels was authorized at a previous Town Meeting, will be acquired for 50 cents on the dollar as a result of a $454,300 state grant. More information about Water Department initiatives can be found on its Web site at www.cohassetwater.org.

Light shed on energy committee

Article 20 would create a nine member Alternative Energy Committee to investigate sources of energy that may be used by the town. The committee would report back to the 2006 Annual Town Meeting. To date, residents Jim Shipsky of Doane Street, Benjamin Bixby of Sohier Street, Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street and Luciano Lauretti of Jerusalem Road have expressed interest in being a part of the committee alongside John Dunn of Schofield Road, who brought the idea forward to selectmen with Merle Brown. Brown said he will not participate in the committee.

Vernal pool protection

The Conservation Commission's vernal pool bylaw is also before Town Meeting Voters will be asked to approve an amendment to the Wetlands Protection Bylaw which would extend commission jurisdiction to within 100 feet of a vernal pool, to be consistent with existing commission regulations. Currently, the bylaw only gives the Conservation Commission jurisdiction to within 25 feet.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Koed holds receptions, his web site is a 'hit'

Fred Koed, candidate for reelection to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, this weekend will hold his final neighborhood receptions prior to the town election day of Saturday, April 9.

Gary believes that the best instrument for preserving the character of Cohasset is the Master Plan. "By dint of a huge amount of work our Master Plan committee put together a plan reflecting what the townspeople really want. Now let's implement it!" he says. "By 'character of Cohasset' I mean its natural and manmade environments, its size and its people." Debbie Shadd

Voters are invited to meet selectman candidate Debbie Shadd and discuss the issues at a reception to be held at the home of Catherine Davis and Don Trisler, 100 Pond Street #24, on Sunday, April 3 from 3-5 p.m.

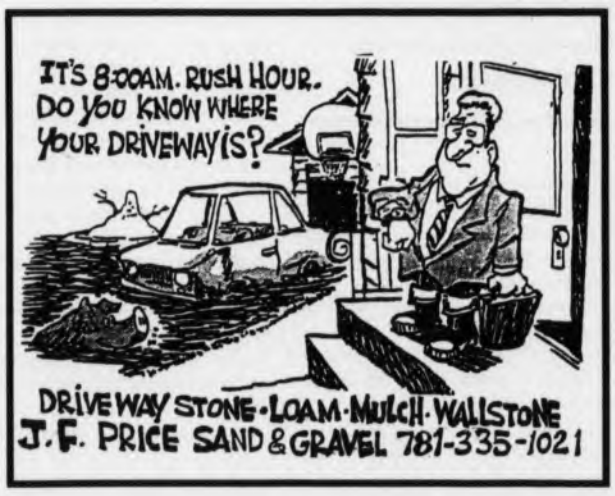
At a recent gathering, Debbie noted: "Cohasset should be proud of its excellent school system and the post-graduation success of its graduates. We should continue to support excellence in public education by working together to provide the resources our students need to be successful."

Shadd Steering Committee member Susan Turgiss will be coordinating volunteers for Debbie's campaign on Election Day. Please call Susan at 383-9145 if you would like to help with Election Day tasks.

Absentee ballots are now available

Absentee ballots for the annual Town Election on April 9 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 8, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only: absence from the town during the hours the polls is open; physical disability; religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.



A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 9 to be counted.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMEN

Does the town need to reestablish the personnel committee and/or hire a human resources professional? In other words, where does a Town Hall employee go with a problem if she or he doesn't feel comfortable bringing the issue up with his or her boss, the Town Manager?

SELECTMAN/ Debbie Shadd

The Personnel Committee was disbanded in 1997 after the Town Manager Act was adopted. Since that time the General By-Laws provide, in Article V, Section 2, that "The Personnel Committee shall consist of one person, the Town Manager." When a Town Hall employee has a grievance that cannot be resolved with his or her department head or supervisor, the By-Laws direct the employee to bring the grievance to the "Personnel Committee" (i.e. the Town Manager) to "hold a hearing thereon and render a written decision within ten (10) working days of such hearing." (Article XI, Section 8) The employee may then appeal the decision of the "Personnel Committee" (i.e. the Town Manager) to the Board of Selectmen.

This current grievance procedure has the potential to be at least extremely awkward for an employee whose supervisor is the Town Manager, or for other employees who work often with the Town Manager. In many cases, the potential awkwardness and fear of retaliation could discourage an employee from even beginning the grievance process. A valuable employee might choose to simply resign under these circumstances.

The type of Personnel Committee Cohasset had in the past is not necessary. Many of the tasks formerly handled by the Personnel Committee are handled by the Town Manager. In addition, many of our Town employees are members of unions, whose contract grievances were never handled by the Personnel Committee.

I understand the Town Manager Act Review Committee established by the Selectmen in June 2004 will be recommending grievance procedure changes. The Town might consider hiring a human resources professional to assist the Town in developing an appropriate grievance procedure and to conduct grievance hearings as needed. I support the concept of changing the grievance section of our by-law so that employees are not discouraged from pursuing legitimate grievances.

SELECTMAN/ Gary Vanderweil

In its day, the Personnel Committee provided a valuable service to Cohasset, being involved in salary administration and human resources. Today, with a five person board of selectman, as opposed to the earlier three person board, and with a full-time Town Manager, I think a Personnel Committee would be superfluous and a needless complication.

In terms of personnel issues and problems, with our existing structure, a town employee has many more options than does an employee of a company; so I see no need to change anything. For example, take the case of an employee in a sole proprietorship, who perceives he or she is being harassed by the proprietor. About the only route open to the employee in this case is to go outside the firm – for example to go to the Mass. Commission Against Discrimination or to a lawyer.

Contrast that situation to a town employee's: if the employee feels he or she is being harassed, there is a variety of avenues to pursue. The employee would normally go to right to the Town Manager. But if he or she is "uncomfortable" (to paraphrase the Mariner) talking to the Town Manager the employee can go to any selectman, or, for that matter, to any other elected town official. And of course, the employee has the same avenues open to him or her outside the town government structure as the employee of a private company would have. Thus, there is a multiplicity of available paths open to a town employee.

For this reason, I would not re-create the personal committee.

SELECTMAN/Fred Koed

The Personnel Committee formerly performed important functions in town government. I believe we should restore those functions, along with the Committee itself.

The Committee assisted the selectmen by recommending appropriate salaries for various positions, by conducting market comparisons for various pay grades, and by helping in actual contract negotiations. The Committee was comprised of seven members appointed by the so-called Troika, the appointing authority consisting of the chairs of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee, and the Town Moderator. It was an example of the great tradition in Cohasset of knowledgeable professionals serving on town boards in their areas of expertise. Typically, the Committee was made up of financial and human resource administrators from the private sector.

When I was elected to the Board of Selectmen in 1999, the Personnel Committee had essentially been dismissed previously by the then town manager. The town manager act does not specifically abolish the Committee, however — something that was overlooked as the first manager took his position in 1997.

The day-to-day nature of running the town hall makes it difficult for the town manager to remove all bias relating to subordinates. I believe the manager would be more effective if he had the Committee to work with. We also need to restore the personnel decision appeal function for town employees which was lost when the Committee was dismissed. The police discipline disaster alone proved this fact.

I do not believe we should hire a human resources professional at Town Hall at present. We cannot create new positions when our budgets are so tight.

I want to work to not only reestablish the personnel Committee, but to seriously look at further ways in which we can bring citizen volunteers back into appointed positions in town government.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Counting Osgood and renovations and additions to Deer Hill and the middle-high school, the town has $50 million invested in new or renovated school buildings, yet the perception out there is the buildings are just for the kids and are only open during the school year. Why type of programs could you propose to allow senior citizens and others to benefit from the school facilities?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Lee Jenkins

I have long encouraged our schools to be open for community programs. In my years on the Program Committee at the Community Center, we offered courses at the High School. After the renovations were completed, the schools were supposed to open their doors to include a larger use of the facilities.

The students should be allowed to use the school libraries and computer labs after school until at least 6 p.m. so that the town library computers can be kept available for use by the community.

In the evenings and during the summer several programs could be instituted, such as, college extension programs in languages, history, philosophy and science. Those residents interested in art, photography or shop could use those classrooms for formal courses or to pursue those activities at their own pace.

The health club is available for public use, and there is already a senior walking program indoors during inclement weather. Adult basketball, volleyball or badminton teams could use also the gym.

Since the facilities are air conditioned, they would lend a pleasant reprieve on sultry summer evenings for small musical presentations in the lounge outside the high school gym.

The Osgood, especially, and the Deer Hill are geared for children but there are possibilities for the use of the Deer Hill Gym. Being a more intimate facility than the High School, it might avail itself to any number of exercise programs, performances or rehearsals.

The auditorium at the high school should be used for more community activities. It would be perfect for a movie/lecture series.

There are many groups in the community that have needs that can be met by the school facilities and the school committee should encourage innovative ways to maximize the potential of our investment.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 1-YEAR/Pam Wilson

Under the current guidelines, the Cohasset Public Schools are accessible to all groups that are interested in using them if established procedures are followed. This was one of the many value added benefits to the community that came from building our new schools. If there is a perception that the schools are not available for use to all groups, then as a School Committee member, my suggestion would be, once again, that we must better communicate our policies to the community.

The Cohasset Public Schools have a Facilities Use program in place, which is implemented by the town of Cohasset, Facilities Operations. This offers authorization for the use of the facilities of any of its public buildings. Any organization, within the community, or from a surrounding town, may fill out the authorization form, and request to use the public school buildings after school hours. Currently, there are a great number of organizations that are using the facilities. Teaching professionals, support groups, civic, athletic and religious organizations are all participating in the use of these new facilities after-school hours and throughout the summer. The town has a facilities use fee for non-residents as well as residents. This covers the utilities costs as well as the maintenance fees.

With expanded communication, senior citizens, and others could be taking advantage of this opportunity, as well. They can organize bridge classes, exercise, dancing, educational programs, speakers, parties, and other programs that may be of interest to them. A communications bulletin board could be set up at the Council on Elder Affairs, as well as at the library. The internet is also a perfect tool for this communication. The fact that confusion surrounds our facilities use program, leads me to believe that we are in need of effective communication in Cohasset.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE 3-YEAR/Alfred Slanetz

The school facilities should be available for community programs which are consistent with the school's educational mission and are economically self sufficient or profitable to the school.

First, evening courses could be offered with the facilities being used as the satellite campus of major universities. Such a program would provide courses in a convenient location for all of our residents and could be used to broaden the high school's offerings of senior year electives. Because many of our residents have a wealth of experience, such classes would create an opportunity for intergenerational learning. We could use the existing broadband connection to broadcast the lecture from the university or we could teach it locally. In fact, many of our residents teach such courses already and would welcome the opportunity to teach locally rather than going to Boston.

Second, the school could be developed as a center for the arts and cultural events. By collaborating with museums, theaters, dance groups, orchestras and cultural groups, exhibits and events could be arranged which would both enrich the curriculum in the school and the life in the community. Student produced visual art, performances, poetry readings and international festivals could form the core of such a program. Outside speakers, performances and events would build on this core. The entire community could benefit from such a center.

While the buildings were designed as a school, they are available for community activities at cost. The schools are currently used in the summers and on the weekends for sports and other events and are used in the evenings for meetings. The two new programs proposed above could significantly enhance both the lives of the broader Cohasset Community and the educational program of the Cohasset Schools.

Senior Sam Steele (17) will be a solid two-way player for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team this season.

No re-laxing on their laurels

Boys lacrosse want another deep run in the touranment

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team accomplished a lot more than many had expected of them last season.

Last year was thought to be a rebuilding one, with a new coach coming in and several key players from the '03 state semifinalist team (18-2) having been lost to graduation.

The '04 edition wound up surprising, however, by going just as far as their predecessors. After a 9-7 regular season, the boys won two tournament games in convincing style before being ousted in the semifinals by Dover-Sherborn.

The team is hoping for more success this season, and with talent at every position, the goal is a reasonable one.

Leading the way are three senior co-captains, one at each position on the field (except goalie): attack Jake Previte, midfielder Joe Durkin and defender Casey Coleman.

Previte was the team's leading scorer with 87 points (44 goals, 43 assists) last year. Coleman is another returning starter, and head coach Stu Curran praised Durkin as "a great leader and a good athlete."

The coach his defense may be the strength of the team. Joining Coleman are classmates Crandon Leahy and Leo Clougherty, and sophomore Jeff Brown. Leahy (football and hockey) and Clougherty (football) are both tough athletes who bring plenty of experience in physically demanding sports. At 6-foot-3 and 200 pounds, Leahy brings a big, imposing frame to the field.

The best of the bunch may be Brown, a tremendous athlete who was an honorable mention for the Pilgrim Conference All-Star team as a freshman in 2004.

"Jeff may have the best potential of any of our players," Curran says. "He could be playing in a major Division 1 program in college. He could really be something special."

That defense will be playing in front of a goaltending tandem of senior Chris Sims and junior Eric Libby. Sims was set to get the start yesterday against defending Div. 2 state champion Duxbury, but both will see time in net during the year.

"Sims has been showing a little better at practice the last couple days, but both are working real hard everyday," said Curran. "It could be a situation where the hot goalie that particular week will get the start."

There is some depth in the midfield position, with Durkin, seniors Sam Steele, Matt Casey, Kevin Dinsmore and junior Trevor Brady likely to get the most playing time. At the end of last season, Curran called Steele "probably our most polished returning midfielder." The senior is a solid two-way player.

The coach is also excited about the aggressive style of play he is expecting to see from Casey and Dinsmore, part of an overall tenacious defensive scheme.

"I definitely think we're not going to give up a lot of shots," Curran said. "Our defense is athletic and very physical. They're all very mobile and fast. They may not be physically overpowering, but they're athletic with pretty good size.

Colin Regan, Jake Kovac and Dan Trendowicz also figure in the midfield mix.

As for the attack, the likely starters alongside Previtt are junior Aidan Buick and senior John Grimm. Buick was in the team's top three in scoring last year, and Curran is looking for Grimm to have a big bounce-back season after missing most of last year with a leg injury.

Sophomore Michael Bunstein will also get his share of playing time up front for the Skippers.

One thing that has impressed Curran thus far is the clear results of the improvement many of his players made over the offseason, particularly in a Sunday indoor lacrosse league.

"The commitment of this through the offseason has been significant," he said. "They've played together as a unit, and it shows."

Youth movement for CHS girls tennis

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Amid a couple familiar faces will be a host of relatively new ones for Cohasset girls tennis.

Two things are for sure: senior co-captains Elizabeth Stone and Rachel Garber are penciled in at first singles and first doubles, respectively.

Stone should once again be a virtually automatic point for Cohasset in each match. As a junior last year, she went undefeated in team match play, not even losing a single set. She is also a top contender for the sectional and state individuals tournament.

Garber played some singles last season, but wound up at doubles down the stretch and in the postseason and fared well.

Who will be playing alongside Garber? Who will be playing the other two singles spots and number two doubles? There are 21 underclassmen candidates, led by a dozen juniors who are all going to get a chance to show what they can do.

"All of my juniors will see a lot of playing time," said head coach Gigi Meehan. "We put together a 20-match schedule because we wanted to make sure everyone got some experience and some match toughness. You can hit all the balls you want in practice, but come tournament time, it doesn't mean anything without match experience.

"The focus of our program is to get as many people as match-tough as we can so we're ready for the tournament."

The junior with the most experience from last year is Susan Curry, who played a lot of number-three singles during the first half of the season. Meehan says Emilie Shea has looked sharp in practice so far.

Bigger and better things

Boys tennis hopes to build on success of '04

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With the talent returning from last year's tournament team, Cohasset boys tennis is hoping for an even better 2005 campaign.

The Skippers return all three singles players and their top doubles team from a squad that won 12 matches last season before falling to Seekonk in the state tournament.

Junior Nils Sceery starts the season (which was scheduled to kick off yesterday at Cape Cod Academy) at number-one singles. He went 14-4 in his matches last season, and head coach Kent Parrot says Sceery has been in good form in the preseason.

"He had a really good winter season, and it's showing," Parrot said. "He put in a lot of hard work in the winter. He's played in some USTA tourneys, and I think that's going to show this season."

Right behind Sceery at number-two singles is classmate Danny Sullivan. Both were league all-stars last season. Sullivan played at the top spot last year, and is expected to be a very strong number-two guy this year.

Rounding out the singles rotation at the beginning of the year is sophomore Blain Morin, who played third singles in '04 and figures to do the same this year.

FILE PHOTO

After going 14-4 in individual matches last year, junior Nils Sceery is penciled in at the number-one singles position.

Cohasset also returns a doubles team with experience playing together: senior captain Brendan Michaud and junior Chris Pescatore.

"They have some experience together, so they are going to be a pretty good team this year," Parrot said.

The second doubles team against CCA was scheduled to be sophomores Chris Donze and Owen Kyle. Parrot says there are five freshmen who will also be vying for doubles spots.

The young newcomers are the top sign of the growth of the program, something that Parrot is excited to see.

"We have a fun lineup this year, and we've gone from a depth chart of seven kids to 22," he said. "It's really exciting to see the number of kids getting on the court."

As for team goals this year, number one is to improve on last year's 12-8 record. Parrot also has a loftier goal in mind: topping powerhouse Norwell for the South Shore League title.

"It's going to be very interesting," Parrot said of the league race. "[Norwell coach] Jay Swartz has a great program going over there. We're looking at that as a target."

Moving on up?

CHS softball aiming for a winning season

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The wait is over.

The snow has melted off Freedom field. This weekend we turn our clocks forward. And varsity softball coach Deb Bostwick believes the time has arrived for her Cohasset team to make a big move upward in the South Shore League.

"Things look good. We have a pretty well-rounded team." Bostwick observed after completing several pre-season indoor practices in the Sullivan Gym.

That's good news after coming off a 5-13 record last season. Yes, the 2004 graduation took its toll on the roster. Gone are shortstop Danielle Pinkus, second baseman Rachael Doyle, third baseman Caitlin Gontarz and outfielder Caitlin Condon.

Yet, Coach Bostwick remains upbeat about the 2005 team potential. When asked where she will look for her hitting consistency and power, the veteran manager pointed to Casey Anderson, Erin Liddel, Katie James, Christina Pinkus, and Laura Campadelli.

In the field, Bostwick will count on Melissa Crowley-Buck, Anderson, Anna Haggerty, Alida Tanghlerini, Liddel, James, and Buckley.

Her pitching rotation will include right-handers Katie James, Virginia Spofford and Emily Savage, as well as lefty Christina Pinkus.

For Bostwick, 2005 represents her fourth season at the helm of the Lady Skippers. She asked seniors Cecelia Chapman and Casey Anderson along with junior Erin Liddel to captain the squad.

Bostwick brings to the program a depth of experience and a contagious enthusiasm about the game. She completed a highly successful high school career at Marshfield High.

In her sophomore year at Keene State College, sports officials named Bostwick the left field MVP for the state of New Hampshire. She continues to play today on a Braintree team that has won its league championship for ten years running.

When asked what she likes about softball, Bostwick's response came quickly and with a bundle of positive energy.

"What more can you ask for? The thrill of hitting, playing in the sunshine, working as a team, anticipating where the ball might go - and winning!"

In their daily practices, Bostwick has remained focused upon improving throwing power and accuracy. The players have utilized a tee to put some fire into their swings.

"We have worked many hours on the game fundamentals," said Crowley-Buck, a junior. "This team seems very promising. We have gone through our rebuilding years. Now we're ready to step it up."

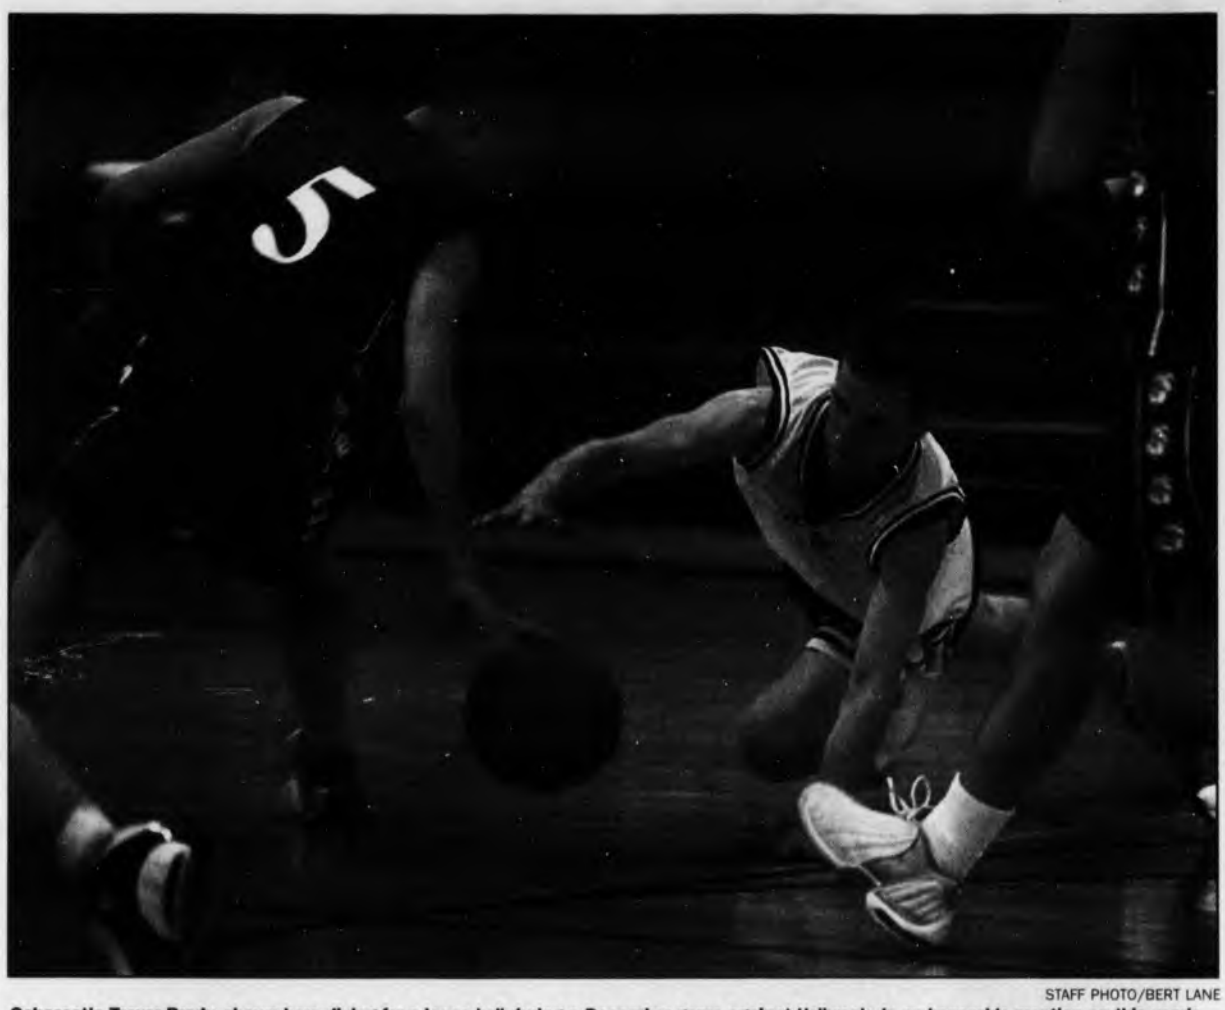
All-Scholastic boys basketball team

Cohasset's Trevor Brady named as an honorable mention



After losing all five starters from last year's team, the Cohasset boys hoops squad needed junior co-captain Trevor Brady to step up in more ways than one this season.

He did just that, leading the team in scoring at over 13 points and providing leadership to a young, inexperienced team.

The Mariner has recognized these achievements and listed Brady among the Honorable Mentions for our 2005 boys basketball All-Scholastic team.

Brady and the rest of the young men you see listed below as honorable mentions received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 13, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top male basketball players in Marinerland for this honor:

STAFF PHOTO/BERT LANE

Cohasset's Trevor Brady, shown here diving for a loose ball during a December game against Holbrook, is an honorable mention on this year's Mariner All-Scholastic boys basketball team.

Bill Carey - Senior (Capt.) Guard - Abington

No question here…There wasn't much this talented senior guard didn't accomplish this season…The South Shore League Player of the Year, led his Green Wave squad to the finals of the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney, where the squad dropped a heartbreaking double-OT decision to eventual champs, Dedham…Abington finished with a 20-3 record…Champs of the SSL at 11-1, Carey also became the first AHS boys hoop player to reach the 1,000-point plateau…He did it in the first round of the team's own Green Wave Invitational Tourney, scoring 30 points in a win over Hanover…The SSL All-star finished his career with 1,109, becoming the school's all-time leading scorer…Led the league in scoring with an average 22.6 ppg…Went on a scoring tear in the postseason tourney, putting up totals of 27, 22, and 29 points in three games…Carey plans to continue his basketball career in college.

Dan Hoffman - Senior (Capt.) Center - Abington

With teammate Carey ruling the perimeter, Hoffman did the same inside the paint for the South Shore League Champions (11-1)…This talented center and captain was one of the most well-rounded players on the team, racking up a slew of stats this winter via his outstanding rebounding ability and clutch short-range jumper…Hoffman finished the regular season averaging 11 points and nine boards per game…His post play was sensational in the postseason tourney, where Abington (20-3) reached the Div. 3 South Sectional semifinals…There, Hoffman averaged seven points, 12 boards, and two blocked-shots in three tourney games…The SSL All-star's best game in the Div. 3 South came in the quarterfinals against Cardinal Spellman, against whom he tallied eight points, 10 boards, and two blocks.

Jon Conway - Senior Forward - Abington

Was perhaps the most stabilizing force on the Green Wave squad, Conway was the second leading scorer on the Green Wave squad…In 20 regular season games, Conway averaged 14.2 ppg, placing him sixth overall in the South Shore League…Had a tendency to pick up the pace in big games, particularly in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney…There, in a quarterfinal matchup with Cardinal Spellman, Conway scored six quick points in the second half to spark a big Green Wave run…He finished with 13 second half points in a 63-49 victory…The SSL All-star had the ability to put up points via three-pointers, off drives, of off an offensive board…He plans to attend college in the fall.

Matt Lynch - Senior (Capt.) Guard - Braintree

Called by his coach one of the best players on the South Shore, and deservedly so…A Bay State Conference first team All-Star this season…A three-year varsity player, Lynch led the team in scoring with over 16 points per game…Also led the Wamps in assists and steals…May have been a streaky shooter at times, but the ball was unquestionably going to be in his hands at the end of the game, and he made some big shots when it counted…Was the leader of Braintree's pressure defense, and generally drew the assignment of guarding the opposing team's best perimeter scorer…Also a captain of the boys lacrosse team this season, and came out for the golf team in the fall…Braintree head coach Bob Crook: "I believe he is one of the top players in our area. Everything it takes to be a good player, he has it. He's as good as anyone on the South Shore."

Pat McGrail - Senior Forward - Braintree

Pat McGrail

A Bay State Conference first team All-Star … A strong, physical 6-foot-3 presence in the paint that can jump out of the building… Demonstrated that leaping ability by converting an alley oop dunk against Cardinal Spellman in the championship game of the Massasoit Hall of Fame Classic, a game won by the Wamps…Second on the team in scoring at over 11 points per game…Led the team in rebounding and blocked shots…An All-State football player in the fall, as he caught 50 passes on the gridiron for the Wamps…Simply put, a remarkable athlete…Braintree head coach Bob Crook: "Pat is one of the most gifted athletes I've ever coached. He can guard the 6-6 or 6-7 guys inside, and the 5-10 guy outside. He's able to do that because he is so quick and athletic. He and Matt could have scored more, but they certainly sacrificed for the good of the team."

Ryan Harrington - Senior Center - Hanover

Playing in the shadows of 1,000-point scorer last season, Harrington had his chance to shine this year…The Patriot League All-star was the go-to player on the Indians' team, leading the squad with an average 17 points and eight rebounds per game…The 6-foot, 2-inch center's tough play inside the paint led the team to an 11-9 regular season in which the squad won their own Amaral Tourney and qualified for postseason play in the Div. 3 South Sectional…The team went 5-3 in the Patriot League West Div., splitting games with eventual champ Randolph during the year. Hanover coach Mark Malloy: "Ryan had a solid season for us and as a player we could always depend on."

Neil Creahan - Junior (Capt.) Forward - Hingham

Was a among the leading scorers on the Harbormen team this season and helped them get over the hump of qualifying for postseason play for the first time in several seasons…Hingham finished up the regular season at 13-7 and went 6-2 in the Patriot League East, finishing second in the final standings to only Duxbury and went 10-3 overall in the PL…Creahan's play inside the paint helped the Harbormen overcome a tough 1-3 start to go on a seven-game win streak before running into PL West champs Randolph and the Green Dragons…The PL All-star helped the Harbormen rebound with a double-digit effort in a lashing of Silver Lake (52-34)…Had a tough draw in the first round of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney and fell to the eventual South Champs Catholic Memorial…Just a junior, Creahan will return to the court next season.

James Long - Center Freshman - Norwell

James Long

Emerged as one of the top freshmen on the South Shore… A South Shore League All-Star, an honor that should be earned a few more times before his Clipper career comes to an end…Wound up as the go-to guy for a team that made the state tournament and won a game there, a rarity for a ninth-grader…Averaged a double-double, and was almost a shoo-in for that accomplishment down the stretch…May have saved his best for last, notching 18 points and 14 rebounds in the postseason-clinching win over Duxbury on the last game of the year…Plays AAU for the Bay State Magic…Also played freshman football this year, playing defensive tackle and guard…Uses his strong, wide 6-foot-3 frame to carve out space in the paint for his trademark baby hook…If he develops his right hand, watch out…Norwell head coach John Willis: "We're not in the tournament if it wasn't for James Long. He produced when it mattered. He is going to be some kind of leader and player when it's all said and done."

Billy Arria - Guard/Forward Junior - Norwell

Did everything asked of him by the Norwell coaching staff, and that included many things…Need a basket in the paint? Need someone to step in and play the point? He did it all…Stepped full-time into the point guard role at the halfway point of the season and brought a semblance of control to the Norwell offense…A South Shore League All-Star this season…Scored 15 points, all in the second half, of the Clippers' tournament preliminary round win over Westwood…Played through bad illness the last three weeks of the year, although you'd never know it by just watching him…Had 16 points and nine assists in team's 73-70 victory at Abington on Feb. 5, including a couple clutch free throws to put it away…Plays outside linebacker and tight end for the football team, pitcher and center fielder for the baseball team…Has played AAU ball since the 6th grade, and currently plays for the Bay State Magic…Part of a very talented nucleus coming back to the hoops team next season…Norwell head coach John Willis: "Billy really stepped up as a leader as the year progressed. I think he showed in that Westwood game how good a player he is in the post. If we can get him down there more often next year, it's going to be great to watch."

Adam Dacey - Senior Guard - Pembroke

In the beginning there was Adam … The heart and soul of a first-year Titans squad that twice beat Silver Lake Regional, the school from which Pembroke withdrew last summer … Went from Old Colony League all-star to Patriot League all-star as easily as someone changes socks … Averaged 16.4 points, five assists and three steals per game … His value was evident not only by leading the young Titans to eight wins but for the void in leadership he left at Silver Lake … A tough, emotional player who played as hard as anybody during clutch time….Coach Brendan Mosher: "When it was crunch time he wanted the ball in his hands."

Yogi Hologitas - Junior Guard - Rockland

After seeing minimal playing time on Rockland's state championship team last year, Hologitas earned a prime-time role this season…A speedy and strong forward/guard, Hologitas brought quickness, athleticism, and skill to the rebuilding Bulldogs squad and nearly led them to a Patriot League West Div. title…Was a solid shooter and very strong rebounder for Rockland, which went 12-7 in the regular season, earning a berth to the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney…Led by Hologitas, the team was locked in a late-season race with Randolph for the West title and the games were two of the most exciting of the season…In the end, the Bulldogs fell just short in a pair of slim losses (53-51, 65-62)…At 6-2, Hologitas and crew finished second in the final standings…Just a junior, Hologitas will return to the Bulldog squad next year.

Greg Kelleher - Center Senior - Scituate

Made the transition from reserve on an experienced team as a junior to starter on a young team this season, and was a Patriot League All-Star…Averaged over 13 points and 10 boards per game for the Sailors this year…Did most of his scoring in the post and off of drives, constantly drawing double-teams from opponents…Played one of the finest games of his career in a tough five-point loss at Hull on Jan. 19, scoring a game-high 22 points and pulling down 12 rebounds…Quarterbacked the SHS football team in the fall as a co-captain, and will be playing baseball this spring…Effort on the court was never in question…Scituate head coach Matt Poirier: "Greg had a very good year for us this year. He played hard and was very good with the younger kids."

Josh Solari - Junior Guard - Silver Lake

The whole is greater than the sum of its parts … Doesn't appear particularly quick or strong, but you look up and suddenly he's dropped 20 on you …Overcame a slow start due to illness to establish himself as one of the best forwards in the Patriot League …Averaged almost 16 points a game on wide array of moves…Complements his slashing game with the ability to step beyond the 3-point arc…Coach Steve Fernandez: "We were a totally different team when he wasn't in the lineup."

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Mite B

The number one ranked and top seeded Coastal STARS went into the final game of the regular season with nothing on the line. Well, with the way they played you would have thought they were fighting for a playoff spot. Taking on a feisty Taunton team in a hostile Taunton building, the STARS set the tone early. At 12:09 of the first period, "Big Cat" Matt Doyle received a pass from Patrick Graham in the right slot and Doyle fired his signature wrist shot-- top shelf! Next up, Michael Lund showed he can play forward as well as goalie after receiving a text book pass from Declan Leahy - Lund blasted a shot from the top of the crease and found a "Dave Letterman" gap, stick side! With two minutes to play in the first period, Robert Reidy threaded a laser pass to a streaking (Prime Time) Brendan Evitts who sent a blistering shot - top shelf!

At the start of the second frame, the STARS came out flat and if not for the outstanding goal tending efforts from Kal Maier this would have been a close contest.

On a side note, Maier, just a sophomore this year is one shut out shy of tying Ken Dryden's school record (13). The 3 time All American who in 1967 led Cornell to the first of its two national championships, went on to win 6 Stanley cup titles. Yes, that Ken Dryden. Back to the game...@ 10:05 Sam Rice sent a picturesque pass to a "Rocket" called Curtis Golden. Golden took a page out of Wayne Gretzky's play book and left the crowd in awe when he put two Taunton defenders into a "flat spin" and blasted a slap shot glove side! Defensive partners Declan Leahy and Jack Evitts played tremendous two way hockey and defused any offensive threats to end the second period.

The 3rd period started out like the first, all STARS. At 11:13 Jeffrey Powers muscled the puck out of his own end, skated coast to coast and fed a crisp pass to Tucker Ambrose on the left slot. Ambrose then sent a missile to the back of the net. With 2:09 to play in the contest, the icing on the cake was a lead pass from Bryan Bowman to Brendan Evitts. Evitts showed why he's a leading scorer in the league when he burned 3 opposing players and backhanded the final goal of the contest making the score to end the game, 6-2. Michael Lund and Declan Leahy were the recipients of the coach's game pucks.

Squirt C2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 skated to a 5-0 shut out of the W/H/K C-3 last week at Hobomock Arena.

The game started off with a bang early when Nate Morse scored the first goal for the Coastal Stars. The Stars followed this up with 3 second period goals by Jake Timcoe, Tim Cavanaro and Jack Kuppens with assists from Nate Morse and Adam Bell.

The game continued with W/H/K having numerous chances to score on Alec Hurd, the Stars' goalie, to no avail. The Defense played by Chris Bjorkman, Jake Denton, Adam Jackson and Coleman Hernon held up under 3 power plays by W/H/K .

Tim Cavanaro scored his second goal of the game in the third period , which made his Mom happy since she hadn't seen any of his previous goals this season. Ethan Maher, improving with each game, had 2 great opportunities to score but unselfishly settled for an assist. Mick Barry also contributed to the outcome of the game with his hard shooting and relentless back checking. Brendon Queenan played a strong game keeping W/H/K looking at his back most of the time and throwing them off balance during the power plays.

The only thing missed by Alec Hurd was Nick Mulrey at home with the flu. Get well soon Nick!

On to the playoffs for The Stars C-2 next weekend at Rockland Arena.

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 hockey team split a two game set this weekend losing a close game to the Seahawks on Friday afternoon 2-0 and then beating a strong Bridgewater Brewins team 3-1 on Saturday setting up a championship rematch against the Seahawks next Saturday at Hobomock Arena.

The Stars and Seahawks skated hard on Friday afternoon. The first period was marked by good defensive hockey by both teams as well as some solid goal tending. The Stars had their first good scoring chance midway through the period when Kyle Bowman took the puck from the red line and skated passed the Seahawks defenders only to be denied by a diving saving by the Seahawks goal tender. Chris Phillips made several good saves during the period while Jack McNeil and Connor Lemieux displayed some solid back checking from their forward positions.

The Seahawks scored their first goal of the game in the second period as the Stars had trouble getting the puck out of their own zone. Chris Phillips made a nice chest save of a Seahawks wrist shot but was beat on the rebound when the puck came right back to the Seahawks forward following the play. The Stars got solid play during the period from the line of Andrew Kuppens, Tucker Antico, Seamus Ryan, Harrison Sheldon, and Matty Johnson. The line moved the puck well keeping the play in the Seahawks zone but was unable to get the Stars on the board.

After going down 2-0 at the three minute mark of the third period, the Stars tried to take the action to the Seahawks. Shaelyn Tobin, Robert Bothwell, Mats Nelson, and Gunnar Mckenzie displayed solid play at the blue line keeping the puck in the Seahawks zone for much of the period while Cole Mckenzie, Connor Lemieux, and Jack McNeil had two good scoring chances in the final frame only to be denied by some great goaltending. With two minutes to play, Colby Comeau, Derek Benson, Kyle Bowman, Mats Nelson, and Gunnar Mckenzie moved the puck well and had several breakaway scoring chances but in the end the Seahawks goaltending was to strong to overcome.

On Saturday against Bridgewater, the Stars gave up an early goal in the first period but never lost faith coming from behind to beat the Brewins 3-1. The Stars got strong defensive play throughout the game from the line of Tucker Antico, Seamus Ryan, Harrison Sheldon, Jack McNeil, and Matty Johnson. The line was scrappy throughout not allowing a single shot on goal in support of Goalie Chris Phillips.

The Stars tied the game at one mid way through the second period when Paul Parker took the puck from his own blue line and fed a rushing Russell Santos who beat the Brewin's goalie to the short side. The Stars kept offensive pressure on the Brewins throughout the period with both Derek Benson and Colby Comeau having good scoring bids. Matty Johnson, Andrew Kuppens, and Shaelyn Tobin played stellar defense during the period keeping the puck in the Brewin's zone with solid point play.

The Stars took the lead 3 minutes into the final frame when Paul Parker took the puck from his own blue line, raced past the Brewin's defense, and lifted the puck over a diving goaltender to make the score 2-1. Colby Comeau added an insurance goal later in the period when he took a feed from Mats Nelson and beat the net minder to the five hole. The Stars then turned it over to its defense. Goalie Chris Phillips was just a rock at the end making several great saves and not allowing any second chance shots.

With two minutes left to play, the Brewins gave one final push, pulling their goalie and skating six on five. Derek Benson, Colby Comeau Kyle Bowman, Mats Nelson, and Gunnar Mckenzie were up to the challenge getting after every loose puck and keeping the Brewins from getting any decent scoring chances on Chris Phillips.

Mite A

The Coastal Star Mite A's traveled to Bridgewater this past Saturday for their last game of the regular season. This weeks opponent was the South Shore Seahawks, the only undefeated team in the South Shore Conference and the only team the Stars had lost to during conference play this year.

Back in September the Mite A's lost to a tough Seahawks team by a score of 3-2. Both teams came into this game with a reason to win; the Seahawks wanted to end their season undefeated, the Stars wanted to defeat the only team that had beaten them. The first period showed off the offensive strength of both teams. Scoring started early when Defensemen Garrett Leahy shot one from the post that got by the Seahawks goalie just one minute into the first period. That lead was short lived as the Seahawks slipped one past Goalie Jeff Nagle just 21 seconds later. Center Pat Holway put the Stars back up with a wrap around goal and Colin MacDonald put the Stars up by two with a shot through the five hole. The Seahawks answered with two of their own to keep the game within one.

With only 2:43 left in the first period, Pat Holway scored his second goal by knocking in a rebound off of Sam Topham's shot on net. Tommy O'Brien followed up less than a minute later with his own rebound of a Colin MacDonald shot. The Stars led the game 6-3 going into the second period. Both teams defensives stepped up their game during the second and third periods.

Jeremy Duchini, Charley Michalowski, Charlie Blackington and Garrett Leahy kept the pressure on the Seahawks throughout the remainder of the game while Jeff Nagle in goal only let one more past him late in the second period. The Stars were also only able to get one more past the Seahawks goalie during the second period when Tommy O'Brien skated in from center ice and lifted one over the goalie's glove. During the third period, outstanding play by the Seahawks goalie was able to stop the pressure put on him by David Cataldo, Brandon Winn, Brendan Crane, Kenny Parnell and Martin Buckley. Colin MacDonald was able to flip one over the goalie with 4:21 left in the game. Sam Topham, back on defense, skated one up from center ice and fired the puck up and over the goalie's glove for the last goal of the game.

The Stars won this rematch by a score of 8-4. The South Shore Conference playoffs begin next weekend in Bridgewater. There is a very strong chance that these two teams will meet again to vie for the SSC Championship.

Youth movement for CHS girls tennis

FROM GIRLS TENNIS, PAGE 17

Other juniors in the rotation include the Muir twins (Carrie and Christie), Remy Lee, Katherine Whoriskey, Whitney Condon, Devin Smith, Katie Bolger, Kate McBride and Michelle Lemair.

Another junior is Chelsea Grossman, who surely would have been a regular at second singles had it not been for her injury incurred in a car accident earlier in the winter. Whether or not she will play tennis at any point this spring is up in the air.

Meehan says, however, Grossman has been at every practice and serves as an inspiration to the team.

"She is such a competitor, and she's so positive; just having her there makes a difference for the younger kids," said the coach.

And there are a number of younger kids, as three sophomores and six freshmen came out for the team this year. A good number of them are also likely to see their share of matches.

The team has a lot to live up to: the girls followed a state championship in 2003 with a sectional title and 19-2 overall record last year. Meehan says the depth of the team bodes well for continued success this season.

"I feel like we have the strongest all-around group we've ever had, from the standpoint that everyone on this team can play," she said.

The girls will find out quickly how good they are at the beginning of the year, as they travel to Hingham on Monday. Match time is scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

Moving on up?

FROM SOFTBALL, PAGE 17

Liddel voiced admiration for her coach.

"She prepares us mentally for every game," she said. "Whether we're playing the first- or last-place team, she tells us that this is our game to win. She really gives us determination."

Determination will prove a necessity. The Skippers face many of the toughest teams early in the season. Cohasset faces South Shore Christian Academy at home on April 4, followed by Mashpee, defending South Shore League champion Abington, Carver, and Harwich.

Along with the standard SSL teams, Cohasset will go head-to-head with Holbrook, Nantucket, and Sacred Heart.
